$3,000,000 Offered for W. & A. Terminals

C. E. JAMES BIDS FOR PROPERTIES IN CHATTANOOGA

JAMES URGES SPECIAL LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Consent of Lessees of Property Would Have To Be Obtained Before Sale Could Be Made.

Charles E. James, owner of the Tennessee, Alabama & Georgia railroad, and a leading capitalist in Tennessee, has sent a letter to Governor Clifford Walker offering the state of Georgia $3,000,000 for properties in Chattanooga, now in use by the Western & Atlantic, a Georgia-owned railroad.

Mr. James in his letter stresses the importance of his offer and urges the governor to call an extra session of the Georgia legislature to pass upon the bid.

Governor Walker was in Monroe Saturday to attend the funeral of his father today and could not be reached for a statement.

Property Included.

The proposal of the Tennessee financier covers purchase of property, bounded on the west by the Union depot, extending south two blocks, then extending in a curved line to the intersection of Market street at the Western & Atlantic railroad crossing, from thence north on Market to Ninth, and south to the west side of Broad street.

The proposal is of importance to Chattanooga in that Mr. James has announced that if his bid is accepted he will give the city the right to extend Eleventh street. It is claimed in Chattanooga that acceptance of the offer would remove the obstacle which has prevented extension of Broad street and opening up of a new business section.

Say Offer Is Small.

Georgia authorities Saturday night were of the opinion that the offer made for the property in Chattanooga is far from an attractive one.

It is pointed out that the state is now receiving from the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, lessee of this property, approximately $900,000 a year, which would be the same as interest at 6 per cent on a valuation of $15,000,000.

Sale Subject to Lease.

C. Murphy Chandler, who was chairman of the W. & A. commission of the state at the time the present lease of the property to the N. C. & St. L. was made, pointed out that any sale made by the state would have to be subject to the lease which still has a term of 45 years to run. The lease expires on December 27, 1933.

Under the terms of the lease the railroad pays about $600,000 a year for the use of the property which forms some of the most valuable real estate in the city of Chattanooga. It is thought probable that if the Chattanooga interests are seriously considered.

OPPORTUNITY'S KNOCK

Achievement

Doing what anyone can do is no claim to achievement. Doing what you can easily do is little more, but it is the only test.

The spirit that won't say "can't" is more important than most of the ability men possess. All good work is a fight against odds, and the man with determination is the one who makes his mark.

The best that anyone can do is a far goal, but it is the surest one to follow. Going the limit is the only true self-expression.

PAUL HYMEL DIES AT HOUR HE SET IN HIS PROPHECY

New Orleans, December 6.—A prediction of death was fulfilled yesterday afternoon when Paul Hymel, carpenter and contractor, died on the day and hour he had predicted, it became known today.

Hymel, suffering aneurism of the heart for two years, a week ago told relatives and friends that he would expire at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. When a business associate called to see him Thursday he said he would return the next day.

"You'll see me all right, but I won't see you," was the uncanny prophecy. A few minutes before the clock hands reached half-past three, Hymel told those near him that the end had come and began to smother to death. He was dead at 3:30.

BORAH UNWILLING TO PLACE COURT BEFORE FARM AID

Anxious, However, To Bring It Before Senate After Disposing of Agricultural and Money Bills.

Washington, December 6.—While anxious to bring the world court proposal before the senate, Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, declared today that he was unwilling to put discussion of that long pending issue ahead of farm relief legislation.

In the first formal statement issued since his elevation to the post held by the late Senator Lodge, the Idaho senator said that to pass the appropriation bills and then spend the remainder of this short session in discussing the world court and kindred questions, adjourn and go home for a year without doing anything on domestic legislation "would be unfair and unjust to the people who sent us back here."

Doubts Decisive Action.

Senator Borah's personal judgment is that there can be no final action on the court at this session because of the press of other business. He said today that it would take some time to work out a program which would divorce the court from the league of nations and, speaking for himself, it was vital that this be done.

Senator Swanson, of Virginia, the ranking democrat on the foreign relations committee, and other proponents of American adherence to the world court, are preparing to press for decisive action before this congress expires, by limitation next March 4. They believe President Coolidge's recommendation for a reservation under which the United States would not be bound on questions of a domestic nature, not voluntarily presented to the court, will operate to remove much of the objection to the court proposal in the senate.

Not Too Sanguine.

Even these senators are convinced, however, that there will be a pressure of a determined character for domestic legislation, and in view of the fact that the annual appropriation bills have the right-of-way, they are not over-optimistic that the court issue can come to a vote at this session.

"I am quite willing as chairman to help," Senator Borah said in discussing the proposal to call up the court matter from the calendar, where it was placed at the last session. "Indeed, I am anxious to bring before the senate the world court as soon as the appropriation bills, which have the right-of-way, and agricultural legislation have been passed."

YOUTH IS KILLED ON MERCY ERRAND TO FREE PIGEON

Chicago, December 6.—Edward Clark, 13 years old, was dead today, the result of his effort to free a pigeon entangled in a string, near the deadly third rail of the South Side elevated railroad.

The pigeon had made a nest under the charged rail. With a ball of string which the bird had picked up, it had entangled one foot and trapped itself.

The boy climbed the structure and released the pigeon while several boy friends looked on. Suddenly he plunged to the ground dead. The coroner's jury decided he had grasped a high-tension cable after performing his errand of mercy.

Hanover, Germany, December 6.—As in the case of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, whose atrocious murder of Robert Franks startled America, alienists and lawyers will seek to prove that Fritz Haarmann, the ogre who fiendishly murdered dozens of little boys, should not hang for his crimes.

Among the witnesses in the trial Monday will be Dr. Magnus Hirschfeld, of Berlin Institute of Sexual Science. Dr. Hirschfeld is unalterably opposed to the death penalty for pervers, holding that there are mental and physical reasons for their deeds which normal persons cannot comprehend.

Indian Chieftain Barks at Thanks For War Service

Will See Great White Father Before Accepting Tribe's Certificate.

Pendleton, Ore., December 6.—History that extended back into the pages of time for many moons was told by Indians of three tribes yesterday at the Indian agency in the ceremony attendant upon presenting the three tribes on the Umatilla reservation with certificates expressing the thanks of the United States government for the aid of the tribes in successfully prosecuting the war against Germany and her allies.

The certificates were signed by President Coolidge.

One slight hitch was reported in the proceedings. When Major Byron Sharp, superintendent of the reservation, essayed to give Chief Jim Kanine, of the Walla Walla tribe, the certificate for his tribe, Kanine refused to accept it.

"I have never been in a war," said the chief in his native tongue. "I do not know what this is all about. I am going to Washington to see the Great White Father. I will talk with him and then I will know what to do about this thing. Major Sharp must keep it until a return."

Captain Sumpter, chief of the Cayuse tribe, was the first to whom a certificate was presented. "The presentation of the certificates make me very glad," he declared through the interpreter. "I once made a trip into Idaho when the Banocks were on the warpath and succeeded in bringing about a peace."

Chief Amos Pond received the certificate for the Umatilla tribe. "Once when bad Indians threatened to wipe out Pendleton and the white people who lived there, I took my life in my hands and saved the city. I am glad now to be friends with the white folk."

Alabama Senator Expected To Accept Minor Changes Recommended by Administration.

COOLIDGE TO REVEAL ATTITUDE ON MONDAY

Income Tax Law Publicity Clause Likely To Stand

Washington, December 6.—Despite the cry raised throughout the country because of publication of income tax payments, there appears little likelihood of any action in congress during the present short session.

Those who want the publicity section of the revenue law repealed are framing their measures and airing their disapproval in formal statements, but it is apparent that leaders who agree with them in both house and senate are inclined not to risk a movement prematurely.

They are by no means certain how strongly the wind is blowing the other way, but chiefly they fear the little group of insurgents in the senate. Senate leaders do not want to risk the chance of a filibuster from this group, and this is what might happen if repeal of the tax publicity section were sought. A filibuster from the insurgents could hold up necessary legislation, if they felt inclined to conduct one to that extent.

Pessimistic in Private.

Republican house leaders who favor repeal have taken their cue from those in the senate, and while they will state publicly that they are hopeful of action, they say privately that they don't see much prospect of it this session.

"What good would it do for us to repeal the tax publicity section? If we were able, there is no chance of any action in the senate this session."

This is the view expressed by several house leaders, quite privately.

Chairman Green, of the house ways and means committee, is going to see President Coolidge regarding the matter; he is expected to advise the

RESOLUTION TO ASK PARLEY BE CALLED ON SCHOOL MERGER

Education Boards of Atlanta, Fulton County, College Park, East Point To Be Invited.

MANY BIG PROBLEMS INVOLVED IN MERGER

If Union of Schools Is Held Feasible, Special Election Would Be Held in February.

The Atlanta board of education Tuesday will be requested to empower a special committee of the board to call a conference of 1 school officials and private individuals interested in the movement to consolidate city and county school systems, it was stated following a meeting of the committee Friday.

The committee, which is composed of H. J. Penn, John T. Hancock, president of the board, and Mrs. Z. B. Peterson, was appointed several months ago to investigate feasibility of the proposed merger, and while a mass of data has been gathered, no report has been made yet.

Conference Authorized.

Members of the committee Friday recommended that the board of education authorize them to call a joint conference of school officials and members of the boards of education of Atlanta, Fulton county, College Park and East Point, at which the entire proposal would be discussed, objections heard, and solutions suggested.

The meeting showed that a great amount of research work still is needed before such a merger could be effected, as a number of problems remain to be solved before the schools would be ready for such a movement. Among points of major importance which would be brought before such a meeting are condition of buildings throughout the proposed metropolitan district, and especially those now used by Fulton county; the question of establishing kindergartens in present Fulton county schools; and the junior and senior high school problems for schools not now a part of the Atlanta system.

Each To Make Investigation.

Following the meeting, to be held as soon as possible after the board adopts the recommendation, school authorities of all four affected systems are expected to further investigate all details of the merger with the view of ascertaining exactly how each system will be affected, and all advantages and disadvantages brought about by the consolidation.

In accordance with present plans, if the probe shows the merger feasible, an election will be held early in February to give the general public an opportunity to express its wishes before the legislature convenes. If the people vote favorably on the measure, it is proposed to ask the state assembly to enact such legislation as is necessary to create the district, and to provide funds for its maintenance.

Practically all school officials favor the move, and authorities of the Atlanta system regard it as the only practical solution for the city's school problems. In addition to school authorities, Mayor Walter A. Sims and members of the board of Fulton county commissioners have expressed approval of the consolidation.

15-Year-Old Girl Rushes Down Street a Mass of Flames.

Adairsville, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Her mind blanked by fear, her body a pillar of flame, Miss Tomie Lou Dean, 15, sped to her death her today.

Miss Dean's clothing became ignited from a grate fire in her home. As the flames enveloped her, she became panic-stricken and, instead of endeavoring to extinguish the blaze, that menaced her, she ran screaming into the street, where a high wind fanned the flames.

Before passersby could aid her, she was so badly burned that she died a few hours later.

There was no one in the Dean home when the tragedy occurred. The victim is survived by her mother, Mrs. John Dean.

A large number of Russian suspects, who cannot well be sent home, will be required to live in a restricted area.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Paris, December 6.—Complete success in putting a stop to the communist agitation toward revolution was claimed by the government tonight and Minister of Interior Chastemps, supreme head of the French police, was able to express entire satisfaction with the manner in which his men "nipped the action in the bud."

Retenace is shown by communist headquarters. The communists do not acknowledge defeat, but say the action has been merely postponed. The official party organ published an appeal tonight for communists to hold themselves in readiness for any eventuality.

Government Scores Heavily.

To the neutral observer, it appears that the government scored heavily against the extremists, first, by rounding up more than 300 communists of all nationalities, more than 70 of whom—foreigners—will be expelled; and, second, by preventing the communist manifestation announced as a protest against these arrests and expulsions.

Communist propaganda, however, has gathered such headway and the organization has been perfected to such a point that students of social and political conditions in France express the opinion that the government must continue severe repressive measures if it hopes to annihilate the revolutionary movement.

Cite Removal of Sadoul.

The communists point to the removal of Jacques Sadoul from the Paris military prison to a jail at Orleans as due to fear that the Paris prison would be rushed and Sadoul delivered. The official reason given by the ministry of war was that since Sadoul belonged to the 16th Infantry regiment, whose headquarters are in Orleans, the Orleans court martial alone is competent to re-trial Sadoul. The original trial, in which the former army captain was convicted by default on a charge of treason in 1919, took place before a Paris court martial.

In their raid on the Soviet headquarters at Bobigny, the police say they seized documents purporting to show that the communists were preparing to attempt an armed coup against Paris next week.

Operation On Big Scale.
The magnitude of the police operations, which were extended throughout France, was shown when it became known that 20 police commissioners at the head of between 600 and 700 men were engaged. Many of them searched in distant suburbs for hidden stores of arms and ammunition, the existence of which had been called to their attention.

Foreigners alone were held in jail tonight, the Frenchmen arrested being allowed to depart after their names and addresses were registered. The dragnet thus far has failed to catch a single Russian.

Leonid Krassin, the Soviet representative, is reported to have told Premier Herriot in a conference this morning that the Soviet embassy and absolutely no connection with the present agitation; that the Soviet diplomatic mission would carefully refrain from mixing in any way in France's internal affairs.

Appeal of Soviet Paper.
The official Soviet newspaper in Paris published the following appeal today:

"Our passport today is the same as yesterday—wrench Sadoul away from the military judges, open the frontiers and jail doors to all victims of class sentences, whom the senate is keeping in penal settlements or exile. The working men of Paris region must hold themselves ready to participate in the demonstration in favor of amnesty."
The Catholic movement, to which Premier Herriot referred in the chamber of deputies today when he pledged his government to fight communist violence, is showing some evidence in Brittany, but from the accounts received, it is interpreted as being more along defense than of offensive lines. Gatherings in Brest, L'Orient contained themselves with adopting resolutions calling for demonstrations in "defense of religious liberty."

GEOGRAPHY LESSON INTERRUPTED BY RAID.

Paris, December 6.—In the raid at Bobigny, the police found a gathering of what is known as the "Lenin Communist School." There were 26 men and women gathered about a long table, busily taking notes of a lecture which was being delivered by Prof. J. Marion. The subject of the lecture, according to the police, was "The New Geography of Europe and History of the Russian Revolution." The police stated that one communist member of parliament was among the "students."

FORMER ARMY CAPTAIN TRANSFERRED UNDER GUARD.

Paris, December 6.—Jacques Sadoul, the former French army captain, who was arrested Thursday in Paris when he returned in spite of the death sentence imposed on him after his conviction by default on a charge of treason in 1919, was transferred today from the military prison here to a jail at Orleans under heavy guard. A score of police accompanied the former captain during the entire train journey.

Sadoul was formerly attached to the French embassy at Petrograd. On the withdrawal of the embassy at the time of the Bolshevik revolution, he remained in Russia and joined the communist movement. His action was acclaimed by the French communists who, although he was absent from France, placed him on their tickets for various French offices. Recently, he sent word that it was safe for him to return and he arrived in Paris last Tuesday.

On Thursday, after the arrest of Sadoul, the chamber of deputies sustained Premier Herriot in his demand for indefinite postponement of discussion of the question of amnesty for Sadoul.

SOVIET AMBASSADOR PRESENTS CREDENTIALS.
Paris, December 6.—Leonid Krassin, Soviet ambassador to Paris, called on Premier Herriot this morning and presented his credentials. Ambassador Krassin will later present his credentials to President Doumergue.

MOUNTED GENDARMES SENT TO QUELL STRIKES.

L'Orient, France, December 6.—A brigade of 200 mounted gendarmes and a number of smaller units today to various points in the department of Finistere, where a series of strikes are in progress.

Other forces have been sent to the ports to preserve order in connection with Catholic demonstrations called for tomorrow.

REMARKS OF PRIEST TO BE INVESTIGATED.
Brest, France, December 6.—A judicial investigation has been ordered into charges that the parish priest of the Church of Notre Dame des Carmes here had spoken from the pulpit of a religious war declared against the government, and had urged the faithful to resist the laws aimed at them, even to bloodshed if necessary.

COMMUNIST MAJOR OF TOWN SUSPENDED.

Douarnenez, France, December 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—The fear-stricken population of this town began to breathe easier today at the news that Mayor Laflanchec had been suspended by the government and ordered tried for inciting a rebellion. The people had been living in terror for the past week since the communists strike in the sardine factories began, practically tying up the town, while the mayor, wearing his sash of office, led the demonstrations.

The communist leaders have been canvassing the merchants for subscriptions, which usually were given in order to avoid hostile action by the daily paraders. Parties of communists also have brought back loads of food from the surrounding farms, whose owners are said to have made "gifts" when they were reminded of what would happen to them if they did otherwise as soon as the communists take power.

FREDERICK CORSE TO BE ENTERTAINED AT DINNER TONIGHT

Frederick M. Corse, of New York, secretary of the New York Life Insurance company, who is stopping in Atlanta for a few days on a tour of the southern states, will be the guest at 7:30 o'clock tonight of John K. Outley at a dinner at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Mr. Corse is one of the nation's foremost insurance figures and is well known here, where he has visited on former occasions. While in Atlanta he is stopping at the Biltmore hotel.

"Have you a secret society in Crimonia?" "I wouldn't say for sure," answered Cactus Joe. "The one we started was so popular that everybody joined, and now there ain't nobody to keep the secret from."

MRS. E. M. DURANT DIES AT RESIDENCE

Mrs. Abbie Ross Durant, wife of Edward M. Durant, died early Saturday night at the residence, 6 Rivers road, after an illness of many months. She had lived in Atlanta all her married life.

Mrs. Durant was born at Rome, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ross, prominent in social and business circles of Rome for many years. She was married to Edward Durant and came to Atlanta to make her home.

She was a member of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, where she took an active part in all activities of the congregation.

Other survivors besides her husband are two sons, Arnold Durant, of Newark, N. J., and Ross Durant, of Atlanta; a brother, Albert H. Ross, of Rome, and a sister, Miss Lula Ross, of Greenville, S. C.

Funeral services will be announced later by Barclay & Brandon.

ROY HEAD BRIDGE DEDICATED SATURDAY

Cleveland, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Due honor was paid here today to the memory of Roy Head, Cleveland boy, who it is said was the first Georgia soldier to make the supreme sacrifice in the world war, when the "Roy Head memorial bridge" was dedicated to his memory.

At one time, it was recalled, the Georgia legislature contemplated enacting a provision in the bill creating the W. & A. commission, providing that the state should never sell its railroad property, but it is believed that this section of the bill did not pass. Even if it had, however, it is of course, possible for one legislature to repeal the law of another.

ing the purchase they are figuring on receiving an attractive rate of interest on their money for the balance of the life of the lease.

Describes Property.
J. Houston Johnston, consulting engineer for the Georgia public service commission, Saturday night in describing the property, stated that it fronts approximately 1,000 feet on Market street, the principal thoroughfare in the Tennessee city, and between 400 and 500 feet on Ninth street in the heart of the city. It is a rough parallelogram in shape. At the Ninth street end it forms a perfect rectangle for a distance of several hundred feet, then follows the line of the railroad tracks and a curve to Market street, bringing the Georgia-owned property to a point at that end. Three million dollars at one time, it was recalled, offered for this property, in his opinion.

The other Georgia-owned property in Chattanooga consists of two small tracts of less valuable property on the other side of Market street, now leased to the J. B. Pound hotel interests and occupied respectively by the Eastern hotel and an annex to the Eastern.

Goes to Public Debt.
It was pointed out that even should the legislature vote to accept the offer under the commission, the money would have to be applied to a reduction of the state debt as it would accrue from a sale of public property.

At one time, it was recalled, the Georgia legislature contemplated enacting a provision in the bill creating the W. & A. commission, providing that the state should never sell its railroad property, but it is believed that this section of the bill did not pass. Even if it had, however, it is of course, possible for one legislature to repeal the law of another.

seeking an injunction. The supreme court threw out the petition for injunction on the ground of lack of equity, pointing out that the case could first be tried on its merits in the state court of Tennessee and then if the decision was adverse to Georgia, it could be appealed again to the supreme court for decision on its merits.

Chattanooga thereupon brought condemnation proceedings in the Tennessee court to which Georgia filed a demurrer which was sustained. The city of Chattanooga has begun new proceedings in the Tennessee court, however, though no formal briefs have been filed on the case carried beyond the initial step.

Georgia so far has made no reply to this second case, since it has not progressed far enough. It is understood, however, that the city of Chattanooga is planning to secure passage of a special bill through the Tennessee legislature which convenes in January, giving it greater power in condemnation of property than the city now possesses. The next step Georgia will take, Mr. Napier said Sunday night, could not be determined until further developments came in the matter.

MACON'S AUDITORIUM UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Macon, Ga., (December 6.—(Special.)—Macon's new city auditorium is being raised by the contractors, the Southern Ferro concrete company, Atlanta, so that it will be available for use during the latter part of the coming year. The structure will cost approximately $600,000 and the money is being raised by a small tax levy, most of it having been collected before the contract was awarded.

The dome, which is partly in place, is said to be the largest in the world. The diameter will be 152 feet-six inches. The next largest dome is on the British museum and measures 140 feet, while the dome on the National Academy of Music in New York is 100 feet in diameter. This dome of steel will be covered with copper, the weight of which will be 35,000 pounds. The columns at the front of the building will be 25 feet in height.

Too Valuable To Sell.
Albert Collier, secretary to the Georgia public service commission, pointed out that since the dissolution of the W. & A. commission, supervision of the state railroad property has been in the hands of the public service commission.

This body makes an annual visit of inspection over the W. & A. lines and over the property in Chattanooga, and it was Mr. Collier's belief that the property in question is too valuable for sale at the present time at least.

Mr. Collier pointed out that it was a large block situated in the heart of the Chattanooga business district, and it was practically impossible to make an intelligent estimate of its real value.

JAMES MAKES OFFER FOR GEORGIA PROPERTY.
Chattanooga, Tenn., December 6.—(Special.)—Charles E. James, prominent local financier, has offered $3,000,000 for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad property owned by the State of Georgia it was learned today.

In the event Mr. James' proposition is accepted by the state of Georgia he will donate to the city the right to open Broad street, extend Eleventh and widen Ninth, 20 feet.

In his communication to Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, James proposes to pay $1,000,000 cash, and the balance in ten years, interest to be paid at the rate of 5 per cent on $3,000,000. The state of Georgia will realize $150,000 a year at this rate of interest. Should the state of Georgia be required to pay the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad company $25,000 a year, a net income of $125,000 a year is assured. Should the notes be paid in advance Georgia would loan the money for 5 per cent and realize a large sum with which to develop the state.

Will Open Streets.
Mr. James refused to comment regarding the proposition he has submitted to the Georgia governor other than to state that he would donate to the city the right to extend Eleventh street should his proposition be accepted. In the letter sent to Governor Walker no mention of the proposed extension of Eleventh street was made, due to the fact that the disposition of the property after it is sold to Mr. James is of no particular importance to the state of Georgia.

The proposal covers property bounded on the west by the Union depot, extending south two blocks, then extending in a curved line to the intersection of Market street at the Western & Atlantic railroad crossing, thence north on Market to Ninth and south to the west side of Broad street.

In his communication Mr. James points out that the sale of this property will not interfere with two or three tracks going south out of the Union depot. About 50 feet lies between the proposed Broad street extension and the east line of the Union station.

That the proposal is of such importance to the state of Georgia as to make advisable the calling of a special session of the legislature is pointed out in Mr. James' communication. It is also recognized that due to the long-term lease held by the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, consent will have to be obtained from that transportation company before the property can be sold.

This is the first time in the history of the three-sided controversy between Chattanooga, the state of Georgia and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad company that an offer has been made to purchase the property, thereby removing the obstacle which has prevented extension of Broad street and opening up of a new business section.

Mr. James has played a prominent part in developing Chattanooga. He built the first skyscraper, developed Mount Lookout and made possible erection of the huge dam at Hale's bar on the Tennessee river.

He is owner of the Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia railroad, and under his management the transportation company is enjoying prosperity and indications are it will be a large factor in the industrial development of the city.

STATUS OF LITIGATION WITH CHATTANOOGA.
George M. Napier, attorney general, in discussing the present status of litigation between the city of Chattanooga and the state of Georgia over proposal of the city to cut a right-of-way for Market street through the Georgia-owned property, Saturday night stated that the matter is practically at a standstill at present.

The litigation started about two years ago when the city of Chattanooga sought to bring condemnation proceedings against the property. The state of Georgia then went to the United States supreme court, seeking an injunction. The supreme court threw out the petition for injunction on the ground of lack of equity, pointing out that the case could first be tried on its merits in the state court of Tennessee and then if the decision was adverse to Georgia, it could be appealed again to the supreme court for decision on its merits.

Chattanooga thereupon brought condemnation proceedings in the Tennessee court to which Georgia filed a demurrer which was sustained. The city of Chattanooga has begun new proceedings in the Tennessee court, however, though no formal briefs have been filed on the case carried beyond the initial step.

Georgia so far has made no reply to this second case, since it has not progressed far enough. It is understood, however, that the city of Chattanooga is planning to secure passage of a special bill through the Tennessee legislature which convenes in January, giving it greater power in condemnation of property than the city now possesses. The next step Georgia will take, Mr. Napier said Sunday night, could not be determined until further developments came in the matter.

Pretty Typist Blamed by Wife In Divorce Case

Mrs. Bessie D. Heins, of 25 Gordon street, filed an answer and a cross bill Saturday to a suit for divorce against her several days ago by her husband, J. H. Heins, superintendent of a local bakery, in which she attributes all of their marital difficulties to "a pretty stenographer."

Mrs. Heins, in her demurrer, charged that her husband had expressed a desire to obtain his freedom so he could marry his typist, upon whom, Mrs. Heins asserts, he has lavished money and gifts for some time. Mrs. Heins also bitterly contested Mr. Heins' request for custody of their 15-year-old daughter, Catherine.

Judge Humphries signed an order prohibiting the stenographer in question or Mr. Heins from visiting the daughter, and also enjoined the typist from accepting money or gifts from Heins.

The Heins' were married in September, 1908. On separate occasions they have been in court over the stormy wedded life they have experienced. The final separation came December 2, last.

president against pressing any action at this session. Coolidge expressed his ideas very clearly in his message to congress, when he asked repeal of the tax publicity provision.

Next week the house ways and means committee will hold its first meeting. While the income tax question is not scheduled to be taken up, it is sure to be brought into the discussion, and there are some members of the committee who are expected to urge pressing it now. It is believed, however, that the matter will be quietly dropped for the present.

It is apparent that there has been a change of sentiment among some members of both house and senate, resulting from the kick-back that came when newspapers began to feature tax payments on their front pages. Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, who voted for publicity, announced his change of position as soon as he got back here from a season among his constituents. Others have indicated their change of front since.

It is not known how wide the change has been, but it is evident that the decision, when it comes, will be close. Senator Norris, of Nebraska, author of the tax publicity amendment, says he is confident it will stick. If the matter is brought up, he threatens to introduce an even stronger publicity provision which would make the whole return public, instead of the amount of payment.

provided at the request of George Djamgaroff, secretary of the Monday Opera club, through which the invitation to the duchess was extended. He had received several anonymous letters, he told the police, containing veiled threats against the royal visitor's life.

With M. Djamgaroff to greet the royal exile at the pier was Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, president of the Colonial Dames of America. Others in the royal party, also exiled monarchists, were the widow of General Delfoff, who was assassinated several years ago; the widow of Admiral Makaroff, commander of the Black sea fleet of the Russians during the world war; and Admiral Petroff, of the Russian imperial navy.

Graciously to Newspapermen.
A somewhat angular woman, tall and simply to the point of severity, the grand duchess graciously welcomed newspapermen who invaded her suite at quarantine. But she deftly turned aside all references to anything medical—Russian or otherwise—and positively declined to discuss whatever notions she might have regarding the return of monarchy to Russia—an event which probably would place her on the throne as "the little mother of all the Russians."

Her visit was purely a social matter, she insisted. And with that, she added, was coupled a desire to express in person her thanks to Americans who have exerted themselves to relieve the sufferings of Russian nobles, exiled since the revolution.

In a statement issued through M. Djamgaroff, she denied various rumors connected with her visit and reiterated that "it is purely social in its nature and has no political or financial purpose."

Her Hosts in America.
The present plans will take the royal party to Washington and Philadelphia. In New York, she will be the guest of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer. While in Washington, Mrs. John Hays Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lansing will be her hosts. In Philadelphia, she will be the guest of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer and Mrs. Garden Cassatt.

The grand duchess is a cousin of King George, of England. Her father was the son of Queen Victoria, of England, who became the Grand Duke Alfred, of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Her mother was the daughter of Nicholas I., of Russia. Her sister is Queen Marie, of Rumania.

The Monday Opera club, organized a year ago, has in its membership some of the country's most socially prominent men and women. The membership list is large, recruited from Metropolitan opera box holders.

Duchess Is Honorary Member.
The grand duchess is an honorary member, as are her sister, Marie of Rumania; Grand Duchess Xenia, sister of the late czar; the Dowager Duchess, of Milford Haven, the queen of Belgium, and the widow of the late Grand Duke Alexander, of Russia.

The grand duchess, a woman of large personal fortune, will have occasion to spend little money in connection with her visit, it was announced. New York wealthy families have supplied the party with motors throughout its stay; the Waldorf-Astoria is host to the party; her passage on the Paris was without cost, and a special car will carry the party over the Pennsylvania railroad through the courtesy of Vice President Atterbury.

In Your Home Christmas

Pay a little each week to January 1. Start regular monthly payments of $10 in February.

The Many Advantages of Buying on the Christmas Club Plan

First of all, of course, is the special club price and special club terms. They are unusually low—but the volume of business we get each year through this plan makes these concessions possible. Another big added feature of the Christmas Club are the "extras" that are included with your purchase ABSOLUTELY FREE.

For example: A full term of music lessons is included with each upright piano sold on the club plan. You may choose your own teacher if you like. A handsome mahogany roll cabinet is included with the Player Pianos; and a pair of artistic torcheres with the Baby Grands.

Then consider the quality! We are offering two well-known, reliable makes in this year's club. We ask you—yes, even urge you—to compare them with others selling at much higher prices; and you will immediately see the extraordinary value in these.

How To Get To Carder's From 5 Points

OPERA LOVERS AWAIT 'MADAME BUTTERFLY'

Atlanta will not have to wait a year for its feast of grand opera this year, for a complete presentation of "Madame Butterfly," with chorus, ballet and full orchestra, is announced for New Year's eve at the Auditorium under the direction of the Southern Musical bureau.

Tamaki Miura, the Japanese soprano, is to sing the title role of "Cio-Cio-San," which has been portrayed here by Geraldine Farrar, the last performance having been given in 1920. Miura has been heard once in Atlanta, when she sang with the Boston Opera company, and those who heard "Madame Butterfly" then have not forgotten the charming picture presented by the little Japanese girl in the geisha costume.

The San Carlo Opera company will present the Puccini work in Atlanta on New Year's eve. It is one of the few successful opera organizations in America, having presented grand opera continuously for more than fifteen years. Its impresario, Fortune Gallo, has been the only manager who has succeeded in making grand opera pay its way without subsidy or subscription from wealthy supporters, it is said.

"I believe there is a field in America for good grand opera, adequately presented but without extravagance and at popular prices," Mr. Gallo declared when the organization first came to Atlanta. He was laughed at, but he persisted and has acquired a fortune from grand opera at prices ranging from $2.50 a seat down.

The San Carlo Opera company has some twenty standard operas in its repertoire. Many Georgia music lovers heard several of them at Asheville, N. C., last summer when the company played a week during the convention of Southern Music clubs. "Madame Butterfly" was selected by Russell Bridges, head of the Southern Musical bureau, for the Atlanta engagement, not only because it has been one of the most popular operas given by the Metropolitan, but because it presents Tamaki Miura, outstanding star of the San Carlo organization.

Mr. Bridges believes that the Auditorium will be filled for this engagement, for New Year's eve always is a night of pleasure in Atlanta and thousands of folks desire an entertainment of some kind before going to New Year parties.

The seat sale will be opened at Phillips & Crew store on December 26, but mail reservations will be received at any time by the Southern Musical bureau, in the Healey building.

A patent has been granted Sam Friedman, 406 Capitol avenue, for a new electric and hand hair clipper. The clipper, it is claimed, is equipped with a gauge to cut different lengths of hair, and automatically shapes the hair without shears and comb.

Milledgeville Methodists Dedicate New Church Today

New Methodist Church at Milledgeville.

BY DR. E. A. TIGNER.
Milledgeville, Ga., December 6.—(Special).—The dedication of the Methodist church in Milledgeville Sunday, December 7, marks the culmination of a long and sacrificing effort on the part of the congregation that has finally resulted in the building and equipping of a handsome and well-appointed house of worship, with a well arranged Sunday school department and attractive and comfortable home for pastor and family.

Bishop Warren A. Candler will preach the dedication sermon and will preside during the ceremonies. A special program of music has been arranged.

The occasion is epochal in the history of Methodism in the old capital city of Georgia. The new church is the third house of worship erected here by Methodists. The first one was built in 1807, shortly after Milledgeville was laid off and made the capital of Georgia.

The second was built in 1827, a larger and better structure. The state legislature, by special act, granted it the use of a site on the capital square near the capitol building. Here the Methodists worshipped for 83 years.

In 1906, when Rev. Joel T. Daves was pastor, the movement was begun to erect the third and present building. The congregation voted to change the location again, to the corner of the block on which the old governor's mansion stands and across the street from the campus of the Georgia State College for Women.

It is an imposing structure architecturally, with large columns and attractive entrances. It is built of cream brick, arranged in graceful lines and adorned with beautiful windows. The main auditorium has a seating capacity of 1,200, made necessary by the 500 students who attend services.

The main auditorium was completed in 1909 when Dr. Elam F. Dempsey was pastor.

The Sunday school auditorium and class rooms and new parsonage which adjoins the church were designed and finished by Rev. C. M. Liphart during his pastorate which ended 1923. He is an experienced architect, artistic designer and builder and while here gave unstintingly of his talent and industry.

'HOMECOMING SERVICE' AT CENTER ST. CHURCH

A special "homecoming service" will be observed by members of the Center Street Methodist church, at 10 o'clock this morning. Rev. A. S. Hutchinson, newly-appointed pastor, will make his first appearance in the pulpit and deliver a special sermon in honor of the occasion. The program has been arranged under supervision of the stewards.

LEGION TO INITIATE MEMBERS IN PUBLIC

For the first time in the history of the American Legion in Atlanta, there will be a public exemplification of the ritual of the order upon 10 candidates at the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club Friday night, December 12. Although the Legion ritualistic work is not secret, this is the first opportunity the public has had to view the degree work in Atlanta.

At the same time, William A. Sirmann, newly elected commander of Argonne Post No. 1, will be formally installed by the state officers of the Legion, who will come up from Columbus Friday for this purpose. Other officers to be installed are Frank B. Saunders, first vice commander; Charles M. Gallienne, second vice commander; Wilson M. Parker, adjutant; A. H. Duggan, treasurer; C. M. Boyer, James H. Ables, D. J. Meyerhardt, Frank Kempton, Ernest F. Brown, Evan P. Howell, J. L. R.

BOYD, JAMES L. HARRISON, B. I. GAMBRELL AND DR. ROBERT C. EVE, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEEMEN.

Commander Sirmann has announced that it is his intention to see that Argonne post assumes its rightful place among civic organizations of Atlanta, and that the efforts of the nearly two thousand Legionnaires be directed towards civic betterment. He expects to raise the Legion to a high plane in communal activities in Atlanta, and in this he states he has the cooperation of the other officers of Argonne post.

BASS JUNIOR HIGH LEADER IN RACE FOR ATTENDANCE

With a percentage of 97.5, William A. Bass junior high school led Atlanta schools in attendance for the week ending December 5. It was announced Saturday by M. E. Coleman, director of census and attendance.

TELEPHONE EXPANSION MARKED IN GEORGIA

More than 653 miles of new physical and phantom circuit were added to the long distance telephone system in Georgia this year as the result of the extensive construction program the Southern Bell Telephone company is completing, it became known Saturday. The system has been enlarged and expanded to care for the growth of the toll business and circuit lay-outs have been changed with a view to increasing the facilities and improving the service.

A big development has been the installation of new and additional direct circuits between points where the long distance service is heaviest. During the year 16 new direct circuits were added at various cities throughout the state.

There are now 27,603 miles of long distance circuit and 4,844 miles of toll pole lines covering Georgia and reaching to all parts of the country. In Atlanta two new direct circuits were added to Charlotte, N. C., and

NEW PASTOR SPEAKS AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Rev. L. Wilkie Collins, new pastor of St. Paul Methodist church of this city, will occupy his pulpit at both services today, officials of the church stated Saturday in an announcement urging all members to be present and extending a special invitation to all Atlantans.

Dr. Collins is not new to Atlanta Methodists, being remembered here as the pastor a few years ago of Calvary Methodist church, having been pastor when the church was erected and adding to the church rolls 700 members. He also is widely known as an evangelist and Sunday school worker, and has conducted a number of revivals which attracted wide attention.

There are now five direct circuits from Atlanta to Charlotte, N. C., seven to Chattanooga, Tenn., three to Cincinnati, Ohio, four to Greenville, S. C., three to Knoxville, Tenn., two to Lynchburg, Va., three to Memphis, Tenn., four to Montgomery, Ala., three to New Orleans, La., two to Asheville, N. C., six to Birmingham, Ala., two to Albany, Ga., and four to Augusta, Ga.

In addition to the installation of the new circuits, the telephone company has reconstructed a great mile-

POLICE BEGIN ROUNDUP IN RAILROAD THEFTS

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Sheriff E. S. Garner and deputies working with Chief Detective J. G. Reed, of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, have succeeded in recovering goods said to have been stolen from freight trains here some time ago. It is said that while the freight which passes here about 1 o'clock in the morning stops to take on water the seals on cars would be broken, the goods taken out and hauled away in an automobile. The goods were found at R. D. Mobley's home about one mile south of Decatur. Howard Garner, deputy sheriff, states that Mobley says he got the goods from Sam Gower, who is at present in jail at Winder, according to officers, charged with stealing an automobile from Lee Ethridge, of Atlanta, a few days ago.

The officers say that there are several others connected with the looting of trains and are withholding names until arrests are made. Mobley has not been placed in jail on account of being sick, the officers agreeing to withhold arrest until he is better. It is said he has about 10 children, the oldest about 17.

The officers have been working on the case about two weeks.

MULBERRY METHODISTS PLANNING NEW CHURCH

Macon, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Mulberry Street Methodist church, one of the largest in the South Georgia conference, may have a new house of worship.

It was just 100 years ago that this congregation built the first church in Macon, a tiny frame structure. Since then it has outgrown its quarters a number of times, and the pastor, Dr. Walter Anthony, says that the membership is too large for the edifice now occupied.

At a meeting of the boards of the church Friday night, Dr. Anthony reviewed the work of the congregation during the 100 years' history and declared that the time has arrived when they should build a larger church and to expand all departments.

To that end the 2,000 members will be divided into 51 teams. There will be an every-member canvass for funds for carrying on the work of the church, with the ultimate view of building a new structure.

One of the speakers at the meeting was W. G. Solomon, who said that for 46 years he has been a member of the board of stewards of Mulberry.

Prominent Macon Woman Enters Dairy Business; Wants Better Milk

Macon, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Mrs. R. C. Hazlehurst, widow of Captain "Bob" Hazlehurst, who was one of the best known men of middle Georgia, is going to have one of the best dairies in Georgia if her plans go through.

"I have concluded that my children are not getting as good milk as they should," said Mrs. Hazlehurst. "Hence I am going to produce a certified milk, if it's possible, and am going to create a trade in Macon for milk that will be absolutely clean and pure."

Mrs. Hazlehurst is building a milk room 40 by 20 feet that will be painted white inside, with concrete floor and every known convenience. This room will be kept as clean as the cleanest home, she says, and into this the cows will be led for milking. Close by will be the cooling room and the wash room. Farther back is the barn where the cows will rest at night.

Mrs. Hazlehurst has ten cows—all Jerseys, each with a pedigree. She says she will add at least five full-blooded Guernseys to the herd.

SAVANNAH PLANS PORT CAMPAIGN FOR 1925

Savannah, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Savannah's interest in the future of the state port legislation is getting, as evidenced by a meeting held this week by 200 Savannah business men, most of whom were members of the "round the state tour" last summer which visited 20 counties and twice as many towns in a campaign of interest in the state project.

These men have planned an educational campaign and will prosecute the work of keeping the matter before the state until the legislature meets next summer.

New Lamp Has No Wick or Chimney

Most Brilliant Home Light Known —Cost One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 659 Factory building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, it is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of The Constitution who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him today.—(adv.)

FREE VOTE GIVEN FROM TEN STATES

Washington, December 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—The vote for the three leading presidential candidates in the last election in ten of the largest states totaled 16,530,042, according to figures received here from secretaries of state after the official canvass. The official figures for all states have not yet been received. President Coolidge received 9,901,953 votes in those ten states; John W. Davis, 4,372,635, and Senator La Follette, 2,165,459. The states are New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Massachusetts, Indiana, New Jersey, Missouri and Iowa. In each of them President Coolidge received more than half a million votes. In the 1920 election those states cast 14,437,104 votes, of which President Harding received 9,805,778 and James M. Cox 4,631,326.

Analysis of the statistics indicate Senator La Follette drew slightly more from the republicans than did the democrats. Coolidge received 60.1 per cent of the total vote in November in the ten states, Davis 23.4 per cent, and La Follette 13.2 per cent. In the 1920 election Harding received 68 per cent of the total vote in the same states and Cox 32 per cent. La Follette, it would appear, drew 7.6 per cent from the republicans and 6.6 per cent from the democrats.

Coolidge had a plurality of 5,619,333 over Davis in the ten states and a plurality of 7,820,490 over La Follette. The president also had a majority of 3,453,874 over the combined Davis and La Follette vote in the 10 states. Pennsylvania gave Coolidge a plurality with 992,289 and New York, the third largest, with 809,232.

"From official returns now in it is shown that Coolidge's plurality exceeded the vote for Davis in more than a quarter of the states. La Follette polled a larger vote than Davis in at least five states, including Wisconsin, where his plurality over Coolidge reached 142,094.

Interest in the national election apparently was not very keen in the south. Practically every state in that section, excepting Georgia, showed a smaller total vote than in the presidential election of 1920.

"Haven't you any occupation?" "I need to have one," answered Bill the Burg, "but I've reformed." "What was it?" "Cleaning up silverware."—Washington Star.

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot callus without soreness or irritation.—(adv.)

FLUSH THE KIDNEYS BEFORE BREAKFAST

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and refuse to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy. The salts are blissful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lemon juice drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—(adv.)

Held by Police Woman Declares Man Killed Self

Richmond, Va., December 6.—Mrs. Louise Valentine, who led the police to the scene of a road near here where Chastain E. Swann, 22, was found mortally wounded last night, will remain in the custody of a police matron until detectives have cleared up the mystery as to how Swann came by the bullet wound that caused his death at a local hospital a few hours after he was found in his automobile, the authorities announced today.

Mrs. Valentine, who told detectives that she was married but separated from her husband, said she met Swann on the streets here last night and that he told her he was going to kill himself. She said she followed him in an attempt to keep him from carrying out his threat but was unable to do so. She declared she and Swann planned to be married as soon as she could obtain a divorce.

Holdup in Lift, Rosenbergs Lose $20,000 in Jewels

New York, December 6.—Imprisoned in an apartment-house elevator with two attendants, Mr. and Mrs. Jacques P. Rosenberg were stripped of jewelry valued at $20,000 early today by three holdup men who followed them from a cabaret. Mr. Rosenberg was felled by a blow from a pistol butt when he protested the robbery. The three holdup men, who followed them from a cabaret, Mr. Rosenberg, who is a broker, was entering the house when the three men, with drawn pistols, covered him and the doorman, Mrs. Rosenberg, who already had entered the building, and the elevator operator were accosted next and the robbers marched their four victims into the elevator. Shutting the door to avoid outside detection the men quickly tore the jewelry from the Rosenbergs. Diamond necklaces, rings and bracelets were stripped from Mrs. Rosenberg so roughly that it brought the futile protest from her husband.

Mrs. Rosenberg was formerly Mrs. Julia Bachelder, widow of a wealthy Chicago lumberman. Mr. Rosenberg, to whom she was married in Paris two months ago, is her sixth husband. Her fifth was Count Louis de la Mache, a French aviator, and her fourth, a prominent in New York and London financial circles as an international broker.

CONTEST WINNER GIVES HER RECIPE FOR GOOD HEALTH

Chicago, December 6.—Miss Inez Harden, of Drew, Miss., judged the most perfect girl of 350,000 in the health contest in connection with the International Livestock exposition with a rating of 99.04 per cent, gave as her recipe for perfect health:

Sleep 10 hours a night. Don't drink a quart of milk a day. Eat lots of vegetables. Don't use face powder or rouge. Don't wear high heels. Miss Harden is 16, weighs 117 3/4 pounds and is five feet and two inches tall. She goes to bed every night at eight and is up at six thirty. In addition to deep breathing and setting up exercises she keeps fit by doing part of the housework and playing right guard on her high school basketball team.

HIS WIFE BURIED IN PAUPER'S GRAVE, HE ASKS DAMAGES

Shreveport, La., December 6.—Ben Salazar, of Oil City, La., filed suit in district court today against the Shreveport Charity hospital and Mayor Wellman, local undertaker for $25,000 charging his wife was buried without his knowledge or consent and that she was buried in a pauper's grave when he was not notified of his wife's death. The plaintiff also filed suit in the name of five minor children.

The petition alleges that the plaintiff left his wife of the night of June 25, 1924, at the charity hospital to go to Oil City for four of the children, she having expressed a desire to see them. He returned with the children at 2 o'clock the following day to find at the hospital that his wife had died a short time after he left her, that her body had been turned over to Wellman and the body already interred.

PRESIDENT URGED NOT TO EXTEND BUTLER'S LEAVE

Washington, December 6.—President Coolidge was advised today by the senate naval committee through Chairman Hale, to extend the leave granted Brigadier General Butler, of the marine corps, to permit his service as public safety director of Philadelphia.

After a conference with Mr. Coolidge, Senator Hale said he had conveyed "the sense of the members of the committee that a member of the military or naval establishment should not be given a leave of absence to perform civilian work."

The president also has before him a communication from the house naval committee which at recent executive session decided to interpose no objections to an extension of leave, but did not recommend such an extension.

GOVERNOR LEN SMALL IS INJURED BY AUTO

Kaukaee, Ill., December 6.—Governor Len Small was in much pain today as a result of injuries received in an automobile collision near Pontiac yesterday and probably will be kept in bed at least four or five days, Dr. W. A. Stoker, who is attending him at his home here, said today.

The governor's serious injury is a fractured hip, the extent of which has not been learned, pending x-ray examinations. He also is suffering from shock.

The governor's son, Leslie, who was driving the car, suffered a dislocated collar-bone and his daughter, Mrs. A. E. English, received a painful injury to her left knee.

Albert C. Bothwell, also a member of the governor's party, suffered a fracture of one rib.

Sunday island in the Pacific is treated the most mountain in the world. It rises 2,000 feet out of five miles of water, and is thus nearly 30,000 feet from base to the summit.

NEW YORK OFFICIALS VISITING ISLAND HOME

Brunswick, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Little St. Simon's island, owned by Philip Berelsheimer, city chamberlain of New York, is the headquarters at present of a large portion of Tammany Hall. Some of the best known politicians of New York are guests of Mr. Berelsheimer. Those in the party besides the city chamberlain are: Joseph H. Hagg, assistant to Mayor Hylan; Albert C. Benninger, city park commissioner; John H. McCook, democratic leader of Brooklyn; Willis Hollis, secretary of the party board; and Peter B. Mitchell, Walter Weiswetter and Irving A. O'Hare, all prominent in New York politics.

Berelsheimer has erected on the island a handsome and convenient home, maintains a force throughout the year, and entertains lavishly.

VAMPIRE TRAITS BARED IN COURT

bones without wavering or batting an eye.

"Only once," Haarman said, "did I throw an 'ire body into the river."

While the prosecution continued to insist that the bones were those of the victims of the boy-butcher, Haarman's lawyer "defended the contention of the client."

Often, in the dead of night, this lawyer claimed, the neighbors of the Ogre had complained about "lots of hammering and sawing in Haarman's hotel."

Identifies Instruments.

Without hesitation, however, Haarman identified the bloody bucket, the bloody axe and the blood-stained little cot on which he had drawn the blood from the throats of his victims and then cut up their bodies.

The testimony of Haarman and the two youths who have admitted complicity in some of the murders—Grans and Witkowski, is absolutely unmatched in history. Only the fanciful fairy tales of ogres who ate "little boys," which some people tell to their children, compare with it.

Haarman's co-accused Grans and Witkowski is supreme.

As he came to discussion of the death of the 14th victim, he declared:

"I told them they were crazy when they tried to argue that I killed him. 'If I had, his throat would have been torn like the others.'"

Grans is the youth who is alleged to have performed some of the killings and insisted on some of the others in order that he might secure the clothes of the doomed boys.

The thirteenth victim, whose murder Grans is alleged to have incited, was under consideration all morning. For two or three hours Haarman pleaded that he had no recollection of this victim. Finally he admitted: "The boy lived with me for a few days."

Leaving out none of the revolting conclusion of three members of the court, Chief Justice Sutherland and Justices Ellis and Brandeis, is that the respondent, Watkins, may question the validity of the act; that the so-called second proviso is in fact a void; that it is in fact not a proviso, but a separate and independent rule forming part of a method for the compensation of county officials. The creation of a surplus fund from the income of the officers to be paid into the general fund of the county, the respondent said, is not in its entirety nor with the so-called "proviso" eliminated operates uniformly throughout the state; that it is local in its purpose and application when considered either with or without the proviso; that it violates the mandate of the 20th and 21st sections of article III of the state constitution.

3 SPANISH REBELS EXECUTED IN MADRID

Madrid, December 6.—Three men sentenced to death in connection with the recent outbreak at Vera, near the Franco-Spanish frontier, were executed today. They were arrested when crossing the frontier early in November with the alleged intention of bringing about the overthrow of the Spanish dictator.

trovercy that has been raging in congress for nearly three years.

It is an agreement cannot be reached between the republican majority and Senator Underwood, the administration, that the fight will end. Both the Underwood and Norris bills and draft a new bill.

Senator Underwood said today that he was willing to submit "any reasonable amendments." The senator conferred with Secretary Weeks during the preparation of his bill, and since President Coolidge is expected to be guided somewhat by the war department, the report on the Underwood bill, it is likely that a compromise can be reached.

However, Senator Norris, chairman of the senate agriculture committee, which reported the Norris bill for disposition of Muscle Shoals, is unyielding in his position and is determined to fight to the last ditch for the passage of his own measure. He plans to make another speech in the senate and declared he "did not understand how any senator from the south could vote for the Underwood bill."

Smith to Prepare Bill.

Also, Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, is engaged over the week-end in the preparation of an entirely new bill for the operation of Muscle Shoals and expects to introduce it in the senate Monday. This bill is understood to provide for production of both power and fertilizer and is described as a combination of the Underwood and Norris bills. The Smith bill would require the government to maintain control of the property until it is assured that a marketable, commercial fertilizer could be manufactured at Muscle Shoals.

Some opposition has arisen to the Smith bill from friends of the Underwood measure who fear that the introduction of another bill would confuse the Muscle Shoals situation.

Will Have Right-of-Way.

Senate leaders plan to hold the Muscle Shoals issue before the senate until some definite action is taken, and although the Isle of Pines treaty is expected to come up Wednesday the Muscle Shoals question will have the right of way.

Since a number of senators have expressed intentions of speaking on the subject, it is not believed by leaders of both parties that a vote can be taken until after Wednesday.

The Underwood bill dedicates Muscle Shoals to national defense, provides for perpetual government ownership and favors direct production, and in the event of failure to procure a suitable lessee, government operation. It demands the production of certain amounts annually of fixed nitrogen to be converted into fertilizer in time of peace and into explosives in time of war.

been disposed of. I am not willing personally to put the world court discussion, which will be prolonged, ahead of agricultural legislation.

Borah for World Court.

"To pass the appropriation bill and then spend the rest of the short session in discussing the world court and kindred questions, adjourn and go home for a year without doing anything on domestic legislation would be unfair and unjust to the people who sent us back here and in violation of every pledge made by all the political parties in the last campaign."

"It will take some time to work out a program which divorces the world court from the league, and make it an independent judicial body. And, speaking for myself, it is vital that we do that. I have favored for twenty years a world court. But I would regard the effort to establish an effective judicial tribunal as wholly fruitless if such a tribunal were left so that it would inevitably be drawn into international politics. When I treat the world court, I would like to feel that I have voted for something that will be an aid to world peace."

ATHENS VOTES BONDS FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Athens, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Athens' fire and waterworks departments will be improved with $55,000 worth of bonds voted here this week. The main improvements in the fire department will come through the purchase of an aerial fire truck to cost $16,500. The fire alarm system will be improved and many new fire boxes added and other improvements made.

In the waterworks department 60 new hydrants will be installed in the business district of the city while

Only Mature Boys Chosen.

Haarman still willingly admitted the murder of a majority of the youths, but insisted on a fair allotment of the atrocities between Grans and Witkowski.

Boys between 15 and 18 were selected for the slaughter, Haarman claimed. He explained that immature boys were not lured.

In the case of the 24th victim, Grans insisted on an early killing because he needed the victim's good suit, Haarman said. It was also costly to keep the victim in the ogre's den any longer than necessary, Grans argued.

"The twenty-fourth boy," Haarman said, "was dead on the sixth day."

"While I was cutting up the body, Grans stuck his head in the door and asked:

"Where's the suit?"

"I wept at that,"

"Then Grans said, 'Don't get excited,' and I answered:

"Two souls dwell within me."

an addition will be built to the filtering plant now in use. The improvements will guard against disease as well as fire. The improvements will be made as soon as the money is realized on the bonds.

Bolshevism Is Here To Stay, Declares Former Georgian

Dr. A. A. Johnson, Formerly With North Georgia Agricultural College, Sees Improvement.

HAS JUST RETURNED FROM THIRD VISIT

Paints Peaceful Picture of Great Republic Based on Extended Study of Conditions.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

When tongues of flame are shooting upward in the gloom of night, when the nocturnal sky is a dull, ruddy reflection of blazing homes, when steel girders snap and twist and the seething inferno roars with rising crescendo, at such a moment the figures of men become grotesque silhouettes, all out of proportion. In the livid glare of white hot fire their shadows become titanic, unnatural, immense caricatures of human beings.

So it is at a time and so it is in a revolution. Flame and smoke are rising. Commands are answered by counter-commands. Minds are awry, age-old institutions are crumbling. Nobody understands what is going on. And in the uncertain light of a new era the figures of men go all out of proportion. From mere human beings they rise to the stature of giants, either giant saviors or giant devils. So it is in France during the great revolution of 1789, so again it is in the Russia of our time.

When Lenin and Trotsky started on the journey to Petrograd after years of exile at a moment when the Russian armies were crumbling under the terrific onslaught of the German allies, there came the charge that the two were agents of the German government. Subsequent events proved that the two men were as much the mortal enemies of kaiserism as they were of czarism. But for a time the world believed the report that Lenin and Trotsky, sent for by the German general command, were able to break down the morale of the Russian armies within the short period of a week or so, kill the czar and his family, sweep away all the vestiges of imperial power and centuries old customs of autocracy, set themselves up as virtual dictators in the place of the Romanoffs and challenge the world to combat.

Like a Nightmare. Grotesque were the stories, weird and fact-fetched the yarns that came from Russia. People threw up their hands in amazement. Could such things be? Was it the end of civilization? Nervous prelates called for crusades to exterminate the followers of anti-Christ, expeditions were undertaken to crush the revolution; Yudenitch, Dvorkin, Wrangel, Semenov, all came to naught. A blockade was thrown around the errant daughter of Christian civilization, millions of ignorant peasants perished without knowing the reason of their doom, and yet Russia remained standing. Yudenitch, who was the armed ambassador of the Russian revolution, boasted that he had destroyed 200 railway bridges, burnt 1,000 stations and hung the mouskies on the trees and telegraph poles, and that he had enormous clusters of food hanging from the branches.

Then came a famine that brought

Attorney Claims Wife Faked Baby As Being Her Own

Child Procured From Unmarried Arkansas Mother, Divorce Plea States.

Memphis, Tenn., December 7.—That Mrs. Charlotte Dodd Patton Sherman, wife of Rogers S. Sherman, wealthy and prominent Tulsa attorney, came to Memphis in July, 1924, and through arrangements with physicians procured a child, intending to deceive her husband by passing the baby off as her own, thereby effecting a reconciliation with Sherman, from whom she was estranged, became known today, according to a story printed in The Commercial Appeal. Mrs. Sherman is now suing his wife for divorce, the suit being filed six weeks ago. In his amended petition Sherman states that the now pending divorce suit, according to The Commercial Appeal story.

The baby alleged to have been procured by Mrs. Sherman through physicians is said to be the son of a young, unmarried Arkansas woman. The Commercial Appeal states. At the time of "child episode," Mrs. Sherman was staying at a hotel in Memphis. On the night in question, an ambulance went to Mrs. Sherman's lodging. The Commercial Appeal story states. Mrs. Sherman entered the conveyance, and in it, one version of the story goes, was a young child, the baby procured for the purpose. The wife of the Tulsa attorney went to a local hospital in the ambulance.

Mrs. Sherman is at present in Memphis. The baby is in Kansas City, where Mrs. Sherman has a daughter, who is said to be the wife of a wealthy and socially prominent man there, The Commercial Appeal states.

SCHOOLS TO FACE $950,000 DEFICIT UPON JANUARY 1

Operation Throughout Next Year Is Impossible Unless Appropriations Are Increased.

That Atlanta schools will be unable to operate throughout next year unless increased appropriations are given by the city became known Saturday, when school authorities announced the department will face a deficit of approximately $950,000 January 1, including the $350,000 loaned the city for school purposes by members of the Atlanta Clearing House association.

Next year's appropriation for the school department, based on 26 per cent of the city's estimated 1925 revenues, will be no larger than this year's, Comptroller B. Graham West stated, and with the large deficit, an estimated increase in operating expenses, need of additional buildings, and improvements and enlargements of many present buildings necessary, the schools will face an extremely critical situation.

Budget Ready Tuesday. Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, Assistant Superintendents H. Reid Hunter and Miss Mary Postell, Robert L. McCullough, business manager, and M. E. Coleman, director of census and attendance, have been at work on next year's budget for several weeks, and probably will have it completed for submission to the board of education at that body's meeting Tuesday.

Although the amount to be asked for operation of the schools next year has not been made public, it is known that payrolls alone will amount to between $100,000 and $200,000 per month.

$100,000 Not Received. More than $100,000 of this year's anticipated revenues have not been received by the school department, as the city probably will not receive within $400,000 of its estimated income. The amount will have to be carried over as uncollected tax fees. While the school department is entitled to 26 per cent of that amount, it cannot be paid until actually received by the city. Believing that it would receive the full anticipated income of $2,625,714.64, the school department appropriated all of it.

In addition, contracts have been let and equipment purchased, which is not to be paid for until next year, but the amounts will be included in this year's deficit.

Salaries More Than Income. Next year's revenues are expected to be approximately $2,600,000. Deducting this year's deficit, without considering the $350,000 item, only about $2,000,000 will remain for operating expenses, whereas salaries alone for 1925 probably will be $2,200,000.

While the $250,000 borrowed from the banks was used by the school department, that amount will not be deducted from 1925 revenues, but is to be repaid by city council.

While officials are attempting to devise plans for overcoming the financial difficulties of the schools, it is practically certain that increased appropriations will have to be granted by the city to permit operation of the school system throughout the year.

'Cross-Figure' Puzzle New Constitution Game

And now we have with the cross-figure puzzle, which The Constitution today presents for the first time to any reading public.

This new puzzle not only affords everybody the same delights which are derived from trying to solve crossword puzzles, but to these joys of intellectual conquest it adds the more substantial benefit of being able to win an attractive prize merely through using a pencil instead of pouring over the contents of a voluminous dictionary.

Figures are not so uncertain as words. Every word has its synonyms, and these vary according to the size of the dictionary. Yet with all the uncertainty which surrounds picking out correct synonyms, the cross-word puzzle has proven its worth as an entertainer and educator. Now we have the cross-figure puzzle, possessing both of these characteristics but shorn of uncertainty, because figures have no synonyms. Figures are figures, just as "pigs are pigs."

So, when you have finished working over the cross-word puzzle in today's Constitution, lay aside your big or little dictionary, get out your pencil and go to work on the cross-figure puzzle. First, read over carefully the few simple rules, then the prize list, then glance at the puzzle and see if you can resist the dare it thrusts at you to solve it as best you can.

You do not have to hurry in solving

ATLANTA'S FIRST SEASON OF LIGHT OPERA ANNOUNCED

Six Weeks' Run of Favorites To Start About the Middle of Next June.

Atlanta's first season of municipal light opera will be presented at the auditorium, opening about the middle of next June and continuing for a run of six weeks.

The season will be offered by the Atlanta Light Opera association, and will mark the commencement of a civic development which it is hoped will eventually become one of the greatest institutions of its kind in the world, officials announced Saturday.

Six operas are to be given during next summer's season, each production to hold the boards for one week. A popular schedule of prices will prevail, and it is believed that the innovation will prove extremely popular with every class of citizen, and will attract many out-of-town visitors who have hitherto had to go to the north or east to find amusement different from that to be found in their home communities.

The Light Opera association, which was organized for the purpose of conducting summer opera in Atlanta, is composed of the leading citizens of Atlanta, and its list of officers and directors includes the names of men who have been prominent in all movements for the growth and betterment of the city, particularly along cultural and musical lines.

To Improve Auditorium. Before the season commences, many improvements and changes will be made at the auditorium. An adequate cooling and ventilating system will be installed in order to make the great building comfortable even on the warmest nights of summer, and other improvements, including a supply of cushioned seats, will be made.

The light opera association will organize, train and maintain a chorus and ballet school, whose pupils will serve in the company which presents its operas. In so far as possible the chorus, ballet and orchestra will be made up of local talent, but the principals will be stars famous for their work in this class of production.

The presentations, however, will be strictly Atlanta affairs, the contract by the city to permit operation of the school system throughout the year.

Noted Authoress Is Fatally Hurt In Auto Crash

Gene Stratton Porter Suffers Fractured Skull in Accident.

Los Angeles, December 6.—Gene Stratton Porter, novelist and short-story writer, died here tonight from injuries sustained when her automobile collided with a street car earlier in the evening.

The accident in which the writer was fatally injured happened a short distance from her home while she was on her way to call on her brother, Jerome Q. Stratton.

Taken to the receiving hospital, the writer never regained consciousness. Physicians at the time announced that her chances for recovery were slight.

The writer's husband, Charles D. Porter, a banker of Rome City, Ind., whose arrival here for Christmas was expected by Mrs. Porter, has been notified of the accident.

She was born on a farm in Indiana in 1858, the daughter of Mark and Mary Stratton. In 1886, she married Mr. Porter at Wabash, Ind.

Mrs. Porter was noted as an author and illustrator, her two most noted works being "The Girl of the Limberlost" and "Freckles." She was the author of more than 15 books, among them being several on birds and bird life, on which subject she was recognized authority.

In March of this year, Mrs. Porter moved from her 120-acre tract of land, a haven for birds and little animals of the forest on Sylvan Lake, near Fort Wayne, Ind., and came to Los Angeles.

An open forum on the timely topic, "Should Women Smoke?" resulted from the recent proposal before the National Order of Pipe Smokers to charter women branches. The suggestion was rejected by the pipe smokers' organization, but the following article indicates that there is plenty of sentiment left in favor of a nicotine affiliation.

BY KENNETH L. EAGON.

A long, long time ago—when hearts were as young as beauty doctors—a young and prolific squire by the moniker of Shakespeare piped:

"Some of you shall smoke in Rome." But this immortal gentleman, upon that historic occasion, neglected to state whether this was to be a reward of a penance.

Some time later, when the noble Shakespeare had been duly cited under the "S's," a madame none other than the indefatigable Lucy Page Gaston arose to be quoted that Rome was too far away for consideration of the jitney-going Americans and she wanted to know why we shouldn't cast sinful smoking in solitary with the obstreperous Mr. Dodo.

All Wanted Liberty.

While the hard-working Madame Gaston was thrown out on strike, some of her henchmen got on the bases and, for a time, it looked like an extraordinary game. But old General Public succeeded in getting the side out and saving the constitution for puffs.

Then the redoubtable Susan B. Anthony arrived for a world's series, carrying: "We want suffrage, and liberty." Well, once upon a time a old blind warrior by the signature of Patrick Henry got all exuberant and shrieked: "I'll have liberty or death." He was accommodated, and didn't know what to do with it.

The suffragists got suffrage, which included all the handicaps suffered by the opposite sex—not forgetting cigars, cigarettes, pipe tobacco and score cards—and then they decided that a street car wasn't worth running after when it had stopped for them.

The Smoke Problem.

All of which brings us up to the present day of cross-word jamborees, jawwalkers and clandestine smoking. "Should Women Smoke?" is the latest scenario and the continuity is as alive with complications as the Volstead act is full of holes.

The writer, personally unbiased, asked the above question of four representatives.

John D., Jr., Sets Gotham Mad With $11 Apartment Plans

BY RODNEY F. DUTCHER.

New York, December 6.—Every now and then some department store genius up an advertisement by offering grand pianos or something equally expensive for $5 apiece and several clerks are killed in the rush.

Poor John D. Rockefeller, Jr.—the man who paid a seven million dollar income tax! His days will be numbered if he doesn't take to airplane riding, and even then somebody probably will give him a chase. Most everybody in New York was trying to find John D. Jr., Saturday night.

It is none other than Rockefeller who is backing the erection of an apartment building in New York city in which modern, up-to-date flats will rent for $11 per month per room. This apartment is designed for "average earners," but it probably will be populated with millionaires, if Rockefeller listens to the wheedling of his friends.

Offering a brand new apartment in New York at $11 per month per room—or $11 per room per month—is something like dangling a lobster sandwich in front of a prisoner who has just decided to call off a hungry strike after fasting 112 days.

The object is to start a program of better housing for New York's workers, few of whom have fit places to live. Rockefeller's "garden homes" will be put right up in the working-man's residential district on Avenue A, which is east of the well known dirty East Side, between 65th and 66th streets. The apartment building will face on a garden and a playground for children; every room will get sunshine and fresh air, and every family will have one or two bathrooms. The apartments will consist of four, five or six rooms, and heat and hot water will be provided free. This will be the first time in ten years that a single building has been erected in New York with apartments within the reach of the wage earner's income.

Rockefeller probably will delegate the task of dealing with who is going to live in this remarkable building to somebody else. He, himself, is only behind it.

Meanwhile there probably are 500,000 families in greater New York who would like to move their trunks into his new apartments, and, unless it develops that the part about $11 per room per month was a typographical error, Mr. Rockefeller's only way to escape being trampled to death could seem to be a hasty trip to Florida.

AIR FIELD FUND VETOED BY SIMS

Mayor Says It Is Not Necessary to Provide Money Until Council Votes to Buy Property.

Reapportionment of the finance sheet in order to transfer $8,125 for the first payment on the Nichols property, which may be purchased by the city as a municipal airplane landing field, was vetoed by Mayor Walter A. Sims Saturday. The paper, which was passed by council Monday, provided for transfer of the money from the amount received by the sale of Beall park to the county.

In disapproving the resolution, the mayor stated that his action is not to be construed as opposition to purchase of a site for the field, but was done simply because council held up final action on the purchase. It is unnecessary to provide the money until after council has decided to buy the property, Mayor Sims held.

Council Monday voted to buy the field, and passed the resolution providing for this year's payment. Councilman Harry York, however, served notice that he would ask reconsideration, automatically holding the matter up until the next session of council.

Dr. C. C. Aven, chairman of the special councilmanic committee which recommended purchase of the Brown's mill site, said Saturday that if council did not reverse its action on buying the field, another resolution will be introduced immediately containing the same provisions as that vetoed by the chief executive Saturday.

Fulton county has agreed to pay half of the purchase price on condition that the field is bought this year. The total price of the 208-acre tract is $85,000, of which the city's half is to be paid in four annual installments of $8,125 each.

GUARDS PROTECT BALDWIN'S HOME AGAINST ATTACK

London, December 6.—Armed guards have been stationed at Chequers, the country residence of Premier Stanley Baldwin, for the weekend, according to the Daily Mail.

The guards are understood to have been posted because of reports that Egyptians in England were planning to assassinate members of the British cabinet.

Cabinet members are being guarded in London, but Egyptian organizations claim that the government has instigated the rumors of the assassination plot in order to strengthen its position in connection with its Egyptian policy.

PROGRESS CLAIMED IN SOLVING MURDER

Friends of Birmingham Doctor, Charged With Slaying Wife, Rally to His Defense.

Birmingham, Ala., December 6.—Although the slaying of Mrs. Annie Lou Edwards in her home early Tuesday still remains a mystery and the motive has not been made known, Solicitor Ben Perry announced today that the state is slowly working out a case against Dr. George T. Edwards, husband of the slain woman, who is being held in the Bessemer jail.

The representatives of the state are satisfied with the developments in the case against Dr. Edwards, who is charged with the slaying of his wife. "The facts are slowly coming into shape. I am not expressing any opinion, but will say that our facts are developing in a way that makes our position stronger."

George Ross, attorney for the physician, today vigorously denied that his client had made conflicting statements concerning the case. He said that Dr. Edwards' claim to be innocent was a large part of the original story that he was snoot in the hand while repelling an invader into his home, who crushed his wife's skull after giving her an anesthetic.

It became known today that officials were making an investigation into Dr. Edwards' life and habits. The reported "eye witness" to the killing of Mrs. Edwards is believed to be a neighbor of the family, who saw lights burning in the Edwards home just prior to the shooting, which were turned off after reports of a pistol and then switched on again. These lights, it is said, burned brightly in all rooms of the house except that occupied by Mrs. Edwards.

Dr. Edwards was visited at the Bessemer jail Saturday by his wife, Dr. D. B. Edwards, of Selma, and other friends, all of whom expressed their confidence in the physician. It was reported that a large delegation of the doctor's Selma friends would visit him tomorrow.

BOWDON, GA., CHILD HAS 13 GRANDPARENTS

Clarence Dunward Jackson, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lee Jackson, of Bowdon, R. F. D. No. 2, has thirteen grandparents, great grandparents, and great, great grandparents now living.

Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Yarbrough, grandfathers; Mrs. L. N. Jackson, Mrs. W. F. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Edmondson and Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Yarbrough, great grandparents; Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, and Mrs. J. G. Morris, great, great grandparents.

All of the people except one or two live within an hour's drive of the baby's home, and there are both four and five generations represented on each the maternal and the paternal side.

Defeat of Attack On Army and Navy Chaplains Is Seen

BRYAN BIOGRAPHY LIKELY TO PROVE COLORFUL VOLUME

Nebraskan Has Seen Perhaps More of America and Its People Than Any Living Man.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, December 6.—It is stated in the current news dispatches that Bryan is going to write an autobiography. One wishes for the kind of book a man should be able to write who has had the opportunity to know as much about America as Bryan.

Speaking after some reflection, I cannot think of any human being who has had the opportunity to know America in as much detail as Bryan. I suspect that Bryan has seen more of the surface of the United States, has visited more of its towns and hamlets, has had contact with more of its people, has looked into the faces of more of its inhabitants than any other living person. It may be that there is some man in some special kind of occupation, possibly some traveling salesman peculiarly situated who has seen as much of America as Bryan has, but I doubt it.

Gave Over 5,000 Lectures. Once, in a period of quiet at the recent New York convention, I led Bryan for a moment away from what was then on his mind, and in the course of making conversation about his colorful past, asked him how many lectures he had delivered. He said he did not know, but he estimated an average of about 250 each year over a period of more than twenty years.

I suspect that is an underestimate. The actual period of Bryan's lecturing has been more than twenty years. Except when he was traveling around the world, in 1905 and 1906, and for his comparatively brief tenure of the office of secretary of state in Wilson's cabinet, Bryan has been lecturing more or less steadily since about 1894. There is hardly a village of any size, and hardly a county in which Bryan has not lectured more than once. Certainly there is not a state where he has not lectured many times, and in some of the states he has lectured many hundreds of times.

Lacks Human Curiosity.

If Bryan had the kind of curiosity about America that some of us have, the kind of interest in local history, local traditions and local characters—Bryan had happened to have that kind of temperamental equipment—what a mass of information he would have acquired about America, and how entertainingly he could tell it now. If Bryan had had the sympathetic temperament, and the interest in average American human beings, that Booth Tarkington, for example, has, or that Charles Dana Gibson, who lectured in his volumes on "Abroad at Home," what a superb book he could write about America and Americans.

Some public men in their Christian lectures carry with them this interest in folks, and this curiosity about America, its local traditions and characters. Victor Mordock, of Kansas, was one such. Mr. Mordock used the opportunities his lecturing gave him

Five Doomed Men Given Reprieves Until Next Year

Christmas Season, Musical Comedy and Warden's Illness Given as Reason.

Ossining, N. Y., December 6.—Word reached five condemned men in the death cell block in Sing Sing prison Saturday night that they will live out this year. They were to have gone to their death in the electric chair next Thursday night. The notice of postponement carries the date of execution over until after January 1, 1925.

Governor Smith has not yet decided definitely how long the reprieves will be extended, but Sing Sing officials learned that the doomed quet will have at least four more weeks to live.

Mr. Edwards was visited at the Bessemer jail Saturday by his wife, Dr. D. B. Edwards, of Selma, and other friends, all of whom expressed their confidence in the physician. It was reported that a large delegation of the doctor's Selma friends would visit him tomorrow.

Sentiment plays a large part in the other reasons. There is a general feeling at the prison that such a wholesale execution as had been arranged would be mockery of the approaching Christmas season. The fourth reason advanced was that the men would have had to go to the chair not long after the walls of the prison chapel would have been echoing to the laughter of their fellow inmates who would be attending a performance of the musical comedy, "Sue Dear," to be given by the inmates next Thursday evening.

Resolution for Elimination of Ministers From Service Introduced by Chicago Man Saturday.

VISITING MINISTERS FILL PULPITS TODAY

Subject of War Probably Will Be Injected Into Many Sermons in Atlanta Churches.

Sentiment among internationally noted religious dignitaries here attending the quadrennial council of Federal Churches of Christ in America, Saturday night was reported overwhelmingly opposed to a resolution asking elimination of chaplains from army and naval forces.

The resolution was branded in some quarters as an outspoken move on the part of an extreme pacifist group, and it was freely predicted that the matter would never be reported on the floor of the council by the committee considering it. In event it should be brought up for definite vote—which probably would be Monday—its decisive defeat was foreseen.

The resolution which, after a short, spirited debate, was referred to the committee on business, was submitted by Charles Clayton Morrison, of Chicago, editor of The Christian Century.

Will Fill Pulpits.

Today—in all of the Protestant churches throughout the city—visiting dignitaries will occupy the various pulpits. And it is not considered unlikely that the subject of war will be injected into the sermons of the visiting ministers.

The convention, which began a week's session here last Wednesday, drew its first breath of recreation Saturday afternoon. No meeting was on the program for the afternoon. In the morning a most busy and important symposium was participated in by Protestant religious leaders from every corner of the world. At the night session, there were addresses on "Christianizing Our Race Relations," by Rev. M. Ashby Jones, of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, Atlanta, and Dr. John Hope, president of Morehouse college.

Mass Meeting Today. A big mass meeting will be held this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the auditorium. This meeting is open to

FLEET MANEUVERS DISTURB JAPAN

Mass Meeting of Citizens Called To Adopt Resolutions Protesting Against U. S. Cruise.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Tokio, December 6.—Resolutions protesting against the planned American naval maneuvers in the Pacific were adopted in principle and a mass meeting to consider the situation called for the middle of this month at a meeting tonight of the Kokumin Taibei, a society for the study of Japanese-American problems.

The resolutions were referred to a special committee for phrasing. The tentative draft declared the projected maneuvers constituted a "menace to the peace of the far east," and recommended their abandonment by the United States.

Literature of a rather inflammatory character was distributed at tonight's meeting. Assertions were made that America is sending experts to Japan to spy on the nation's army and navy and the military situation.

Admiral Yaguchi addressed the meeting, taking a hypothetical situation in which Japan was forced into war with the United States as the basis of his discussion. He declared it would be an easy task for the American forces to bottle up Japan's foreign trade and asserted that with the Philippine Islands as a base, American airplanes could attack Formosa and even Korea without difficulty.

OKADA NOT CONCERNED OVER U. S. NAVY PLANS.

Tokio, December 6.—(By The Associated Press.)—Admiral Okada, the new commander-in-chief of the imperial joint naval squadrons, told the correspondent of the Associated Press that he would assume responsibility for asserting that the imperial navy felt no concern about the American navy's proposed Pacific maneuvers.

Such exercises, carried out 3,000 miles from Japan, "although maybe on a little larger scale and of greater duration" than usual naval maneuvers, "signify very little in our eyes," he said.

He said that were he a statesman he would feel far more deeply about the attitude of the press, "ever intent back the horrors of middle ages. Ten million men, women and children perished, misery reached a new zenith during that terrific catastrophe, but through it all the bolsheviks remained standing, stuck to their posts at the helm of the ship of state, maintained their hold on the greatest republic of the face of the earth.

Dr. A. A. Johnson, prominent agricultural educator, of New York, and formerly connected with the North Georgia Agricultural college at Dalton, Georgia, where he married the daughter of Rev. G. R. Glenn, returned from Russia three months ago, after having made three trips to that country since the 1917 overturn, and is of the belief that bolshevism has come to stay. Of course the doctor does not champion the tenets of communism, he is not an agitator or a radical, who would introduce the soviet form of administration in the United States, but he is an impartial observer, a man who looks upon this wondrous kaleidoscope of Russia's revolution with a clear head and a cool searching eye. He has seen without the slightest prejudice of preconceived notions, he has studied Russia impartially, he saw the leaders of the revolution, had many long conversations with them, mixed with the peasants, the workers, the soldiers, the new regime in army and navy, studied industrial conditions in the great cities and wandered down into the remotest villages of the vast empire, amid the colorful bazaars of Tartars and Moslems, journey over the endless steppes of White Russia, the Ukraine, and saw the operation of the world's greatest oil fields in the Baku region and on the Persian frontiers.

On three different occasions he went into Russia and each time he noted tremendous improvement. He was in Russia some months ago when the world's greatest oil fields in the Baku region and on the Persian frontiers were being developed. He did not notice anything unusual. We were told there was some disagreement between the peasants and government officials, but there were no

LADIES! LOOK YOUNG,
DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.
Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—(adv.)

Perfect Freedom.
"During my stay in Russia I want to make it clear that I was allowed perfect freedom to go wherever I liked. If I wanted to visit a prison there were no hasty preparations for my coming. I picked my prison at random and was allowed to question and find out all of the inmates. I moved through Russia with as perfect a sense of security as I would in any state of America. There were no curfew hours, no military bands, and the people's commissars, like Trotsky, Kalinin and Tchitcherine, did not bother me. Reports as to the latitudes of Lettish troops which must forever protect Trotsky when he walks out are ridiculous. He goes and comes whenever he feels like it and even in the densest traffic he moves without guards," said Dr. Johnson.

The impression he received while in Russia was that the men at the head of things were tremendously in earnest. To them the administration of the affairs of 150 million people was a matter of life and death. They will adopt a certain method and find out a while that it does not work, that it is impracticable and then they will change it without any delay. Responsibility is not a light matter. If you do not succeed, but you are not a mere formalist, but you are a man who knows your failure and go to jail if the authorities discover you have blundered. That is their way of looking at things. They are not afraid to admit that it works for efficiency."

Dr. Johnson handed us a chart, full of intricate drawings and interesting details. It showed a circle from which lines emanated in all directions. The circle, he explained, was the result of the four great republics, which controlled directly and indirectly through smaller presidiums the destinies of the huge people in every department and phase of life.

"This chart was prepared by one of the branches of government administration indicated in this chart actually exists. That indeed, I think is the drawback in Russia today. They are too highly organized. They rely too much on theory."

From a discussion of the operation of the government of Russia, a system as intricate and scientific as a delicate laboratory experiment, the conversation drifted to the personalities at the head of that organization. With the exception of Lenin, Dr. Johnson has had intimate and long conversations with all of them—Trotsky, Tchitcherine, Peters, Lunacharsky, Bukharin, Krassin, Weinstein, Kalinin, Kamenoff, Kolantai and Dzerzhinsky. The most remarkable feature about the lives of these leaders is the fact that every one of them has gone through years of bitter exile and poverty, many of them have spent years in Siberia, have felt the clang and clatter of chains on hands and feet. And that not for a week or so, Rykoff, the president of the union of soviet republics, spent seven years in solitary confinement in a Siberian dungeon. Still none of the leaders has any bitterness in his spiritual makeup. When not engaged in the intricate business of statecraft, they are happy, unconcerned human beings, laughing and telling stories, smoking their eternal cigarettes, naive in certain respects, but after all very human, not at all the grotesque creations of the popular imagination in western countries.

"Trotsky is a human dynamo, electric and energetic. He has a remarkable mind and a tremendous organizing ability. What generations of czars and officials could not accomplish neither by force nor treachery, he has achieved in the short period of six years—the formation of an efficient, well-drilled and well-equipped army. Not only is Leon Trotsky a profound thinker, but he is also a thorough scholar and a forceful writer. He represents the aggressive type of revolutionist. The native Russian is slower, given to dreaming, a mystic at heart. Trotsky is a mixture of imagination and marvelous sense of reality. For there is one thing that amazes every visitor to Russia and that is the merciless self-criticism of the leaders and of the people in general. They do not shut their eyes to mistakes. They are the first to recognize them and to speak about them with merciless inquiry. Of course this brings forth the most fantastic events on the part of correspondents and predictions of collapse and decline. Instead it actually produces amelioration and improvement."

Amazing Frankness.
Trotsky, anxious to answer all my questions, told outright and officials, who came in during our interview, to warn him not to let the foreigners know what he was saying. "There is nothing to hide," he said. "Ask me whatever you want. If I know the answer I will give it to you."

"When the interview terminated the war minister rushed out of the room and the last glimpse I had of him was a figure dashing up the stairs three at a time, to the direction of the war college, which was on the floor above."

"Tchitcherine is an aristocrat. Charged with the duties of the foreign office, this man has shown the world that he is a diplomat of the first order. Humanity cannot lightly forget his attitude at the conference of Geneva, where he practically checkmated the statesmen of Europe, including Lloyd George, Briand and Lord Curzon. He has a somewhat effeminate voice and never seems to take a rest. He gives interviews and attends conferences at all times of the night or day. Personally he is to me him at 11 o'clock at night. The little man is a Hercules of strength and will-power. On his shoulders rests the task of working out the thousands of details involved in the network of treaties extending to nearly every nation on the face of the globe."

Dr. Johnson was asked if he had met Karakan, the soviet ambassador to China, who is said to be one of Mr. Tchitcherine's ablest assistants. "There is a possibility that I have met him, but his appearance and personality have escaped me. I have met Litvinoff, Weinstein and Krassin, the subordinates of Mr. Tchitcherine. Every one of these men strike you like ordinary business chaps. If you happened to see Krassin walking down Whitehall street with his portfolio under his arm, there would be nothing unusual about him. You would not even turn your head. The same applies to his colleagues in the foreign office."

"Louise Bryant tells an interesting story about Tchitcherine and Karakan. Tchitcherine is a notoriously bad dresser, though in Italy he donned the silk hat and the frock coat. Tchitcherine's suit was literally in rags when the Turkish treaty and the Afghan treaty and the Persian treaty and all the other Oriental treaties had to be signed. These affairs had to be arranged with more or less bourgeois pomp, since the Orientals are rather keen on ceremony. So Mr. Karakan, taking a long chance, went ahead and ordered a new suit for Mr. Tchitcherine from a soviet tailor, then ordered morning while Tchitcherine slept. He changed the suits. In a few minutes he came rushing back again and exclaimed with emotion, 'here's a new note from Lord Curzon.' Tchitcherine was up in one bound and struggling into his new trousers."

"Tchitcherine is a brilliant mind, but somewhat of an eccentricity," according to Dr. Johnson.

But after all it is the daily life of the Russian peasant and the town dweller that is the most significant. He goes his way serenely, is little influenced by political dogmas and least of all by the doctrines of Karl Marx, of which the champions live in the great cities.

Private Trading Flourishes.
"The indifference of the peasants is the greatest obstacle in Russia. They have been used to centuries of serfdom. We must not forget that 60 years ago they still were serfs and considering that, the achievements have been remarkable. They live on the land but they do not own it. Property rights are vested in the state. But they may sell their products and they are doing it. There are no objections in Russia to selling farm products or in fact any kind of things. A manufacturer may manufacture shoes and sell them in a certain town. There are no restrictions against such things, though we have been told a different story in America. But that same manufacturer must take the consequences of the government, which has its own shoe stores, suddenly sends 500,000 pairs to the city where he is selling, dumps them on the market at half his price and so makes it impossible to compete with the state manufacturers." Professor Johnson said.

"There is nothing that will make the Russians so excited, that is, the bolshevik leaders, as the question of the dictatorship. I talked to Weinstein about it and he almost got out of hand. 'We must have a dictatorship,' he said. 'The peasants do not know what to do. And they are absolutely indifferent as to their fate. We must educate them to stand on their own feet. We must do for these people what parents do for their own children. As soon as they know we will be glad to step down,' Weinstein said."

"One of the most astonishing things about the bolshevik leaders is their remarkable knowledge of revolutions. If you want to talk to them about a certain revolution in South America, you must first make sure of your facts, for they are informed upon every detail. The same applies about the American revolution and the French revolution."

Verred in History.
"I was talking once to one of the leaders, I think it was Weinstein. I deplored the fact that Russia was governed without the instrumentality of a constitution. Weinstein jumped up. 'But America was governed without a constitution for seven years and I promise you that before we have a constitution, seven years will have functioned seven years we will have a constitution,' he said. I could hardly believe it, but subsequent investigations on my part showed me that the Russians knew more about the history of my own country than I did."

"They have the land of the greatest potential wealth in the world, in Siberia. Gold, platinum, iron ore and manganese, copper and coal in inexhaustible quantities. Under the czars these immense deposits were allowed to lie undisturbed. The bolsheviks have begun exploitation. But they need help in this matter. They haven't got the technical machinery and they haven't got the experts. The same thing applies to agriculture. They need the equipment. That is why I am in favor of recognizing Russia for I believe that one of the greatest markets for American manufactured goods is to be found in Russia."

"At the great fairs of Nizhni Novgorod and the agricultural exposition at Moscow last year simply millions of visitors poured in from the remote districts to watch the operations of American farm machinery. There is a market a, the present time for 500 million dollars worth of farm machinery in Russia," said Dr. Johnson.

"The moujik is anxious to learn. The reception we got at the farm houses was wonderful. Their hospitality ought to be an example for higher civilized people. You cannot think without partaking of some food or drink."

"American-American."
"A curious thing about the re-moté villages and the towns is the fact that they have coined a new word there. If they want to say: 'Put some life in it, hurry up or make it snappy,' they just yell out 'American-American.' That is their way of expressing efficiency and up-to-date methods also. Their admiration for America is unbounded. And this applies not only to the peasants but it applies to the highest soviet dignitaries."

"Throughout the four republics there are huge broadcasting and radio receiving stations. In each village a man is appointed to receive the news sent out by Moscow. He writes it out upon a bulletin board and at certain set hours the peasants gather around and he reads the news to them. They stand there in great clusters, silent and pensive, listening to the news of the world. I was amazed to hear peasants discuss our own scandal in quite an intelligent way. In fact when the Russians want to say that a man is tainted with graft, that he is not carrying out the demands of his office in just the right manner, they use the phrase: 'He is smeared with oil.' They got that from a knowledge of our internal affairs," he remarked.

"Trotsky's army is being utilized as a great force of civilization. The soldiers are compelled to learn reading and writing. When they go home to their villages, they form the nucleus of classes in reading and writing. In this way it is hoped to wipe out illiteracy in the huge domains of the soviet republics. Last year they had 50,000,000 acres under cultivation, this year they will have 150,000,000 acres. They have no bull weevil and the average crop amounts to one and one-tenth of a bale per acre," said Dr. Johnson.

"Bolshevism has come to stay. Not the dreams of millennium at the first days of the revolution, but a saner, wiser attempt to bring Russia out of the slough of despondency, in which seven years of war, revolution and counter revolution had thrown the country. The leaders are earnest men, who want to restore happiness and light to the people. I do not agree in the least with some of their doctrines of political administration and I told them frankly. But they are doing the best they can. Each time I revisited Russia I noticed a vast improvement. I think the day is not far distant when Russia will again become a great factor in world affairs. But I think that there is a wonderful opportunity for American business there. I could not be blind to that. In the Donetz coal basin, the richest in the world, they are doing immense work, but they haven't got the equipment, the same applies to the gold mines and the platinum mines in Siberia and the Ural."

A Balanced Budget.
"Incidentally," said the doctor, that has a balanced budget. Not on rubles either. Their new standard money, the chevronet, is based on the gold standard. I was allowed to inspect the gold reserve personally. ## 'Golden Rule' Observance Urged by Noted Protestant Declaring that the world is living in a "golden-rule age"—an age in which the great rule is becoming more widely accepted and generally practiced, Dr. S. Parks Cadman, newly-elected president of the Federal Council of Churches, Saturday enthusiastically endorsed observance of "Golden-Rule Sunday" today.

The day set aside by the international conference at Geneva last year is sponsored by the Near East Relief and is a day when the people of this and other countries are asked to eat a simple meal such as is served orphans in the Near East, and to then contribute toward the feeding of 40,000 of these orphans.

"We are living in a golden age, not an age dominated by gold, as some people cynically assert," declared Dr. Cadman, "but an age in which gold is so plentiful that our government has had to reduce our income taxes and is considering further reduction at the next session of our congress, and an age in which the golden rule is becoming more widely accepted, and more generally practiced, than before in the history of the world. Perhaps we would do well to call it a golden-rule age."

While pessimists can find many things to worry over, a fair look around us will reveal more organizations and more effective organizations among boys and girls and professional and business men and women for the purpose of promoting the square deal, and mutually helpful cooperation than could be found in any previous age.

Day Widely Accepted.
"This is not only a golden-rule age but golden-rule day, so designated by the representatives of societies in 22 nations interested in the Near East who met last summer in Geneva. It is a day on which the world is asked to think along golden-rule lines and to consider our past accomplishments and our future program in the light of the principle which our Saviour laid down 19 centuries ago and which is accepted in all the other religions of the world."

"On this day we are asked particularly to think of the boys and girls in the land our Saviour made sacred with His earthly ministry. To make the situation real it is suggested that we eat a frugal meal of corn grits, of rice or wheat with bread and cocoa, the usual fare of the orphans who America has rescued out of the wars and deportations which have recently devastated Armenia, Greece and Syria-Palestine."

"Forty-one thousand children are being cared for in those countries as the wards of America's generous heart and we are asked to eat the meal in fellowship with them—a communion meal with golden-rule believers and observers in many countries."

Contribution Urged.

"Some of us will eat the prescribed meal this Sunday noon, others plan to do so tonight, others yet to do so on Sunday or on next Sunday or on any day in December. It is suggested that we make it a day of plain living and high thinking, count the blessing Providence has given us and ask ourselves if we are faithful stewards of the talents and properties God has given us to use. We should decide if possible to set aside a definite amount weekly or monthly for the cause of the church and charity or a definite percentage of our income. This amount may be sent to Near East Relief, 151 Fifth avenue, New York, or to any state office of the organization. If the offering is liberal the 41,000 children will continue to have frugal meals throughout the winter."

"One hesitates to think of what would happen if the offering were not a liberal one. If our usual generosity is exceeded, however, it may be possible for Near East Relief to reach out beyond the orphanages and do something for the other 100,000 orphans who are starving and dying at a rapid rate in the refugee camps this winter. "Last year the president of the United States and the members of his cabinet ate golden-rule dinners and we suppose that they are doing so again this year. Not only the high officials of our nation, but those of many other nations, men and women charged with the heaviest responsibilities in the world, are eating golden-rule dinners and inviting you to eat in fellowship with them. Our president showed his deep interest this year by taking time out of the recent campaign to eat such a dinner with the ambassadors of the various nations and with other high officials in Washington. He also gave the main address at the dinner."

President Approves.
"You will all agree in the following sentence from the president's address: 'I know you will join me in the hope that what shall be said here and at many other gatherings which will have as their inspiration and purpose will be accepted as significant of earnest hope and determined intent to further in every respect the golden rule of kindness, the reciprocal helpfulness and the real brotherhood of all humanity.'"

"One of the best-loved living poets is Edwin Markham. Mr. Markham says: 'We have committed the golden rule to memory; we should now commit it to life.' It would give us better homes, finance our churches and welfare programs and go far toward enabling us to realize our dreams for the world we would like the world to be."

AVIATOR RESCUED AFTER DRIFTING HOURS UPON SEA

Norfolk, Va., December 6.—Lieutenant Bowman, naval aviator, landed at Baltimore today from the steamship Circinus, which picked him up at sea last night after he had been in a perilous position for several hours by being forced down in his flight from Philadelphia to the Hampton Roads naval air station by engine trouble. Officers at the plane base here were advised that the plane also was salvaged, although badly damaged. Lieutenant Bowman drifted helplessly for several hours until sighted by the steamer.

Essay by Wisconsin Lad Chosen Best in Good Roads Contest

Washington, D. C., December 6.—The story of two roads, simply told in an essay of 700 words, won for John Liska, a student in a Wood county high school, Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, a prize of more than four thousand dollars, according to an announcement today by the highway education board.

Liska is winner of the H. S. First-stone four year university scholarship offered for the best essay by high school students on the subject "The Relation of Improved Highways to Home Life."

Son of a Wisconsin farmer, from personal experience and observation he has written an epic story of a country crossroads, describing the afflictions of those who live on one and the despair of those who dwell on the other. He depicts the influence of home life following road development, and draws a parallel of conditions existing on another road which was not improved.

GUARDS ARRESTED IN LIQUOR THEFT

Chicago, December 6.—Eight members of the guard supposed to have been on a twenty-four hour vigil at the army warehouse from which it became known yesterday hundreds of cases of liquor were stolen, were under arrest today. The stolen liquor was part of a $3,000,000 hoard seized by prohibition agents and deputy United States marshals.

None of the names of the prisoners were divulged and numerous others were expected to be taken into custody. Deputy Chief Marshal Samuel Howard declared the robbery was not as extensive as at first reported. He said between 400 and 500 cases of liquor were missing.

Although the theft was discovered Monday, it is believed that the removal may have covered a period of some time.

The eight guards in custody are civilians. It was said at the federal building, The United States marshal, who is required to furnish civilian guards for the space in the warehouse allotted to him.

Fifteen steel doors were cut away to get to the store and heavy government padlock and bolts were shattered by the robbers, who are believed by federal officers to have had inside assistance.

Deputy marshals maintain a week-day business hours day guard but are not on duty nights. The quarter-master department of the army, to whom the warehouse belongs, was required to maintain a 24-hour watch of the warehouse, however.

Much of the liquor taken was seized in frequent federal raids shortly after the advent of prohibition. An inventory disclosed that the lot included more than 600 cases of fine old Bourbon whiskeys, and about 350 cases of rare vintages, besides an undetermined number of cases of corned beef, making more than twenty truckloads.

Balkan Quarrel Fixed in Court By Irish Lawyer

New York, December 6.—Without calling on the league of nations for assistance, William F. McKenna, an assistant district attorney who claims descent from the Irish grand dukes of misty antiquity, settled a Balkan problem Saturday which had as much explosive power as some of the incidents which have started Giuseppe Piacini, an Italian, was arrested in the complaint of Leo Cornacovich, a Bulgarian, who said Piacini dropped Greek coins in the slots of his automatic restaurant to pay for an order of Hungarian goulash, French fried potatoes, salad with Russian dressing and Turkish pudding.

"I think," said Mr. McKenna, who already could hear the faint and distant rumble of the Balkan war drums, "I think this matter might be settled without any of the awful consequences which have ensued upon other disputes of a similar nature, if we only remain calm and refrain from sending ultimatums. I propose, your honor, that the gentleman from Italy make reparation to the gentleman from Bulgaria, without any indemnity clause."

"Marvelous," the court remarked as Giuseppe paid over 65 cents in nickels.

Mr. McKenna will be proposed for next year's Nobel peace prize.

TRUSTEES REGRET ALUMNI ATTACKS UPON PROFESSORS

Hartford, Conn., December 6.—Trustees of Trinity college, meeting today, expressed regret at a reported attack by a group of New York alumni upon three members of the faculty, and issued a statement to the alumni and undergraduates of the college in which they asserted that they had the utmost confidence in the loyalty of the entire faculty.

No mention was made of the removal of Professors Frank C. Babbitt, Arthur Adams or Horace C. Swan was received from the New York group, as has been expected, but the trustees took cognizance of the reported criticism of them as alleged "obstructionists."

President Remsen B. Ogilby also issued a statement in which he classed the three professors among his "ablest counselors."

CONVICTED OF MURDER GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Clarksville, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Hobbsman supreme court has just closed a two weeks' session, which was presided over by Judge J. B. Jones. The most important case disposed of on the calendar was the state vs. Reuben Whitfield, charged with the murder of H. A. Keller, a Mount Airy policeman, last spring. Whitfield was found guilty by the jury and recommended to life imprisonment.

SAUNDERS BACKS UP ON RECEIVER PLEA

Memphis, Tenn., December 6.—Clarence Saunders, former head of the Piggly Wiggly corporation, today filed a motion before Judge Sime H. Hooper, of the United States district court at Cincinnati, sitting by designation in the Saunders-Piggly Wiggly litigation, which, among other things, asked the dismissal of Saunders' prayer for a receiver, or receivers, for the Piggly Wiggly corporation.

PENNSY ROAD OFFICIAL DROPS DEAD IN OFFICE

Philadelphia, December 6.—Robert C. Wright, general traffic manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, dropped dead in his office here today. Mr. Wright was 55, and had been with the railroad for 30 years.

Mr. Wright was born in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, December 5, 1869. He was educated in the public schools of Baltimore and was graduated from the Baltimore City College. He entered railroad work in 1888 as a clerk of the Northern Central Railway at Baltimore.

COBB COUNTY ELECTS COUNTY COMMISSIONER

Marietta, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—In an election held here Saturday, Judge J. M. Stone was elected county commissioner defeating two candidates.

OFFICE ATTACHES HONOR J. T. ROSE AT BIG BANQUET

Josiah T. Rose, collector of internal revenue for Georgia, was a guest of about 55 office attaches at a banquet in his honor at the Ansley hotel Friday night. John D. Kieffer acted as toastmaster and speeches were made by Mr. Rose, A. A. Aklin, W. B. Johnson and J. Parsons.

Mr. Rose complimented the work being done by employees of the Georgia department, and credited them with giving his office a high record of efficiency. This distinction came from David H. Blair, commissioner of revenues, Washington.

Collector Rose has been a resident of Atlanta for about 20 years, coming here from Ohio his native state. Before his connection with the revenue department, he was prominent in Atlanta business circles, serving as southern representative of the American Bridge company, president of the Atlantic Steel company and vice president and general manager of the J. B. McCarty Construction company.

Healthiest Girl 'Grew That Way' She Tells Judges

Chicago, December 6.—Sixteen-year-old Inez Hardin, who has feet as flat as copper on the heat, but has been chosen the healthiest girl in America, is going back home to Marigold, Miss.

Behind her five simple rules. At first, Inez claimed there weren't any rules and that she had merely hoed and worked away in the kitchen until she "just grew that way."

But the directors of the competition, in which Inez scored a high health mark of 94.4 per cent over 35,000 other girls entered in the national boys' and girls' clubs contest, finally persuaded Inez that it was up to her to help some measure for the 49,999 other girls as well as all those who weren't in the competition.

Here they are:
Sleep ten hours a night.
Drink a quart of milk a day.
Eat plenty of vegetables.
Don't wear high heels.
Don't use face powder or rouge.
Inez has never worn high heels and she was the only girl among the contestants here who had a perfect back.

Inventor Must Be Poet, Says Edison; Gives Ford Opinion

New York, December 6.—Inventors must be poets, according to Thomas A. Edison, the greatest inventor of them all.

This assertion, together with Edison's opinion of his old pal, Henry Ford, was revealed by Edward N. Hurley in a speech to a group of engineers here. Hurley referred briefly to a telegram he received from Edison while chairman of the shipping board during the war, and then read the telegram as follows:

"You ask where Ford is. Let me explain. He is an inventor. Inventors must be poets so they may have imagination. To be commercially successful, they must have the practicality of an Irish contractor's foreman and a Jewish broker. These wild children of nature necessarily are a puzzle to the captain of industry like yourself. Don't try to understand them. Get Ford in somehow with the happy shipping board to help. Your trouble will be to get him started. At present he is pushing Liberty Motors.—Edison."

PRaises CERAMIC WORK BEING DONE BY TECH

Macon, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Dr. R. C. Fountain, of Mercer university, was a delegate from the Citizens club to the opening of the ceramic building at Georgia Tech, made a report to the club yesterday.

The Citizens are fostering a movement for further development of Georgia's natural resources. Dr. Fountain told of the possibilities in the development of the mineral resources of the state and predicted that the ceramic course at Georgia Tech will result in the establishment of concerns in the production of manufactured products from the clay products that are available here in middle Georgia.

He said that Georgia Tech is doing a great thing in establishing this department.

HOLD LAST SERVICES FOR BUN WYLIE TODAY

Funeral services for Bun Wylie, president of the James R. Wylie Realty company, who died Friday at his home, 107 Pearl S. Shadburn, will be held from the chapel of Barclay and Brandon at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Rev. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church, will officiate. Interment will be at Oakland cemetery.

BUFORD OFFICIALS ELECTED SATURDAY

Buford, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—In the city election held here Saturday S. J. Busha was elected mayor over D. A. Irwin, by four votes out of a total of 500 votes cast.

H. B. Beard, W. L. Shadburn and Vick Allen were elected to council; W. H. Hutcheson, city court sheriff, and W. M. Shadburn, clerk of the city court.

MOTLOW IS GIVEN GOOD CHARACTER

St. Louis, December 6.—Pictures of the Pullman car, in which Clarence T. Pullis, conductor, was slain by Lem Motlow, Tennessee distiller and reputed multi-millionaire, on trial for murder in circuit court here, were admitted as evidence after a lengthy verbal skirmish between the state's attorneys and the defense. The march of character witnesses, halted when the photographs were submitted, was resumed in today's session of the trial. Court was adjourned at noon till Monday.

The pictures were submitted by the defense in order to offset the testimony of Joseph Droida, state witness, who testified as an eye-witness yesterday. He had testified that he had witnessed the shooting, which occurred at the front end of the Pullman car in which the defendant had intended to return to his home, from almost the opposite end of the coach.

Character witnesses concluded today with W. R. Cole, president of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad; W. C. Pollard, general agent of an insurance company in Nashville, and six members of the local Merchants' exchange, who testified as to the good reputation of the defendant. Mr. Cole described him as a "gentle soul" and "exceedingly kind and expansive when drinking."

Another character witness was Judge Malcolm R. Patterson, former governor of Tennessee and noted lecturer, who said the defendant's reputation in his home state was good, but that he did not know of his standing in St. Louis.

Several members of the Merchants' Exchange of this city, who visited Motlow after his arrest in East St. Louis immediately after the shooting, testified that he showed a brilliant and sustaining the defense's contention that Motlow had been struck before he fired.

$221,977.58 EXPENDED IN LA FOLLETTE RACE

Washington, December 6.—Expenditures of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign committee to December 2 as reported today to the clerk of the house, totaled $221,977.58 and receipts amounted to $225,935.30.

W. T. Rawleigh, treasurer of the committee, and heaviest contributor to the fund, said in filing the report that receipts after October 30 were $27,833.05, and expenditures $48,446.40. Previous reports from the committee showed that before October 30 receipts amounted to $198,083.45 and expenditures $181,531.18. The report did not indicate whether the committee on December 2 had any debts.

Rawleigh, a Freeport, Ill., merchant, was shown to have contributed a total of $44,000. The only contributor of more than $1,000 besides him listed in the final report was Mrs. Dorothy Whitney Straight, of New York, who gave $2,500. A report filed by the Steuben national campaign committee, showed that it has received $24,250.15 and had expended $21,321.62 in support of the La Follette-Wheeler ticket.

SCHOOL IS SUED FOR BOY'S SERVICE

Kansas City, Mo., December 6.—Alleging that her son, Wendell, 16, was permitted to take part in a football game in 1922 against her expressed wishes, Mrs. Pearl V. Hatch has instituted suit against the Kansas Military Academy, Oswego, Kan., and Clyde R. Terry, former superintendent of the institution for $5,000 damages.

Mrs. Hatch asserted in her petition that the boy suffered bruises and sprains in the game. She declared that when he entered the military academy she directed the school authorities not to permit him to take part in any violent exercise as Wendell was frail.

HOUSE VOTES TO TAKE WEEK OFF CHRISTMAS

Washington, December 6.—Members of the house decided today that a one week lay-off over Christmas was sufficient and without a dissenting vote adopted a resolution offered by Representative Longworth providing for a recess from Saturday, December 20, to Monday, December 22.

Senate concurrence is needed. House leaders planned to limit the new year's recess to one day—January 1.

'Little Miss Georgia' Offer Is Growing in Popularity

Are you a hustler? If so, you're enrolled with scores of others in The Constitution's "Little Miss Georgia" offer—the most sensational free Christmas toy offer ever made by this paper.

If you're not enlisted, you still have time to get in on a good thing and win "Little Miss Georgia," the greatest and most wonderful of dollies, long before the advent of Christmas.

"Little Miss Georgia" is a magnificent doll that stands 24 inches high in her dainty leather shoes. Her most distinctive feature is that she "rolls her eyes"—an innovation in American doll manufacture.

MUSSOLINI RECEIVES VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Rome, December 6.—Defending his administration, particularly in its conduct of domestic affairs, Premier Mussolini emerged victorious in the senate, as he had previously in the chamber of deputies, and received a vote of confidence 206 to 51.

The premier adopted the same tactics before the senate as in addressing the chamber. He declared he would adhere to his program of re-establishing discipline, purifying the fascist party and suppressing all illegals, and six members of the chamber, who said the government was criticized, said, were in the process of being corrected.

Answering the charge that he planned to remain in power at any cost, Signor Mussolini declared that if the king bade him go, he would instantly obey, as became a soldier, but that he could not recognize a similar command from "His Majesty, the Corriere de la Serra," an opposition newspaper.

SCHOOL IS SUED FOR BOY'S SERVICE

Kansas City, Mo., December 6.—Alleging that her son, Wendell, 16, was permitted to take part in a football game in 1922 against her expressed wishes, Mrs. Pearl V. Hatch has instituted suit against the Kansas Military Academy, Oswego, Kan., and Clyde R. Terry, former superintendent of the institution for $5,000 damages.

Mrs. Hatch asserted in her petition that the boy suffered bruises and sprains in the game. She declared that when he entered the military academy she directed the school authorities not to permit him to take part in any violent exercise as Wendell was frail.

HOUSE VOTES TO TAKE WEEK OFF CHRISTMAS

Washington, December 6.—Members of the house decided today that a one week lay-off over Christmas was sufficient and without a dissenting vote adopted a resolution offered by Representative Longworth providing for a recess from Saturday, December 20, to Monday, December 22.

PHYSICIAN BEGINS 11TH DAY OF FAST

New York, December 6.—Dr. W. Z. Kuntler, 65-year-old physician, who on November 28 began a fast of indefinite duration today observed the tenth day of his abstinence from food by walking 24 miles. He reported that during the first five days of his fast he took no water or fluid of any kind, but he now takes small quantities of water. Since the first few days he has felt no hunger. He intends to continue the experiment as an aid to health, until he feels a craving for food, he said.

ATLANTA'S FIRST LIGHT OPERA IS ANNOUNCED

With each star being made on an individual basis, with no other organization providing any part of the production, it is hoped that all of the stars brought here to play and sing in the operas, who prove satisfactory to their audiences, can be prevailed upon to come again, thus associating them with the city and making them, as much as possible, Atlantans for the summer months at least.

The scenery to be used will be made and painted by Atlanta artists. It is probable that one of the leading operatic producers of the country will be brought here to superintend each production.

Permanent Organization.

The Atlanta Light Opera association is a permanent organization, expecting eventually and as soon as a stadium can be provided, to furnish summer opera out of doors in a great amphitheater perched somewhat after the plan which has been so successful in St. Louis, Chicago, Baltimore and other large cities.

Later announcements will be made as to operas chosen for production next summer and contracts with singers, dancers and musicians.

Seats will be sold in advance for the entire season of six operas, so that purchasers may be assured of their choice of location for whichever performance of the week best suits their convenience. Seats for individual performances will, of course, also be on sale both before and during the season.

The board of directors of the Light Opera association is made up of 23 of Atlanta's representative business and professional men who are interested in music for the benefit and pleasure of the community.

Officers and Directors.

Officers are C. H. Candler, president; V. H. Krieger, secretary; and V. H. Krieger, secretary; and V. H. Krieger, secretary.

Wilkinson and Fred J. Paxon, vice presidents; Henry W. Davis, treasurer; Robert S. Parker, secretary; Fred J. Paxon, chairman executive committee; Mel R. Wilkinson, chairman finance committee; C. B. Bidwell, general manager.

The board of directors is composed of Ivan Allen, H. M. Atkinson, W. M. Brownlee, C. H. Candler, John S. Cohen, W. D. Ellis, Jr., W. O. Foote, W. H. Glenn, Lindsey Hopkins, Clark Howell, J. M. B. Hoxsey, Edwin F. Johnson, Harrison Jones, V. H. Krieger, Oscar Mills, Wilmer L. Moore, Sr., James B. Nevin, Robert S. Parker, Fred J. Paxon, W. L. Peel, W. R. C. Smith, Mel R. Wilkinson, Henry W. Davis and C. B. Bidwell.

Stomach Trouble?

Health is Most Important to You.

Columbus, Ga.—"Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is certainly a grand medicine for stomach trouble. I have suffered greatly all my life from a disordered stomach. My food seemed to set so heavy, no matter what I ate. I have taken many of the medicines advertised for this trouble, but none of them has ever come up to Golden Medical Discovery for giving prompt and lasting relief. Whenever I have a sluggish liver, with sick headaches and constipation, I have found Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets a very efficient remedy. They do not gripe or cause any other distressing condition such as a great many pills do."—Mrs. Laura Kimbrough, 3503 Erlene avenue.

Obtain this Medical Discovery of Doctor Pierce's at your nearest drug store, in tablets or liquid or send to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package, and write for free medical advice.—(adv.)

APPLY SULPHUR ON YOUR ECZEMA SKIN

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Menthosulphur. Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist, because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Menthosulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.—(adv.)

Several Unusual Words Lurk in Sunday Puzzle

BY BARBARA AND RONALD RANSOM
85 Juniper Street, Atlanta, Ga.

(All words used in Constitution crossword puzzle contest are found in Webster's Dictionary, Reference History Edition.)

Here is one of the best puzzles yet submitted in the contest run by The Constitution for Atlanta-made crossword problems. The Ransoms have built an exceptionally well-arranged puzzle and the words they use, while not exceptionally long, include some never found before in such a puzzle and for which you'll probably have to refer to your dictionary for verification. The only criticism to be made in the puzzle is that, while the black square arrangement balances, the pattern it forms is rather more odd than customary.

The definitions, however, are good and the Ransoms are to be congratulated on their work.

This contest will positively close on December 14. All puzzles, to be eligible for the prize, must be in the mails not later than midnight, December 14. The prize is a season pass to the Howard theater, offered by Howard Price Kingstone, manager. It will be a long-lasting source of pride to walk into that theater, week after week, to see your favorite stars of the screen in their newest and best productions, and know, as you pass the ticket office without even hesitating, that it was your own brain work which earned you the right.

In making your puzzles, make 'em as hard as you can without making the solution impossible. That doesn't mean you must hide your words behind imperfect definitions. Rather the definitions must be accurate and must fully describe the word used. But the words selected may be as unusual as you can find, provided only that they are to be found in the official dictionary, which is Webster's, reference history edition.

And, remember, write on one side of the paper only. The hundreds of puzzles submitted make it impossible for the editor to cope with them, or their definitions, which means that puzzles submitted with essential writing on both sides of the paper will, perforce, be eliminated. Also remember to put your name and address on each piece of paper used.

And, number your puzzles correctly. Several have come in improperly numbered, which of course also eliminates them from consideration. Next week some of the harder puzzles submitted will be published. There are some excellent ones already in, but not a one that is certain of the prize. So get busy, sharpen up the old pencil, turn over the pages of your Webster, and you stand as good a chance as anybody of getting the prize.

The solution of the puzzle published in Saturday's Constitution is given herewith:

Horizontal.
1. A filamentous structure.
4. A traditional story.

G. M. A. Postpones
Full Dress Parade
To Honor Governor

The full dress parade in honor of Governor Clifford Walker, which was scheduled for the G. M. A. campus at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon has been postponed indefinitely, out of respect for the memory of the governor's father, whose funeral will be held this morning.

Authorities of the institution announced Saturday that the regular Sunday afternoon dress parade will be held and that the governor will be honored at some later date. About 800 visitors and friends of the school enjoyed the parade last Sunday afternoon, which was presided over by Colonel Ryther, commanding officer of Fort McPherson.

A FEVERISH COLD QUICKLY OVERCOME

If the children are feverish, fretful from a head cold or catarrh with nostrils clogged and head all stuffed-up, just apply a little pure, antiseptic cream into the nostril. It penetrates through every air passage, soothing and healing swollen, inflamed membrane and they obtain instant relief.

Try this. Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Nothing clears the head so quickly. Count fifty. All the stuffiness, dryness, struggling for breath will be gone. This is so much better than drugging children that every mother should use Ely's Cream Balm.—(adv.)

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

Sherwood Anderson's Story

BY LUCILLE COBB, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY.

Readers who expect to find the mere facts of Sherwood Anderson's life in his book, "A Story Teller's Story," will be disappointed, for the book is not autobiography in the accepted sense. "These notes," writes Mr. Anderson, "make no pretense of being a record of fact. That isn't their object. They are merely notes of impressions, a record of vagrant thoughts, hopes, ideas that have floated through the mind of one present-day American. It is likely I have not, and will not, put into them one truth, measuring by the ordinary standards of truth. It is my aim to be true to the essence of things. That's what I am after."

According to the title page, the book is "the tale of an American writer's journey through his own imaginative world and through the world of facts, with many of his experiences and impressions among other writers—told in many notes—in four books—and an epilogue."

Sherwood Anderson was born in Camden, Ohio, on September 13, 1876. At this time his father was a merchant and had shops in Camden, Morning Sun and Caledonia, Ohio. According to our author, his father and President Harding once played in the same brass band at Caledonia. Although his father was never "a good provider," his son would not care to trade him for a more provident and thoughtful father. "As I write this I am remembering that my father, like myself, could never be singly himself but must always be a playing some role, everlasting strutting on the stage of life in some part not his own."

A Tale-Teller.

Of himself, Mr. Anderson writes: "I am the tale-teller, the man who sits by the fire waiting for listeners, the man whose life must be led into the world of his fancies. I am one destined to follow the little crooked path of the tale-teller."

When Sherwood Anderson's stories began to be published in the magazines, he was often accused of being under the Russian influence, so he began to read the Russians to find out if the statement could be true.

words of men's speech through the uncharted paths of forests of fancy. What my father should have been I am to become. Through long years of the baffling uncertainty, that only such men as myself can ever know, I am to creep with trembling steps forward in a strange land, following the ways of the ever-changing words, the little words, striving to learn all the ways of the ever-changing words, the smooth-lying little words, the hard, jagged, cutting words, the round, in-lodious, healing words. All the words I am in the end to come to know a little and to attempt to use for my purpose, have at the same time, the power in them both to heal and to destroy. How often am I to be made sick by words, how often am I to be healed by words, before I can come at all near to man's estate!"

Mr. Anderson says of Gertrude Stein's book: "It excited me as one might grow excited in going into a new and wonderful country where everything is strange—a sort of Lewis and Clark expedition for me. Here were words laid before me as the painter had laid the color pans in my presence. My mind did a kind of jerking flop and after Miss Stein's book had come into my hands I spent three days going about with a tablet of paper in my pocket and making new and strange combinations of words. The result was I thought a new familiarity with the words of my own vocabulary. I became a little conscious where before I had been unconscious. Perhaps it was then I really fell in love with words, wanted to give each word I used every chance to show itself at its best."

Cabbage Soup.

When Sherwood Anderson's stories began to be published in the magazines, he was often accused of being under the Russian influence, so he began to read the Russians to find out if the statement could be true.

"This I found, that in Russian novels, the characters are always eating cabbage soup and I have no doubt Russian writers eat it too. 'What the critics say is no doubt true, I told myself; for, like so many of the Russian writers, I was raised largely on cabbage soup.'"

Dr. Joseph Collins, in his book, "Taking the Literary Pulse," writes of Sherwood Anderson: "The short story is his successful medium, and aside from 'Marching Men,' none of his 'long talks' is worth particular pursuit. In 'Horses and Men,' long and short tales from our American life, and in the volume entitled 'The Triumph of the Egg,' he is to be seen for what he is: a master of words. Remy de Gourmont said beautiful prose should have rhythm which makes one doubt if it be prose. Mr. Anderson writes beautiful prose. . . . In none of his books has he shown such consummate mastery of the inevitable word as in these last tales. Likewise the materials of the incidents or tales are seasoned, sound and perspicuously selected. Like the hero of the tale entitled 'The Triumph of a Modern,' Mr. Anderson has done it with words. He has uncovered treasure that will suffice him a long time. Mr. Anderson's knowledge is based on intuition and experience as his art is founded on inherent talent and assiduous study of the English impressionists."

William Rose Benet, in the Saturday Review, writes of "A Story Teller's Story": "On the whole, this book is a curiously faithful record. It exhibits ever and again the fullest powers of one of the truly creative writers of our time. It possesses documentary value. And Anderson has the gift of intimacy. The lack of true intimacy in the relationships of modern life is what puzzles and discourages him. He came to New York to seek intimacy among the artists, and found much bewilderment. . . . But Anderson as an intensely self-conscious artist (he is very much just that in the latter part of this book) is not nearly so important as Anderson the non-theorizing observer and recorder of life. Anderson the power of the dark field. In that field we hope he may turn many another furrow, going up and down the land in this present twilight of our philosophies guiding straight the burning share. His business after all is with the soil, with native narrative, with significant observations by the way, not with readings of the heavens or communings with the Time spirit. And he has discerned that fact, the book before us. Simply, he had to get a certain amount of general rumination out of his system. It had been mixing with, and spilling his latest stories. So he paused in the furrow to wax loquacious. Now, good speed, to the plow."

SCOTT CROWDER ELECTED LEADER OF GEORGIA LODGE

Scott Crowder will be installed chancellor commander of the Georgia lodge, No. 1233, Knights of Pythias, at a joint meeting of Atlanta lodges in the near future.

Other officers are: J. P. Little, vice chancellor; W. R. Coleman, prelate; Newman Laseer, master of arms; R. B. Traveek, master of work; T. C. Luckland, keeper of the records and seals; Van B. Smith, master of finance; J. H. Chappell, master of exchequer; C. C. Gillett, inner guard; J. L. Townsend, outer guard. Trustees are W. L. Quinlan to serve for three years; R. P. Butler, to serve for two years, and George T. Billings, to serve for one year.

Newly elected officers will be installed by Grand Chancellor George R. Coffin, of Augusta.

MRS. SARAH BLAKE TO FACE CHARGES OF BARBER BOARD

Charging that certain rules of the state board of barber examiners, in regard to the employment of properly qualified teachers, had been violated, a warrant was served Saturday on Mrs. Sarah A. Blake, proprietor of the S. A. Clayton School of Cosmetology, at 401 South Moreland avenue.

It is charged by the state board that Mrs. Blake has violated the rule which requires that a licensed instructor shall be present at all schools. The proprietor of the school, it is claimed, teaches there in person in the forenoons, but is engaged in her uptown hair dressing and beauty parlor establishment, on East Hunter street, during the afternoons, leaving her students without proper instruction for half of the day.

The establishments conducted by Mrs. Blake are high-class in every other respect and can hardly be proved upon for sanitation and cleanliness, according to the barber board.

ALFRED IVERSON BRANHAM

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

December 2, 1924.

Mr. James B. Nevin,
C/o The Atlanta Georgian,
Atlanta, Georgia.

Dear Mr. Nevin:

A few days ago three gentlemen well known in Georgia, one of them a leading Minister of the Methodist Church; another a leading Minister of the Baptist Church; and the third a leading layman of the Episcopal Church, were in my Office discussing the Atlanta Newspapers. It was the unanimous opinion of these three gentlemen, in which I heartily joined, that the most strikingly interesting features of the Atlanta daily newspapers were: "Today," "Caught in the Current," and the contributions of Dr. Wightman F. Melton in the Atlanta Georgian.

I have not read in many a day articles so human, so sympathetic, so interesting, so beautifully expressed in our fine old English language, as the articles of Dr. Melton in the Georgian. Every day in the week, except Sunday, I buy two copies of the Atlanta Georgian in addition to the copy that is regularly brought to my Office by the carrier. Every Sunday I buy a copy of the American. During the past ten days I have bought from five to eight extra copies of the Atlanta Georgian out of which I have clipped Dr. Melton's articles in order to send them to my granddaughters at Fort Benning and Decatur, and a friend or two in Florida.

I am hoping that Dr. Melton's contributions to the Georgian will continue as long as I retain the power to read.

Very truly yours,

MRS. JANE P. FLEMING, 81, SUCCEUMBS AT HOME

Mrs. Jane P. Fleming, 81, widow of the late Absalom F. Fleming, and one of the most beloved of Atlanta's pioneer women, died at her apartments in the Colonnades, 828 Highland avenue, Saturday morning, after a long illness.

Mrs. Fleming was the last of her generation in a large family connection and was the oldest living member of the First Presbyterian church, of Atlanta, an organization with which she had been identified continuously for 58 years.

Mrs. Fleming was a daughter of Joshua and Mary Ann Lamar Dyer, and was born in Lincoln county, December 3, 1843. She reached her 81st birthday last Wednesday, and though unconscious of her surrounding at the time, was remembered by hosts of friends. She was connected with many of the state's leading families, among them the Lamars, the Cobbs, the Bennings and the Daniels.

Mrs. Fleming was graduated from the old Rome Female college, of Rome, and was a schoolmate of Mrs. Mary V. Eagan, of this city, mother of the late John J. Eagan.

She married the late Absalom F. Fleming, of Atlanta, tobacco merchant, in 1870. She was a sister of the late Colonel Wilberforce Daniel, of Augusta, and of the late Dr. John R. Daniel, of Atlanta. Mrs. Fleming was a member of the American Revolution, and of the Atlanta Pioneer Women.

Mrs. Fleming is survived by two sons, Paul L. and Frank L. Fleming, president and secretary of the John R. Daniel company, wholesale druggists and manufacturers; a nephew, Dr. Lucian Lamar Knight, state historian; a brother-in-law, James L. Fleming, of Augusta; a grandniece, Miss Mary Knight, of Atlanta, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held from the First Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dr. J. S. Lyons, officiating. Officers of the church, will act as pallbearers. Burialment will be in Oakland.

WARM AND PLEASANT WEATHER FOR TODAY

Warm, pleasant weather, marred only by a possibility of rain late in the afternoon, is the outlook for Atlanta today, according to C. F. Von Herrmann, in charge of the local office of the U. S. Weather Bureau.

Saturday witnessed a continuance of the high temperatures which have characterized the last two or three days. There was a light mist during the afternoon, but hardly enough to be noticeable. The temperature this morning is not expected to drop below 40 degrees.

CHILD LABOR LAW PADDED BY BUTLER

Philadelphia, December 6.—No American mother would favor the adoption of a constitutional amendment which would empower congress to invade the rights of parents and to shape family life to its liking. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, declared in a letter read today before a mass meeting held here in connection with the second annual convention of the Sentinels of the Republic.

The proposed federal amendment, now before the state legislatures, Dr. Butler said, might delay the day when child labor "which is now rapidly disappearing" will have totally disappeared.

The mass meeting was called to protest against ratification of the amendment by the various legislatures.

The letter stated that those who would keep intact the principles of American life "are charged with an unwillingness to tear down the constitution."

"A beginning was made when the eighteenth amendment was proposed and ratified," Dr. Butler continued. "This amendment is objectionable because it violently inserts positive legislation into a document whose purpose is to establish a framework of government, to set out the limitations of that government and to describe the functions of its several parts."

The proposed child labor amendment, Dr. Butler continued, would "relieve the local and state governments of their direct responsibility and transfer that responsibility to a distant, costly and certainly incompetent bureaucracy, operating from the national capital."

SENTINELS OF REPUBLIC PASS ANTI RESOLUTION

Philadelphia, December 6.—Protest against the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution was voiced today at the second annual convention of the Sentinels of the Republic, which went on record as favoring control of the child labor question by the individual states.

John H. Kirby, a Texas lumber man, in an address, termed the federal measure "a step in the direction of the socialist plan to make the children the chattels of the state instead of the jewels of the home."

Frank L. Peckham, Washington, vice chairman of the organization, condemned the amendment as deceptive. "It has a sugar coating designed to appeal to those men and women who are against the wasting of child life by exploitation," he said, "but it actually seeks the right of the federal government to control the activities of children."

DEFEAT OF ATTACK ON CHAPLAINS SEEN

the public and a huge attendance is anticipated. Dr. Robert E. Speer, of New York, retiring president of the council and one of the nation's outstanding church figures, will speak on "Christ, the One Hope of the World."

Future Work Outlined. At the Saturday morning session, by a unanimous vote, plans for the future work of the council, formulated by the committee on policy, were adopted for the next four years by the 500 delegates in attendance at the convention.

Following a spirited discussion of a number of the points recommended by the committee through Dr. Robert E. Speer, chairman of the committee and formerly the council's president, the council accepted and adopted the report, thanked the committee and Dr. Speer for their efforts. The pertinent points of the adopted program follow:

Continued and enlarged emphasis on the common fundamental duties of evangelism.

More adequate arrangements to take part in Christ's name in the great emergencies when times of trouble call for mercy.

Undiminished effort to set forth the Christian viewpoint in matters of social, racial, economic and international relationships.

Wise and effective expansion of work in studying general conditions to make the council a more effective clearing house of general religious and social information.

A broader study of relations between American and foreign evangelistic churches.

Conferences between churches of the United States and Canada with view to co-operation between the two councils.

Careful study of the rural church problem.

A careful study on the part of the churches and the council of a way in which women may be given a bigger part in the work of the churches.

Problems of Church. A forceful appeal was made by the committee on policy in the report for:

Elephant Puzzle Winners Thank The Constitution

Results of the second or tie-breaking puzzle in The Constitution's original elephant puzzle contest having been announced several days ago, checks have been issued to prize-winners and acknowledgments have been made by first and second winners.

The following telegram has been received from P. P. Nunnally, of Athens, Ga., winner of first prize.

Atlanta, Ga.
I acknowledge receipt of your check for $1,000 as first prize in your elephant contest. Please accept my heartfelt thanks for same. Wishing you the best of success.

(Signed) P. P. NUNNALLY.
Athens, Ga., December 5, 1924.
T. Z. Fogarty, of Macon, winner of second prize, has also received his prize.

Atlanta, Ga.
I thank you for your letter of December 4, enclosing check for $700 in payment of second prize in your elephant contest.

I was greatly surprised to learn that I had won second prize, especially in view of the large number of contestants in the contest, all of whom had an equal chance with me. Some are inclined to call it luck to win, but I was convinced long ago that by following the saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," I would win.

Assuring you of my appreciation for the check, and thanking you for conducting a contest which enabled me to win this amount, I am yours very truly,

Success Greeting Georgia Sale of Christmas Seals

Georgia's quota of 2,500,000 tuberculosis seals for the annual Christmas seal sale, which is in progress throughout the nation, has been distributed.

The sale is being conducted in Georgia by 88 associations and committees and 18 sub-committees and through a mass mailing of 197 smaller towns. In Atlanta, Athens, Rome and Dalton seals are being distributed free to all contributors to the Community Chests. The tuberculosis association, it was stated, will arrange to furnish seals to all persons who wish them for their Christmas mail.

In addition to distribution of seals, a stronger presentation of Christ to the unconverted.

"The greatest of all problems before the churches today is how we may present Christ more compellingly to the mind and heart of our day so that He will become the Lord of men's consciences and the master of their lives," Dr. Speer reported.

"It seems clear that there are certain distinct fields of the churches' responsibility in which there is a greater readiness and desire for cooperation because in these fields it is obvious that no one denomination can act for all or can ever act effectively for itself without association with others," he said.

"Among these fields of action, for example, are the relation of the churches to the great issues of social welfare, like the temperance question, prohibition and respect for law, the problem of war, disarmament and peace, problems of race and race relations and works of mercy and peace."

Many Leaders Heard. The aim of all the churches for the next four years were openly discussed by Dr. E. Mullins, president of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, of Louisville, Ky., and the Rev. Thornton Whaling, moderator of the Presbyterian church in the United States.

John Ferguson, president of the council, and women for home missions; John R. Hawkins, financial secretary of the African Methodist church; Bishop C. C. Breckinridge, of the Evangelical church, and the Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, moderator of the national council of Congregational churches, and also a number of other delegates.

After the address by Rev. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, of Louisville, Ky., the council met at 8 o'clock Saturday night and the afternoon was passed in recreation by the delegates and visitors.

FUNERAL OF WALKER TO BE HELD SUNDAY

Monroe, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—All plans for the funeral here Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, eastern time, for Billington Sanders Walker, 72, father of Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, who died suddenly Thursday morning, have been completed.

The services will be conducted at the First Baptist church, of which he was a life-long member. Dr. J. H. Webb, pastor, will officiate, assisted by Dr. D. W. Key, of Atlanta, former pastor and citizen of Monroe, and close friend of Mr. Walker. The funeral will be simple.

The pallbearers are all fellow-citizens of Mr. Walker. They are A. B. Mobley, J. P. Adams, Ernest Camp, John T. Aycock, L. D. Wall and J. J. Medlin.

The officers, directors and employees of the Bank of Monroe will lead the honorary pallbearers. The Kiwanis club, of Monroe, will attend in a body, as will the statehouse officers from Atlanta.

MAYOR OF AMERICUS REPORTED IMPROVED

Americus, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—J. Elmore Poole, mayor of Americus, who sustained a stroke of paralysis last night, was reported late this afternoon as somewhat improved, and strong hope is entertained by attending physicians that he will recover.

The stroke affected his entire right side and for a time deprived him of the power of speech, coming wholly unexpectedly, as he was in good health.

Besides being mayor, he is a member of the board of commissioners of Sumter county and a prominent farmer and business man here. He also is executive head of the firm of J. H. Poole & Son, and prominently identified with other interests in Americus.

He was recently reelected to succeed himself as mayor and is to be inducted into office for his second term January 1.

COOPERATIVE HOG SALE IN THOMAS COUNTY

Thomasville, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—The next cooperative hog sale for Thomas county will be held Wednesday, December 10, at the sale pens on the Atlantic Coast Line railroad. The three last cooperative sales netted $14,198.24 and this does not include hogs which were not headed by truck to Moultrie.

The price of hogs is higher than any December since 1919.

2 KILLED, 5 SHOT IN ROBBER RAID

South Bend, Ind., December 6.—Two men were killed and five others were wounded, two of them perhaps fatally tonight by two robbers who attempted the robbery of a soft drink saloon, and then shot their way to liberty in a running battle with police, sheriff's deputies and citizens.

One of the robbers was arrested when a highway construction workman, who was in turn shot, felled him with a blow from a sledge hammer, while the other was believed to be surrounded in a field west of South Bend, and by a posse made up of hundreds of officers and citizens from the countryside.

The dead: Frank Rathbone, 60, South Bend, customer in soft drink saloon and Elmer J. Cauffman, 58, Lydic, Ind., road worker.

The wounded: Felix Stevens, 37, bartender in Rathbone's saloon, not expected to live. William Rice, 65, South Bend, who was in saloon when the shooting commenced, is expected to die. C. L. Camp, farmer, living west of South Bend, shot in side and not expected to live. Stanley Polmarzek, South Bend, shot in side. Homer Curry, road worker, shot in side. Not expected to live.

The shooting began when the men, for a few moments, had been loitering about the soft-drink saloon. Suddenly produced revolvers and commanded the others to "put up their hands."

The wife of the owner of the saloon looked on in horror as the shooting started. When Rice, who also had been in the place, started for the youthfully robbers, cautioning them to refrain from carelessness with their firearms.

The robbers didn't speak, but instead shot Rice through the head.

As Rice fell both the would-be robbers and the crowd gathered around him. Stevens, a tender, was shot down. He died later in St. Joseph's hospital. Rathbone also was hit during the shooting. From the holdup men's revolvers as they fled through the front doors.

Noted Visitors To Attend Fort Services Today

The army and navy committee of the Federal Council of Churches will visit Fort McPherson today and attend religious services at the post chapel. The committee will be accompanied by Col. John T. Axton, chief of chaplains of the United States army. Special music will be featured at this service by the Fort McPherson vested choir. The sermon will be preached by Chaplain Luther D. Miller, of the 22nd infantry, stationed at Fort McPherson. The public is invited to this service.

A conference of the chaplains of the four corps area will be held at Fort McPherson Monday and Tuesday. The chief of chaplains will preside at the conference and the following chaplains will be in attendance:

H. N. Blanchard, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.; E. B. Bonner, Fort Bragg, N. C.; J. T. DeBardelaben, Fort Benning, Ga.; Orville Fisher, Fort Monmouth, N. J.; C. T. J. Leman, Fort Benning, Ga.; E. T. McNally, Fort Screven, Ga.; L. D. Miller, Fort McPherson, Ga.; and A. W. Thomas, Fort Benning, Ga.

Talbot at St. Phillips. The Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D. D., L. D., presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States, will preach at St. Phillips cathedral at the 11 o'clock service this morning.

Bishop Talbot is a pioneer missionary and still is actively at work in Pennsylvania, where he is bishop of the Diocese of Bethlehem. He is in Atlanta representing the Episcopal church at the national council's convention.

Dr. Frederick W. Burnham, president of the United Missionary society, of St. Louis, Mo., will deliver the sermon at the First Church of Christ, this morning at 11 o'clock, services being in the interest of the Woman's Missionary society.

Zwemer, Goodell To Speak. The North American Presbyterian church pulpits will be filled today by Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, L. D., at 11 o'clock, and Dr. Charles L. Goodell at 7:30 o'clock.

Dr. Zwemer is the most distinguished missionary to the Moslem world. He was a pioneer to Christian missions in Arabia, going to that field before it was open to the western world. He is the author of a large number of volumes on Mohammedanism and Christian missions and is the editor of The Moslem Review. He is former moderator of the national church in America. He has traveled in most every part of the Mohammedan world and was made a fellow of the Royal Geographic society in recognition of his world-wide interests.

Dr. Goodell is secretary of the commission on evangelism and service for the federal council of churches of Christ in America. He will also be the noon-day speaker at the Forsyth church during the week. He is an outstanding authority on evangelism in America and the world.

Negroes To Hear Pastor. Dr. Russell Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church, has invited Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, moderator of the national council of congregational churches, to address a mass meeting of colored citizens Sunday night. The negro schools and colleges have also been invited. Dr. George E. Haynes, one of the secretaries of the race relations committee, will speak.

Concavare Scheduled. Dr. George J. Concavare, southern member of the board of education of the United Lutheran church and fraternal delegate from the Lutheran denomination to the convention, will preach at both morning and evening services at the Lutheran church of the Redeemer, Capitol place and Trinity avenue.

The Luther League will conduct special services at the Home for Incapacitated at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

The newly elected officers of the Brotherhood will be installed on Monday evening, with supper served by the Women's Missionary society under the chairmanship of Mrs. William B. Ahlgren, at 6:30 o'clock.

Christmas Joy Club Formed at Macon To Remember Poor

Macon, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—Although the Good Fellows club was organized here only a few days ago, Arthur H. Peavy, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and custodian of the fund, announces that more than $100 has been received to date.

The Good Fellows will fill baskets with toys, candy, food and clothing for the poor children of Macon on Christmas morning for the lack of gifts.

More than 200 poor children were made happy last year and it is planned not to let a child in Macon be unhappy on Christmas morning for the lack of gifts.

"Here they fret and fume about ulterior intentions of America, while they write about Japan's suspicions," he said. "One is as groundless as the other."

"I do not deny that some suspicion is entertained by a limited section of our public, but I do assert that it is far from the sense of the entire Japanese nation or navy."

Mr. Bryan makes us to feel and cultivate sympathy with men of the same profession. It is written that "warriors should aid and sympathize with one another." Individually, personally as a fighting man in the service of my country, I am sympathetic with the tremendous enthusiasm with which the warriors of a neighboring country are trying to foster a martial spirit among the men behind the guns so that they may acquire themselves with honor and credit in case of emergency. We are doing just the same thing. Such a spirit of emulation should not be discouraged because it is a healthy thing.

Shook Auto Owner. Outside of the robbers got into the automobile with the Polmarzek and his young nephew were in the machine. They commanded Polmarzek to drive west as fast as he could. Polmarzek attempted to delay the robbers and was shot through the shoulder.

Polmarzek's nephew was forced to take the wheel of the automobile. The wounded man had been dragged out. The boy, thoroughly frightened, did not hesitate and started alone.

Appearance of the car with the two young men at the wheel, speeding through traffic aroused suspicions of the police. The car was stopped. The machine had made its way out of the city. The robbers were lost for a time. The police and sheriff's deputies, summoned to the soft drink saloon. The trail was picked up within fifteen minutes, by a telephone call that Camp, the father, living eight miles west of South Bend, had been shot by the two bandits when he resisted them as they sought to steal his automobile.

Dredgers Fight Bandits. Taking Camp's car the robbers then fled along the highway near the Camp farm. The car was stopped by a crew of a ditch dredging outfit. They were only two men in the dredger, Kauffman and Curry.

When the robbers attempted to compel one of the dredgers to get into the automobile with them another fight resulted, and one of the dredgers was killed. The bandits were shot down and Curry, who was shot down and Cauffman was killed in his tracks. The blow on the head so stunned one of the robbers that he was unable to continue the fight and his partner fled alone.

The lone robber then fled alone into the nearby fields and there he was surrounded by a posse of police and sheriff's deputies and armed citizens.

Quick arrival of the officers and others of the fact that in some parts the fields amount almost to a morass, led the sheriff to believe that the lone highwayman is surrounded and that it is but a question of time until he is arrested.

The robber who was struck down with the sledge hammer gave his name to police as Raymond L. Miller, of Boston. He refused to discuss the attempted hold-up or the shooting of and killing of so many men.

The battle aroused the entire city. Hundreds in automobiles and afoot joined in the man hunt and it was possible to see almost every sort of weapon in the posse which followed the sheriff out of town.

PEACH GROWERS' BANK BE ORGANIZED DEC. 12

Macon, Ga., December 6.—(Special.)—The new Georgia Peach Growers' bank, which will open here on the first of next year, will not only bring financial relief to the growers, but strengthen the Georgia Peach Growers' exchange, in the belief of W. C. Bewley, new general manager of that association.

Independent peach buyers had been getting such a foothold in Georgia by their advancement of money to the growers, taking in return a contract for the crop at a fixed price, that the situation threatened to disrupt the exchange.

Financial relief, even more than is possible from the independents, will be available through the new bank, it is declared.

The board of directors of the bank, of which W. B. Baker, Atlanta, is chairman, met here on December 12 for the purpose of completing the organization.

Most of the $100,000 capital stock has been subscribed already, according to T. R. Turner, president of the Bibb National bank and one of the board.

The new Peach Growers' bank will be affiliated with the Federal Farm Loan bank in Columbia, S. C., through which their funds will be obtained for aiding the growers to produce and market their crop.

NEGROES ARE CHARGED WITH OVERCOAT THEFTS

P. J. Williams, Charles Wells, Jess Beavers and Fred Mitchell, negroes, were held at the Atlanta police station under bond Saturday night on charges of stealing overcoats. They were taken into custody by Detective Warren.

Three of the overcoats, police say, have been identified by the Federal Police. The fourth, a dark blue, is being worn by one of the suspects. The suspects are being held in the 210 Gould building; B. F. Montgomery, of Hapeville, and R. A. Ford, of 51 La France street.

Main overcoat, the first of the wraps have been reported stolen from cars in the last few days, officers said.

WORLD ACCLAIMS RADIO PICTURES

The Constitution Bureau,
112 West 42nd Street,
New York City.

New York, December 6.—The transmission of pictures by wireless from London to New York, acclaimed this week as the most notable achievement in this fast-growing industry, is said to be only the beginning of a number of astounding developments which are nearing perfection under the guidance of the engineers of the Radio Corporation of America, backed by the brains of the General Electric company and Westinghouse.

Officials of these companies refuse to divulge their latest discoveries, but it is announced on the most reliable authority that the engineers have invented new radio devices, commercial in character, which will amaze the world. Tests are now going on to demonstrate the practicability of these new devices and when they have proceeded to the point where their success is reasonably assured the world will be taken into the confidence of the inventors.

RADIO PROGRESS PRESAGES NEW ERA.
One interesting possibility seen in the success which attended the efforts to transmit pictures across the ocean is in the accelerating of message traffic. Experiments already are being made to determine the feasibility of sending long telegraph code messages as photographed. The advantages of such a transmission are readily apparent.

Some engineers even go so far as to predict that within a short time it will be possible to flash across the sea by radio the facsimile photographs of business contracts and other documents requiring signatures.

DEAF AND DUMB AID PREDICTED BY EXPERTS.

Radio experts are seeking to find out whether it will be possible through application of C. Francis Jenkins' radio vision ideas to improve the means of communication between deaf and dumb people. The success of any efforts in this direction will depend, of course, on the perfection of radio vision. There would be involved naturally, the necessity for use of some kind of a moving picture process.

SECOND RADIO WEEK MOVE IS LAUNCHED.

Steps are already being taken to hold another international radio week and very likely it will be arranged to take place within a few months. Some leaders in the radio industry are advocating a series of international tests to take place every three months or oftener, but limited to two or three nights at a time. The recent tests revealed that there is a great deal yet to be accomplished before international broadcasting is a complete success. The European radio companies are writing now to the companies of America reporting their impressions of the recent tests and offering suggestions.

NEW YORK OBSERVES FIRST "BOROUGH NIGHT."

New York City observed, on Thursday, its first "borough night." The program was devoted to Brooklyn and was given by individual performers from that borough. The other boroughs will give similar programs.

TRAINMEN USE RADIO TO AID SIGNALING.

Radio has come to the rescue of German manufacturers of ball bearings for freight cars, according to statements made this week at the Power Exposition in the Grand Central Palace. When they had increased the theoretical length of a train from 80 to 400 cars they found that the caboose was too far away from the engine, so radio was resorted to as a means of signaling.

ENGLAND HEARS CLEVELAND STATION

Cleveland, December 6.—An announcement that broadcasting from station WTAM here was heard in England, November 23, the day before international tests were started, was received here today from L. W. Watts at Burnham on Sea, Somerset. Mr. Watts' letter said he heard the last two or three dance numbers and the sign off.

BERLIN TO HONOLULU MESSAGE RECEIVED

Berlin, December 6.—President Ebert today opened the big wireless exhibition here by sending a message to Honolulu. An acknowledgment of the message was received within six seconds.

Plans To Regulate Radio To Be Heard in Congress

Washington, D. C., December 6.—With Congress in session, there is again a possibility of enactment of much-needed radio legislation in the passage of the so-called White bill, which was originally introduced by Mr. White in the first session last February, now includes the features of a senate bill of slightly more limited scope. The bill has been favorably reported to the house by the committee on merchant marine and fisheries. During the last session Congressman Greene, of Massachusetts, chairman of that committee, requested from the house rules committee a special rule which would make it in order for the bill to be considered out of regular order and under limited debate which would expedite action.

In view of the urgency of the legislation, it is expected Mr. Greene will renew the request at this session and if it is anticipated that the rules committee may grant it. If this rule can be secured, proponents of the bill are confident it would pass by a comfortable majority. The measure would then go to conference for the house on the additional radio bill of the senate.

Opinion Offered.
As to whether or not the bill may be passed at this short session, when there is bound to be such a legislative jam, there seemed to be a difference of opinion. Congressman White was non-committal. He seemed to take the attitude that anything might happen. It seemed to be a foregone conclusion with many that the bill did not have a chance. The argument was that if it moved so slowly last session, there seemed to be a feeling, in view of the interest and support of the ever-increasing number of radio fans and the very strong radio interests behind it, the bill, with the momentum of the past session behind it, would be pushed through along with other important measures. As a result of this sharp division of opinion it seems to offer the hope to those favoring the passage of the bill that there is at least a possibility of enactment.

Features in New Bill.
The bill declares the ether within the limits of the United States, its territories and possessions, to be the "inalienable possession" of the nation and asserts the right of congress to regulate its use in interstate and foreign commerce. It gives all necessary authority to the secretary of commerce but precludes a possible arbitrary and unjust exercise of powers by defining them and by providing in proper cases for an appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

The bill attempts to correct improper restraint of competition which is designed to keep prices high for radio equipment, especially for vacuum tubes. It is designed to preserve competition in foreign communications between wireless companies and wire and cable companies, by preventing the combination of wireless and cable companies in foreign commerce.

The committee in reporting the bill felt that some action should be taken to limit the use of radio for advertising purposes, but owing to the uncertain state of development along this line, no such regulation has been made in the bill.

Radio Advertising.
"We are unanimous in the opinion that much the same rule should apply to this form of advertising as applies in the case of newspaper advertising," the report states.

The bill, while not limiting advertising, requires, however, that "all broadcasts for which more time for consideration is paid shall be announced as advertising at the time the same is broadcast."

"There has been much public discussion of the interference caused by receiving sets and many requests that legislation should be framed to prevent the use of receiving sets which radiate energy," the committee declares.

"The committee fully appreciates that an evil exists but is not able to suggest any remedy which is not worse than the ill."

At 7 o'clock, and following with dancing lessons and the usual enjoyable "WIP" on the 500 wave length.

WHB of Kansas City offers a church service tonight from 8 to 9 o'clock, winding up with a midnight broadcast for fans in the west. Tune in on the 411 meter wave to get this program.

Toronto's popular station, CFCA, hitting on the 400 wave length, offers its nightly 8:15 o'clock program Monday night, introducing some Canadian talent of the first magnitude, the announcer states.

Station PDW, of Wavona, still is on the air regularly on the 400 wave length path, handing out the very best in Cuban music and operatic features. The December 13 program, from 8:30 to 11:30, eastern standard time, will be jam-up.

WMAQ, of the Chicago Daily News, will have a special "play night" Wednesday night at 9 o'clock. Many Atlantans enjoy the Yankee accent of the announcer.

WHAZ, Rensselaer Polytechnic institute's station, in Troy, N. Y., sends a weekly program sheet which is typical of that popular station. The offering this week is on a par with the best to be found, music, new features, interesting short talks and other worth-while features. WHAZ goes out on the 380 meter path.

WCCO, of St. Paul and Minneapolis, keeps the wide world informed about market conditions, interspersed with general information. Turn in to the 417 meter wave and pick it out.

Tuesday night's stellar offering, to our mind, will come out of WEAF, big New York station, when the U. S. Army band gets on at 6:30, to be followed at 8 o'clock with a dance music program and ending up at a broadcast sponsored by the Southern society which begins at 8:45 o'clock. Other good programs Tuesday night are to be found at WBZ, Springfield, KSD, St. Louis, WOO, at Philadelphia, WHN, at New York.

The Georgia School of Technology, and Georgia incidentally is receiving no little advertising through the semi-weekly program of station WBBE, formerly WGM, powerful Constitution station. Tech students now have charge of Monday night's programs, while a regular arranged artist-series

Radio Aids Cupid In Unique Tangle Of Atlanta Girls

When the static clears a week from tonight, Atlanta radio fans will be able to tune in on a radio wedding. The ceremony will take place in the radio studio of The Tampa Times (WDAE) Sunday night, December 14, at 8:30 o'clock.

The bride will be Miss Gertrude Fresh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fresh, of 88 Copenhill avenue, Atlanta. The groom will be Samuel Jacobs, son of Lou Jacobs, of Tampa, Fla., where the marriage will take place. The ceremony will be performed by Rabbi Adolph Burger.

Miss Fresh is a native of Atlanta and has a host of friends here. She is a graduate of the Commercial high school.

A number of Tampa friends of the young couple have been invited to the ceremony in the studio of radio. More than 300 invitations have been sent to relatives and friends in Atlanta and all radio fans are invited to "tune in." The Musicians Association of Tampa will furnish the music.

Lou Jacobs, father of the groom-to-be, was wedded to Lila Fresh, of Atlanta, a sister of the forthcoming radio bride.

This will make Lou Jacobs his son's brother-in-law, and Lila Jacobs her sister's stepmother.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Jacobs have left for Jacksonville on their honeymoon, but they will return to Tampa for the radio wedding, according to WDAE reports.

THIRD RADIO SHOW PROVES BIG SUCCESS

Chicago, December 6.—The final report of the third annual Chicago radio show proves conclusively that this season's local wireless exposition was by far the most successful industrial exhibition ever held in this country, not even barring the recent first radio world's fair in New York city.

The total attendance for six days almost equaled that of the Gotham show for seven days. The New York show drew 175,000 people, while the Chicago attendance was 173,200.

Wholesale business transacted by the exhibitors here was more than double that of the Manhattan affair. The 239 Chicago exhibitors—there were 200 in New York—received over $6,500,000 worth of orders, and, strange to say, most of the business was done by the younger and smaller concerns. Fourteen nationally known manufacturers went into the exposition oversold for 1924-1925, due principally to the large number of orders taken by them at the show.

The world's fair, and consequently, were unable to accept any new business at the coliseum.

TOBACCO WAREHOUSE FOR THOMASVILLE

Thomasville, Ga., December 6.—(Special).—An organization of business men here have subscribed $20,000 towards the erection of a tobacco warehouse and a tentative organization formed to begin operations at once. The committee is composed of Homer Williams, chairman; John L. Turner, E. H. Smith, Frank B. Harris, Bryan H. Wright, H. H. Merry, Robert Thomas, Roscoe G. Fleetwood and Louis Steyerman.

Guy S. Jones, a tobacco expert from Bowling Green, Ky., has been employed by the company.

features the regular Thursday night offerings.

And we can't forget WWJ, Detroit News station, which comes smashing through on 517—loud and with a bang. The News orchestra features the Friday night broadcast beginning at 6 o'clock.

Long distance bugs will get an earful if they tune in Portland's KWG, any night at 10 o'clock.

Of course, KDKA is on the air Friday night with an Indian music program and other features. These programs are all good.

There are other good programs which we can't mention because of limit of space. Each week we try to mention the outstanding features. Here's hoping you get each one this week.

Georgia Tech's Ramblin' Band on Ether Monday Night

Georgia Tech's "Ramblin' Reck" band will be the feature of the regular Monday night broadcast this week at Station WBBE, radio broadcasting station of Georgia Tech, formerly known as WGM, The Atlanta Constitution's big station. Frank Roman, widely known director of the Tech band, will have charge of the program.

The broadcast begins at 9 o'clock, central standard time, and will continue for more than one hour, instrumental solos interspersing band numbers.

BUS GETS EUROPE

New Record Made by Big Jersey Bus.

A most remarkable radio reception of the European stations occurred Tuesday night when three British and one French station was heard by passengers on a motor bus en route between Newark and Asbury Park, N. J.

The bus, known as "Miss New Jersey," has been equipped with a five-tube neodymium receiver for several months. During its daily runs between the two New Jersey cities it has brought in over 50 stations within a radius of 2,000 miles.

SHORT WAVE LENGTHS

London used to be the cable center of the world. New York is now the radio center.

Radiograms are sent automatically at the rate of 120 words a minute. Radio travels with the speed of light or about 180,000 miles a second.

Messages from across the ocean are picked up by an antenna fourteen miles long.

An opera singer of Elberfeld, Germany, owns what is said to be the smallest book in the world. Its dimensions are one-quarter of an inch by one-half inch. Its title is "Almanac of the Year 1837-53."

SHIP NEAR POLE GETS U. S. RADIO STATION SIGNALS

TWO NEW STATIONS RECEIVED IN CLASS A

After the way license application have been raining in, department of commerce officials were somewhat relieved this week at having to grant only two new class A broadcasting station licenses. These were given to KFRX, J. Gordon Klemm, Pullman, Wash., and WBL, University of Minnesota at Minneapolis. Station WQAA, A. Beale, Jr., Parkburg Pa., was transferred from class C to class A.

RADIO COMPASS KEEPS AVIATORS IN RIGHT PATHS

The radio compass, which has been used for some time by mariners navigating in storms, snows, and thick weather, has been successfully adapted by army aviators. Lieut. George W. Goddard, en route from Dayton to Washington, came through a heavy fog with ease.

"As I flew, I could tell when I was on the direct course between two big radio towers, one at Fairfield, Ohio just outside of Dayton, and the other at Moundsville, W. Va.," said Lieut. Goddard, "because then I heard only dashes. If I swerved to the left, I heard first a dash and then a dot, repeated at intervals of about ten seconds. If I turned to the right it was reversed—I heard first a dot and then a dash. In either case, I turned back into the course until I again heard the dashes. It was no necessary for me to keep an eye to the ground. I found the way directly and without difficulty."

Announcing the Opening of a Radio Broadcasting Station WDBE

In Our Store in conjunction with Gilham & Schoen, wholesalers of Radios and Electrical Equipment, who built and installed the station.

Programs of the highest type will be broadcast every Tuesday and Saturday evenings from 9 to 10 P. M.

BEGINNING TUESDAY, DECEMBER 9TH, WITH THE RITZ HARMONY BOYS' ORCHESTRA

We recognize the importance of Radio in the home and also recognize the fact that a Radio set is a musical instrument and should have a place in a music store, consequently Our Radio Department will be the largest and most complete in the entire country.

The opening of this Broadcasting Station should be proof positive that we believe in Radio.

Maria Jeritza Sings "Jenufa"

To Place in World of Opera

BY ALICE ROHE.

New York, December 6.—Maria Jeritza, who made grand opera painless even for the tired business man, has created a new sensation. She has introduced a Czech-Slovak opera to New York.

Time was when all that opera "goers" could talk about was how this songbird from Vienna, who is a singer, a great actress and was easy to look at. A long suffering public whose imagination had been strained trying to believe that an adipose lady weighing two hundred on the hoof was really Violetta wasting away in the last stages of consumption in Traviata, et cetera, welcomed the lovely looking and singing and acting Jeritza with life-saving signs.

Any grand opera fan will admit that beauty of face, slenderness of figure, combined with A-1 vocal chords and an histrionic ability to take high C without straining glazily at the musical director is more than could be expected.

Now the grateful Jeritza rosters, who don't have to use a smoke screen when she is portraying youth and beauty, are enraptured over her vibrant and beautiful interpretation of "Jenufa" in the opera of that name. Jeritza's appearance in this role marks its production for the first time in the Czech-Slovakian grand opera in America.

We've had Czech-Slovakian drama and Czech-Slovakian gay-loud poetry but the Metropolitan opera house had as yet been uninvaded.

Because Jeritza created the role in Vienna and finds the new role in both color and power is undoubtedly the reason for its New York production. Judging from the tremendous ovation given the prima donna and the opera today, it is accepted. "Jenufa" may be to Czech-Slovakian grand opera in its further development what Cavalleria Rusticana is to Italian and Leo Janacek, whose music was inspired by the sound of spoken words, by the humming of telephone wires, the language of church bells, and the light at dawn and dusk, adapted the text from a play by Gabrielle Preisss called "Her Adopted Daughter."

It is an exciting drama laid among the Moravian peasants. "Jenufa" is a story of two young men but of course she falls for the worthless drunkard. To conceal her disgrace, her stepmother without Jenufa's knowledge, drowns the baby. When the girl is about to marry her worthy lover who has stood by her through all, the secret is discovered and Jenufa is accused of murder. The stepmother confesses all and Jenufa and her lover marry.

The story is unfolded before us vivid background of gorgeous peasant costumes as ever metropolitan stage has boasted. The settings, especially the old mill scene, are extremely fine. Jeritza's beauty of voice and person and her ability as an actress have made "Jenufa" an unforgettable opera character. Her singing, a peasant costume with its rich embroidery, it is claimed, is really a museum piece.

Janacek is fortunate in having his new music and his theory of differentiating motifs beneath the spoken word, introduced by Jeritza.

Government Refuses Large Subscription Of Treasury Bonds

Washington, December 6.—With proportionately the greatest over-subscription ever accorded a federal security issue indicated for the recently announced 20 to 30-year bond offering, the treasury decided tonight to decline to accept all subscriptions in excess of $10,000.

The decision was made after the widest distribution possible has been made for the issue. It will continue until further notice to accept all subscriptions to the 20 to 30-year bonds, but 4 to 14 percent bonds, treasury notes and Liberty certificates maturing next March 15 are tendered in payment.

Announcing that there were many times more subscriptions than were necessary to produce the required $200,000,000, the treasury said it would place no restrictions on the sale to any person or corporation. It will accept, except that all who subscribed for amounts less than $10,000 will be allotted a minimum of $10,000.

LAST SERVICES TODAY FOR MRS. ROBERTSON

Funeral services for Mrs. Marie Walker Robertson, wife of Emmett B. Robertson, who died Thursday morning at the residence, 449 South Pryor street, will be held at 10 a. m. this morning from the Central Baptist church. Rev. Luther Rader officiating. Interment at Greenwood.

She was an active member of the J-O-Y class of young ladies of this church, her death being the first in the class. Her classmates will meet at 9:45 o'clock to form an honorary escort.

For several years she was connected with H. G. Hastings Seed company. In addition to her husband, she leaves a little daughter, Elizabeth, and a mother, Mrs. Maude Moran.

OPIM PARLEY RESULT DEEVES BISHOP BRENT

Geneva, December 6.—(By the Associated Press.) Bishop Brent, of the American delegation, did not conceal his dissatisfaction tonight with the result of the "lameness and insufficiency" of the conclusions arrived at by the first plenary conference. A statement from him to that effect probably will be distributed to all the delegates at Monday's plenary session.

Bishop Brent tried to have a plenary session called today so that he could speak his mind before his departure for the United States. It was found impossible to convene a gathering at such short notice.

Representative Stephen G. Porter, the chief American delegate, known tonight that he would read Bishop Brent's statement as soon as the conclusions of the first conference were embodied in an agreement and are placed before the second conference.

A meeting of the business committee of the plenary was held occupied with discussion of just what persons and what nationalities shall compose the central board for control of the world's opium trade. The board shall be selected, and under whose authority it shall operate.

There still are divergencies of view. For instance, the United States and the United Kingdom are not over-eager to have the board operate under the league of nations, while the league members maintain that it is the best and most workable solution.

Violence Feared When Embezzling Banker Returns

Des Moines, Iowa, December 6.—Police and the sheriff's office today are taking special precautions to avert violence when Lucius Luchesi, who was arrested in Memphis, Tenn., yesterday, is returned here to face charges of embezzling $250,000 of the United States bank.

News of Luchesi's arrest created a sensation last night in the Italian colony here, reports of renewed threats against the young banker were received by the police.

Luchesi, police believe, fled the city the day after the bank closed its doors for two months ago, to protect himself against the possible violence of foreign depositors. At that time, there was no hint of irregularity on his part, the bank having been in difficulties by reason of "frozen" loans.

Luchesi's irregularities were discovered Thursday when the bank was temporarily closed to issue monthly statements to depositors. A number of depositors found their pass books credited with larger amounts than they had deposited.

In a great city such as Atlanta the day after the bank closed its doors, children would find only bitter disappointment instead of a full stock of Christmas morning were the children of every deserving grown-up and are more fortunate, said Mrs. Stone.

"Not only would there be no toys for the long little hearts, but there would be no candy, fruit or other Christmas goodies for them, not even sufficient food to warm their little bodies. Not only is this the case but the children of every deserving grown-up who would be deprived of the cheering glow of a good Christmas dinner—fathers out of work, worn mothers struggling to support their children, and men and women living in practically destitute circumstances."

Instead of a disappointed method of giving more and there at the last minute, or of depending upon individual charity on a hit-and-miss basis, it is the purpose of the organization to make a city-wide tabulation of children and grown-ups to whom Christmas otherwise would mean nothing, and to systematically provide for the wants of every deserving grown-up and the longings of every despairing tot.

The committee on distribution will take precautions to prevent imposition with the fund. Buying will be done by the purchasing committee on a quantity basis, together with the fact that the work of obtaining and distributing gifts and goodies will be carried on entirely by volunteer workers, gives assurance that the most possible good will be accomplished by every dollar contributed toward the cause, Mrs. Stone said.

It is the aim of the movement to provide toys and other desired gifts, in their making, and to provide for the needs of all of the city's poor, as well as the requisite foodstuffs for Christmas dinners, so far as the available funds will permit.

Funds to pay for these Christmas gifts and baskets will be raised entirely by voluntary contribution, and a credit account will be kept and distributed to the public, Mrs. Stone said.

Santa Will Have Many Assistants On Christmas Day

Santa Claus will not overlook a single little boy or girl in Atlanta this year, nor will there be any hungry mouths on Christmas day, it was stated Saturday in announcement of plans of the Christmas Cheer Fund to provide bountifully for the poor of the city on Christmas day. According to Mrs. F. O. Stone, who is president of the organization, the task of procuring the name and address of every child who otherwise might be slightly by Santa Claus, and of every needy family in the city and environs, has been assigned to the committee on distribution, and a thorough canvass will be made to see that not one is overlooked.

In a great city such as Atlanta the day after the bank closed its doors, children would find only bitter disappointment instead of a full stock of Christmas morning were the children of every deserving grown-up and are more fortunate, said Mrs. Stone.

"Not only would there be no toys for the long little hearts, but there would

Coats Are $49.75

That means a saving of $5.25 to $20 on any coat you choose from this lot. That's a big inducement, but the real reason you'll want one of these coats is because they're so marvelously good looking.

Look at the fur on them—how generously it has been used. And, note please, that only the finest furs have been used on these coats; Rich Hudson seal, soft and silky black fox, Jap mink, natural muskrat, beaver and dyed squirrel.

And the materials—suede-finished materials of duvetyne-like softness and some lustrous high-pile diagonal weaves. All of these coats are lined with heavy all-silk crepes.

They're beautiful coats, through and through—the kind of coats one loves to own—but rarely encounters at $49.75!

Films Committee To Play Santy to Needy Children

Christmas cheer will be distributed to the needy children of the Atlanta public schools this year by the better films committee, which will play Santa Claus as usual to thousands of boys and girls who otherwise might have barren and bleak holidays, through the medium of the biggest and best Christmas party ever sponsored by the films organization.

The party will be held at the Howard theater on the day after Christmas, a motion picture program having been arranged especially for the occasion.

Gifts will be brought to the theater by the children of the city who regularly attend the children's matinees each Saturday morning.

These gifts will be received on the two Saturdays preceding Christmas, December 13 and December 20. Later they will be removed to 228 Peachtree street for distribution.

Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman of the children's matinees, and Mrs. Porter Langston, vice president of the committee, are co-chairmen of the party committee, while Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, president of the committee, is general chairman of the whole.

Not only will gifts of toys, candies, fruits and the like be given away but clothing and other articles necessary to the health and happiness of the children will be donated as well.

Gifts may be sent at any time between now and the date of the party to 228 Peachtree street in the care of Mrs. John W. Lloyd, custodian of the store and gifts. Her telephone number is IV 4334.

Mrs. Wing will be chairman of the committee on collections and Mrs. Langston will be chairman of the committee on distributions.

With Mrs. Wing will be the following:

Mrs. L. J. Elsas, of the Junior Red Cross, shoes chairman; Mrs. A. Y. Toner, chairman of the stores committee; Mrs. Frank McCormack, chairman of the film exchange distribution; Mrs. W. L. McCall, Jr., Mrs. L. C. Hosenback and Miss Nell Enloe, chairman of the Howard gifts from children; Mrs. John W. Lloyd, store custodian; Mrs. Arthur Hazard, who will check incoming and outgoing gifts; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman film exchange collections.

With Mrs. Langston will be: Mrs. Lewis P. Rice, divisional chairman, list of needy children; Mrs. Ada Wolfolk, assisting from family fare association; Mrs. George Price, divisional chairman of deliveries; Mrs. Richardson, chairman of distribution of tickets; officers on the committees are Mrs. P. D. McCarty, Mrs. C. B. Leann, Mrs. Raymond Coff, Mrs. J. D. Smith, Mrs. R. E. Bobbert, Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. W. B. Lingo, Mrs. E. R. Mayson, Mrs. S. S. Shepherd, Mrs. Whitner, Mrs. Porter Langston and Mrs. Victor Krieschaber.

Ordinary binder twine is manufactured from henequen, a fiber which comes from Yucatan.

HANCOCK AGAIN SLATED TO HEAD SCHOOL BOARD

All 1924 officers of the board of education probably will be reelected next year, according to forecasts made around city hall. Present officers consist of John T. Hancock, president; W. C. Slata, vice president, and Dr. B. M. Eubanks, second vice president.

Although Mr. Hancock said Saturday he is undecided as to whether or not he would accept the presidency if reelected, it is practically certain that he again will be named as head of the school board, and that members will be practically unanimous in urging his acceptance.

"The board work will take a great amount of time next year," Mr. Hancock said, "and I already am giving every minute that I can spare from my business affairs. Next year probably will be the hardest in the history of Atlanta's schools, and the president of the board will be required to devote a great amount of time and energy to school affairs."

"On the other hand, a new president would be comparatively unfamiliar with the work, and would be unable to obtain best results until he has served several months. I dislike very much to leave the position at such a critical time as is now faced by the board, and for that reason, I have not been able to decide what I will do if the board chooses to reelect me. I certainly will not solicit any votes."

W. W. Gaines, who served as president of the board for several years prior to Mr. Hancock's election last January, probably will be named

Big New Campaign Boosts Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey

A new campaign of advertising for Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey, full of unusual punch and convincing argument, is now appearing in The Constitution, and the manufacturers' advertising schedule calls for weekly advertising throughout the fall and winter.

In the strongest kind of way this new advertising sells the consumer on Dr. Bell's as the original and genuine pine-tar honey, used by thousands of families for a quarter of a century. It gives convincing reasons why Dr. Bell's is the best, and this is sure to bring about a big gain in the drugists' sale of this very meritorious product.

CATHOLIC BISHOP OF INDIANA DIES

Fort Wayne, Ind., December 6.—The Rt. Rev. Herman Joseph Alerd, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Fort Wayne, died this afternoon. He was 79 years old. He had been in a critical condition since he was injured Thanksgiving day in a automobile accident.

Again in the event Mr. Hancock declines to serve, Mr. Gaines has stated he does not want the post and will take it only in event no one else is willing to serve.

Dr. Eubanks Saturday denied reports he is to be a candidate for the presidency.

Ditto Systems, Incorporated, Housed in New Building

Big Palmer building, shown above, is the new quarters of Ditto Systems, Incorporated, of Chicago. The inset is L. H. Rector, local manager, who was transferred from the Pittsburgh office to this city and who believes that a new era is dawning in the south.

L. H. Rector has been appointed as manager of the Ditto systems sales office for the southeastern district of Ditto, Incorporated of Chicago, Ill., with offices in the Palmer building, and with such a plant, the local Ditto systems office will be able to give complete service to all users of duplicating equipment. Ditto, Incorporated's rise from a one-room company to the present large organization has been due to business based on service, it is claimed. With additional space the firm will be able to complete its line so that it can serve the largest and smallest user of duplicating equipment in the new Atlanta office manager states.

into a new seven-story building in Chicago was necessitated by the great increase in business during the last five years, Mr. Rector asserts, and with such a plant, the local Ditto systems office will be able to give complete service to all users of duplicating equipment. Ditto, Incorporated's rise from a one-room company to the present large organization has been due to business based on service, it is claimed. With additional space the firm will be able to complete its line so that it can serve the largest and smallest user of duplicating equipment in the new Atlanta office manager states.

CHAPMAN'S AIDES TO BE TRIED IN ATHENS

Athens, Ga., December 6.—The men with the "satchels full of gold," alleged accomplices of Gerald Chapman, who escaped from St. Mary's hospital here last year, may be brought back to Athens for trial at the next term of federal court which will be in April, 1925.

The two men, Abe Silverstein and Dominick Didato, are now under $7,500 bail each, making bond while they appealed their case from a New York federal district court to the supreme court of the United States. According to information received here the supreme court has upheld the district court in its ruling that Didato and Silverstein must be returned to Athens for trial.

When Didato and Silverstein were arrested in New York, Miss Raney, now the wife of Assistant District Attorney G. P. Gove, who was a nurse at St. Mary's and knew the two men, went to New York and identified them. The United States commissioner held that they must be returned to Athens for trial. Their attorneys filed a writ of habeas corpus and it went to the district court where the judge decided against the writ. They then appealed to the supreme court, which has decided in favor of the district court, according to news reports received here.

Didato and Silverstein are charged with assisting in the escape of a federal prisoner from the authorities. They came to Athens while Chapman, famed bandit who had been shot near here while fleeing from federal prison officers from Atlanta, was in the hospital under guard. While here they are said to have made arrangements for Chapman's escape.

Dr. Kellar to Speak To Citizenship Club On Protestant Work

Dr. Adolph Kellar, of Zurich, Switzerland, will be chief speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Citizenship club Monday at 12:30 o'clock on the roof of the Cecil hotel, his subject being "Protestantism in Europe."

Dr. Kellar is head of the Central Bureau of Protestant Churches of Europe and is in Atlanta as a delegate to the Federal Council of Churches.

EAST POINT ELECTS OFFICERS TUESDAY

After a hot campaign waged in each ward, East Point will next Tuesday elect a mayor and members of council.

The candidates for mayor are Judge W. T. Nesbitt, C. H. Lives and D. A. McWhorter. The two last named have served as mayor.

Those in the race for council are Ichoddie McWhorter, from the first ward; Howard Carmichael and Claude E. Hutcherson from the second ward, and Edward L. Humphries, who is now in council, is mayor pro tem, and is being opposed by W. R. McKibben.

Only about one-half the voters have registered for this election.

MRS. FREEMAN HURT IN CRASH OF AUTOS

Mrs. R. S. Freeman, 483 North Boulevard, received severe bruises about the body Saturday morning when she was thrown from an automobile, driven by her husband, in a crash with a truck, owned by the Fulton Market company, according to the police.

The truck, operated by Joe Hines, collided with Mr. Freeman's car on Peters street, near Park street, throwing Mrs. Freeman to the ground. The car was precipitated over an embankment onto railroad tracks. Mr. Freeman and the negro were not injured, but both machines were badly damaged.

MILLIKEN TO ADDRESS BIBLE CLASS TODAY

Former Governor Carl E. Milliken, of Maine, and now president of the Northern Baptist convention, will be principal speaker at the Men's Bible class of the Druid Hills Baptist church at 9:30 o'clock this morning. Mr. Milliken, who is a successful lumberman, is in Atlanta attending the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ. He is one of the vice presidents of that organization.

'White Cargo' and 'Sally' Billed for Atlanta Theater

BY RALPH T. JONES.
Thus far the theatrical season in Atlanta, as represented by the offerings at the Atlanta theater, has been much better than any of recent years. This is probably because the management, this year, has adopted the policy of keeping the house dark whenever it was impossible to find a really good attraction, rather than letting it be used by the kind of shows that have made the movies popular.

Announcement was made Saturday by Louis Haase, manager of the Atlanta, of two more attractions to come before 1925 makes its bow. One is "White Cargo," a drama of realism which has made every critic in England and America seek new adjectives of praise. The other is "Sally," one of Flo Ziegfeld's best and snappiest girl and music shows.

The drama is to be with us on Christmas day, which comes on Thursday, and will stay for the balance of the week. There will be matinees on Thursday and Saturday. The musical entertainment is to be the attraction for the entire New Year's week. Prior to Christmas day, the theater will be dark after the Lassies White Minstrels, which are here the first half of this week, close their engagement.

Goes East Thursday.
Manager Haase is leaving for New York Thursday morning. He is going to look over the theatrical situation and confer with the leading booking offices, in order to line up, insofar as possible, the main attractions which are to come here during the spring theatrical season. Many excellent shows are already booked, but there are number of vacancies which could be acceptably filled by some of the newer and more successful dramatic and musical productions of the season, and it is the intention of bringing several of these to Atlanta.

Atlanta that Mr. Haase is making this trip. He will be back about the middle of next week.

In "White Cargo," Atlantans are to see a drama which has been described as the acme of "stark, raw, ugly realism breathing life on the stage." The author of the play, Leon Gordon, says: "No conscious effort has been made to create or eliminate sensationalism. It is an attempt to portray the struggle for development in a country which steadily defies the encroaching civilization. It is the reaction to an ever-shining sun which breeds inevitable rot—a rot which penetrates not only the vegetation and inanimate objects, but the minds and hearts of the white men who attempt to conquer it."

The story of the play deals with a little group of white men marooned in a trading station on a river in Africa. It depicts the struggle between the clean young manhood of the man just out from "England and home," and the subtle disintegration which attacks physical and moral fiber. It is a story of the white men and the native women, and the principal characters are the young Englishman and "Tondelwe," the woman, half-black and half-white.

"Sally," the musical show which opens a week's engagement Monday, December 22, carries a chorus of 30 girls and 10 men and a dazzling array of principals. In the company to play here, Vera Myers assumes the role played in New York by Marilyn Miller, and she has been pronounced by many a counterpart for the famous writer, whose show is said to be featured by its fine good music, good-looking girls, clever dancers and attractive principals. It is the intention of the theater for the entire New Year's week.

Orchestra Gives Fourth Concert This Afternoon Commercial Art Exhibition Comes To Close Today

The fourth concert in the current series by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra will be given this afternoon at Loew's Grand theater. The doors will open at 2:30 o'clock and the concert will begin promptly at 3:30. Reserved seats will be kept for all membership ticket holders until the close of the first month, while all other seats in the house will be open to the general public. No charge will be made for these seats.

The great orchestra which has scored so marked a success in its bi-monthly Sunday afternoon concert series, under leadership of Conductor Ernest Lieke, will present the second popular program of the series today. The programs are selected so as to provide a popular concert alternately with one of rather heavier caliber.

From the melodic strains of Rubinstein's "Melody in F" to the thundering drama of Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance" march, every number is well known to Atlantans and the majority of them have been played here by the orchestra with outstanding success. The program follows:

Overture, "Mignon".....Thomas Phaeton
Fantasy of "La Boheme".....Puccini
Sinfonia in G major.....Rubinstein
Melody in F.....Rubinstein
(Arranged by Vincent d'Indy).
Pomp and Circumstance march.....Elgar

One more day remains for Atlanta to take advantage of the unique opportunity offered by the staging here of the first commercial art exhibit ever shown in the south.

The commercial art exhibition, shown under auspices of the Art club on the Ansley hotel roof all the past week, will remain open to the public all day Sunday. There is no admission charge and all Atlanta is cordially invited to inspect the showing of paintings and sketches, made by the leading advertising artists of the nation, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the morning and 10 at night.

In a Sonora storm, or cloudburst, in California, eleven inches of rain has been known to fall.

ANNUAL MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

The 1924 annual meeting of the Atlanta Automobile association, to be staged Monday night, December 8, Capital City club, promises to be one of the most largely attended annual meetings ever staged by the association. One complimentary ticket was mailed to each of the 175 members of the association last week, and with the large number of extra tickets sold at $5 each, the banquet hall will be taxed to capacity.

Officers of the association for 1925 will be elected at the business session, which will convene promptly at 6:30 p. m. in the salon, on the third floor of the Capital City club, the nominating committee, consisting of the past presidents of the association and headed by D. C. Black, chairman, making their report at this time. A feature of the business session will be the annual reports of President Samuel G. Porter, and Executive Secretary C. V. Hohenstein, dealing briefly with the association's activities and accomplishments during the year 1924. These reports will refer briefly to the successful 1924 automobile show; to the splendid work of the board of directors throughout the year; to the almost phenomenal work of the membership committee in increasing the membership of the association, in spite of the fact that 60 members were lost during the year, due to various causes; to the delightful annual summer outing in June; to the special meetings held for the benefit of various trade lines; to the department built up in the executive secretary's office for the dissemination of personal and business information for the benefit of the members; to the remarkably successful campaign now running in the three daily newspapers to increase the sale of cars, accessories and automotive equipment for Christmas presents; and to many other features of the association's work which have made the Atlanta Automobile association the largest of its kind in any city the size of Atlanta in the United States. Immediately following the brief business session, the members and guests will retire to the banquet hall.

AUTO ASSOCIATION TO BE ENTERTAINED

What promises to be one of the most elaborate entertainments ever offered by any association is billed to appear before the annual gathering of the Atlanta Automobile association at the Capital City club Monday night, December 8.

Under the direction of E. H. (Fat) Elrod, chairman of the entertainment committee, they have secured the services of some of the best-known singers, dancers and monologists in this section of the country, and those who attend this annual affair are assured of a most enjoyable evening from an entertainment standpoint.

5 NEGROES ARE HELD IN PARCEL POST THEFT

Five negroes were arrested Friday night in Jacksonville, Fla., in connection with the theft and rifling of two sacks of parcel post mail at the Jacksonville Union depot, according to a telegram received from Inspector T. H. Jereby by Joe P. Johnson, chief of postal inspectors of Georgia. The sacks and all contents were recovered, the message advised.

Elaborate Entertainment To Feature Auto Association's Annual Meeting

These young ladies enjoy the reputation of being the most sought-after entertainers in the south, and their efforts will lend much toward the success of the annual meeting of the Atlanta Automobile association to be held at the Capital City club Monday evening, December 8. They are, from left to right, Miss Katherine Jones, Spanish and jazz dancer; Little Miss Harriett Jones, juvenile dancer, and Miss Frances Porter, Hawaiian dancer and blues-song singer.

ROAD CHANGES WILL BRING NEEDED SAFETY

"It is natural that the change in highways has not been able to keep pace with the swift change in the character of the traffic, but it is important that road developments now be carried forward rapidly to meet present and future traffic conditions," says H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Automobile company.

"Nearly all the people are now motorists. The world is on power-driven wheels. The motor truck moves more freight than the railroad. This public preference for the automobile is inseparably tied with the factor of speed. If then speed is the fundamental of automobile service, what is the answer to safety?"

"In a broad sense, it is not the speed of the automobile that makes it dangerous. It is the great number of automobiles, the carelessness of both drivers and pedestrians and the condition in which automobiles are used. The new conditions of automobile traffic just as railroads have been built to meet the conditions of fast rail traffic.

Owners of Fords Warned Against Offer of Stock

Warning owners of Ford automobiles in Georgia against a New York concern which recently has been circulating them on a stock-selling proposition, the Georgia Securities commission Friday gave out a statement in which the offer was declared to be an effort to induce people to pay about 30 per cent above the price quoted on the New York Curb exchange for the stock in question.

The New York concern offers so-called bankers' shares in the "Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd.," and on its circulars is using the names of the officers of the Ford company.

The state commission, in issuing its warning, says: "Numbers of owners of Ford cars have sent to the securities commission a circular of the Empire State company, 119 Nassau street, New York City, offering at $6 per share bankers' shares in the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd. The literature offered bears at its head the name of the Ford company and is devoted to the profits made by the Ford company in manufacturing automobiles. The average reader of it would draw the conclusion that someone connected with the Ford company was offering the stock.

"As a matter of fact, the stock that is being offered by this dealer is listed on the New York Curb exchange and the price is given in Thursday's New York Times was $4.60 to $4.65 per share. The securities commission is not passing on the value of the stock, but it does want to save Georgia Ford owners, if possible, from paying these people nearly 30 per cent above the price at which the stock can be bought on the New York Curb exchange.

DODGE BROTHERS REDUCE PRICES

Announcement of a reduction in the prices of all Dodge Brothers passenger cars was received recently by F. E. Maffett, local Dodge Brothers dealer.

The new prices were effective Monday, December 1. The reductions are especially sharp on the closed types. The type A sedan, for example, on which the list price was formerly $1,385, is now $1,245. The type B sedan, which formerly sold for $1,250 f. o. b. Detroit, is now listed at $1,095. There is also a reduction from $1,475 to $995 in the list price of the business coupe. Dodge Brothers' roadster, under the new price, will sell for $855 and the touring car for $885.

The announcement from Dodge Brothers also carried the information that balloon tires are standard equipment on all passenger cars. New prices on special type cars are as follows:

Special Roadster	.....$ 955
Special Touring	..... 985
Special B. Coupe	..... 1,095
Special B. Sedan	..... 1,195
Special A. Sedan	..... 1,330

The special types carry such extra equipment as nickel-plated radiator shell, motorometer, front and rear bumpers, body stripes, steel disc wheels, scuff plates, cowl lights and five balloon tires.

Announcement of these reductions provoked endless discussion throughout the entire industry. The year 1924 has been the most successful in Dodge Brothers' history and it is now evident that the factory is determined to establish an even more enviable record in 1925. Obviously, the market for Dodge Brothers motor cars will be broadened immeasurably by the lower prices, particularly the closed car types.

Substantial improvements in the appearance, riding comfort and other important details of construction and design, plus the car's long-standing reputation for dependable performance, were responsible for the greatly accelerated demand during 1924. For a number of months production was maintained consistently at a rate close to 1,000 cars per day.

Prices of Dodge Brothers commercial cars and chassis are not affected by the reductions.

Doing away with the many coats of paint required to cover the body of an automobile, a textile material that can be decorated in almost any wall-paper pattern has been developed by an engineer in England.

HOW TO GET EVEN WITH FRIEND WIFE

Here's the solution of the husband's (or the father's) annual dilemma: Give her a car for Christmas. According to T. O. Pool, president of T. O. Pool & Son, local Chandler distributor.

"The idea has many advantages. Foremost, no wife or daughter will be anything short of overjoyed to find (figuratively speaking) a sedan in her Christmas stocking. Also a car is a gift that returns dividends on the investment, in increased happiness, health, and comfort for the entire family."

"Incidentally, though this should not be the guiding reason for selecting a gift, the auto gives mere man a chance to get even with his women folk for the 'useful' gifts he has received in the past—such as living-room rugs, dining-room furniture, and other 'presents' whose benefits, to put it mildly, are by no means confined to the recipient. Now, the husband can give an automobile and feel that things are even, yet share in the benefits of the gift without a twinge of conscience."

"An important point is to pick a suitable car, especially one that the woman can easily learn to drive, and handle readily after she has learned. The woman driver needs a powerful motor more than a man does, because she must be free of the risk of stalling and from the necessity of frequent gear changes.

"Above all, the woman wants a car that is easily operated. The makers of the Chandler, whose traffic transmission permits changes of gear to be made with certainty by the merest novice, have found that this feature appeals greatly to the woman driver, because she wishes to drive with a care-free mind."

CHAMPION SPARK PLUG SALESMEN TO MEET

Prior to their annual sales convention held in Toledo, Ohio, every year, week beginning December 14, a sales staff of about twenty-five men covering the southeastern states for the Champion Spark Plug company will hold a meeting at the Winecoff hotel Monday and Tuesday, December 8 and 9. F. B. Caswell, vice-president and director of sales, and H. F. Shively, district sales manager, will be in charge.

This meeting is an annual affair for men in this territory and gives them an opportunity to go over the previous year's record and also receive information that can be supplied embodying sales plans of this company for the coming year.

About twenty representatives of the Champion family will remain in Atlanta the balance of the week co-operating with their local distributors. It is announced.

Subscription dances will be a feature of every other Monday evening at the West End Woman's club, 305 Gordon street, according to announcement by Mrs. Chester Johnson, vice president of the club and chairman of the building committee. The first dance will be held Monday evening, December 15. Mrs. Johnson and the committee assisting her plan to make the dance a gala occasion.

Music will be rendered by Vick Myers' Melody orchestra.

NEW OAKLAND COACH BEING SHOWN HERE

Oakland dealers throughout the country are now showing the Oakland coach, a brand new creation with body by Fisher, representing a distinct development in coach craftsmanship. This new type is a strikingly handsome car, custom-built in appearance, with low sweeping lines, gracefully rounded corners and a distinctive color scheme in permanent Duco finish.

It has a full five-passenger body, long hung and comfortable, and is as solid and rugged in construction as it is beautiful in lines. The body frame is of selected hardwood with precisely the same kind of construction as is used in the sedan, including complete bracing and full steel body panels. Metal is used for the back, not fabric.

The body, hood and disc wheels are finished in sacbrush green with orange striping, the fenders, running gear and upper structure in black. The interior is lined in dark green upholstery of high grade worsted.

Two large doors, 34 inches wide, permit of easy entrance, either from the right or left side. Front seats are of the Pullman type, heavily upholstered and folding forward to allow passengers an unobstructed passage to the rear seat.

Roominess and unobstructed vision are two of the many outstanding features of this car. There is ample room for three in the rear seat, while the two in the front seats have not only ample elbow room but also ample leg room.

A veritable vista of windows, two extremely large ones on each side, with the one-piece Fisher windshield in front, afford a range of vision that may be considered the maximum obtainable in a closed car.

Automatic windshield cleaner, rear view mirror, crank type quick action window lifts on doors and rear windows are included in the standard equipment in addition to the many other features of the Oakland chassis, such as four wheel brakes, centralized controls, five disc wheels and automatic spark control.

REO ADVANCES NEW CLOSED CAR

"Something more than just an enclosure is demanded by the American buyer who is a prospect for a closed car these days," says John E. Smith, of the John Smith Co., Reo representative in this territory.

"This fact has been impressed on us by the number of people who have called to see the new Reo Twentieth Anniversary sedan, the first full-sized four-door sedan selling at open car cost to be placed on the market. Practically every one who has seen it has declared that Reo has kicked over old standards of motor car values and has anticipated the demand of the motor public, not merely for closed cars at open car prices, but for full-sized closed cars at the moderate figures usually associated only with open models.

"Now that it is possible to obtain a complete sedan with four doors, and ample room for five people of full stature at an attractive price the demand for cars built on this pattern is becoming more active. As a matter of fact, reports from the Reo Motor Car company convey the information that orders have exceeded production plans to such an extent that the factory will be rushed for months to meet the requirements of Reo distributors and dealers.

"No small share of the popularity of this model may be attributed to the fact that it includes the well-known T-6 chassis, standard for all Reo models. This chassis carries the T-6 engine, a 6-cylinder power unit that develops 50-h. p. at 2,000 revolutions per minute. Its records of performance have made this engine one of the best known the world over today.

"Other Reo features such as the inner frame cradling of vital units, the Reo safety control, and genuine balloon tires are used in the Twentieth Anniversary sedan as well as in all other Reo passenger cars. Even the precision methods in manufacture that have caused Reo to be known as 'The lowest-priced quality' figure in the production of this popular new model."

NEW GERMAN OIL SOLD UNDER WRITTEN GUARANTEE RUBS OUT RHEUMATISM

A remarkable new discovery of German Chemistry, called Buhler Oil, for the relief of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, is astonishing the medical world. This marvelous oil seems to kill rheumatic pains just as effectively as these other German pain killers—Novocain for painless dentistry and Aspirin for headache pains.

Rheumatism in very many cases is due to internal abscesses (such as a blind pus pocket) in the joints which give off poisons, and which are carried in the blood to the joints and muscles. Buhler Oil is then absorbed and the affected parts seem to quickly penetrate and be absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most severe and stubborn cases almost instant relief has been obtained.

So remarkable have been the results from the use of Buhler Oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense it to rheumatic, gout and neuralgia sufferers in this city with a positive written guarantee to return the full purchase price of the first bottle if it does not bring wonderful relief. All sufferers should promptly take advantage of this guarantee. For sale at Jacobs' Pharmacy, (122 Stores), E. H. Cone, A. L. Curtis, Tucker Pharmacy, Franklin & Cox, Marshall & Fendick—(adv.)

For the past two years Mr. Gomperts has been connected with the Lambert Trubluft Tire company, Inc., at its home office in Birmingham, Ala., where as a sales representative, he was ranked among the highest in the entire country.

Mr. Gomperts says "he is convinced that Atlanta is the brightest spot in the south, and in time will be known as the leading branch of the Lambert Trubluft company," and with all in mind he started things to hum soon after his arrival here.

PRIZES TO BE GIVEN BY AUTO ASSOCIATION

Atlanta automobile dealers and accessory dealers are making a determined effort this month to bring maximum attention to their products as the ideal gift for Christmas. "Buy a Car for Christmas," is the slogan of the dealers, while "Buy Something for the Car for Christmas," is that of the accessory dealers.

The Atlanta Automobile association has just received and distributed to their members a liberal supply of attractive window display material with which dealers can add a festive touch to their stores and window displays during the holiday season.

To encourage displays of unusual distinction and interest, the officials of the association are going to give three valuable prizes to the best window displays of automotive gifts in Atlanta on December 18 and 19. Prominent and capable judges, such as L. P. Wilson, advertising manager of Davidson-Paxon-Stokes and president of the Atlanta Advertising club; W. R. C. Smith, publisher of the Southern Automotive Dealer; A. U. Bishop, advertising director for M. Rich & Brothers Co.; and A. L. Meyers, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, have been invited to serve in the capacity of judges and to visit the displays of those dealers who have signified their desire to win the prize, with a view of selecting the three best displays.

According to C. V. Holenstein, executive secretary of the Atlanta Automobile association, "National interest is seen in the newspaper advertising we are doing this month where, in this association, is averaging to 50,000 motorists within a radius of 30 miles of Five Points the comfort, long-service and unusual practicality of the giving automobile gifts for Christmas. We have had inquiries from scores of cities in the east and prominent trade magazines who have expressed interest in this movement in which the leadership of this association has again focused itself in the spotlight of the automotive industry."

When you have obtained the best solution you can find, insert in the subscription and solution blank the sum total of the figures in the horizontal chains and directly under this the sum total of the figures in the perpendicular chains and then the difference between the two. Attach this to the chart showing your six chains. This chart must accompany the blank in every instance. Otherwise it would not be possible to verify your work.

The best chart submitted in this contest will be reproduced in The Constitution immediately upon the close of the contest, so that all contestants can check their results with it.

COUNCIL MANAGER FOR CITY URGED

A drive to substitute the council manager form of government for that now in effect in Atlanta will be inaugurated by the Atlanta League of Women Voters at a meeting to be held at the Piedmont hotel Tuesday night, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Sanford Gay, president of the league.

Following adoption of a resolution last week calling for an organization independent from any now in existence to draft a charter amendment and put a council manager form of government into effect here, officers of the league have called on representative citizens, and sent a number of circulars, seeking support of the movement.

A council manager committee of the league will be appointed at Tuesday's meeting and will work in conjunction with the citizens already have pledged their support.

The movement is in no way a criticism of present city officials, members of the league state, but has been undertaken simply to abolish the present system. The council manager form was recommended by Dr. A. R. Hatton, noted charter expert, who delivered a series of lectures here recently under auspices of the League of Women Voters.

WOODMEN NAME NEWMAN AS HEAD

W. H. Newman was elected council commander of Empire state camp No. 7, Woodmen of the World, at a meeting Friday night at the Red Men's wigwag.

Other officers, named to serve the organization for 1925, are: Adviser, Lieutenant G. V. Moore; Clerk, M. U. Smith; Banker, C. C. Mason; Treasurer, C. R. Miller; Watchman, J. M. Davis; Secretary, C. L. Jolly; Auditors, W. S. McEntee, C. M. Lewis and J. R. Scott. Physicians, Herbert B. Kennedy, Walter W. Daniel and Archibald Smith, and Post E. T. Williams, Camp No. 7, in conjunction with the Manly Grove circle No. 86, Ladies' auxiliary, will give an annual Christmas tree.

PRESIDENT SIGNS DEFICIENCY BILL

Washington, December 6.—President Coolidge today signed the deficiency bill providing $126,000,000 for administration and initial payments under the soldier bonus act and carrying out the recommendations of the reclamation fact finding commission.

NEW VELLE MEETS UNUSUAL SUCCESS

"The satisfaction which Velle cars are giving to their owners is no matter of chance," declares F. E. Bradfield, vice president of the Velle Motors corporation, Moline, Illinois. "It is the predetermined result of skillful engineering and building.

"In the Velle car is combined for the first time maximum beauty and smartness, economical operating qualities, ease of operation, performance, long life and safety.

The visitor to the Velle factories is amazed to learn that the same high-grade steels that are used in the Ve-lie car are also used in the highest-priced cars built today.

"Careful analysis by Velle engineers," continues Mr. Bradfield, "has resulted in the 'spotting' of every fast wearing part in a motor car and exhaustive tests have been made to determine the most efficient material to be used in these places.

"Every part of the famous Velle airplane type motor is subjected to rigid tests and inspections to determine their fitness, as all the transmission gears, the shafts, the axles and every other important part and the result is a smoothness of operation, which is so characteristic of the Velle Six."

Red Cross Meeting.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Atlanta chapter, Red Cross, will be held Tuesday afternoon, December 9, at 4 o'clock, at the office of Mr. J. S. Parker, Healy building, according to announcement Saturday.

RADIO STARS TO SING FOR CABLE PATRONS

Probably the most unique service ever inaugurated by a southern concern now is being offered by the Cable Piano company, the well-known music house of Atlanta.

Having entered into a contract with Ed and Grace McConnell, famous radio stars and entertainers, formerly of Newnan, Ga., now Atlanta's own, the company is offering their services for public personal appearances to organizations purchasing pianos.

The McConnells are presenting their well-known brand of humor and music, and are appearing for churches, schools, fraternities, clubs and other organizations without guarantee of any sort. Proceeds from these affairs, less the expense of putting on the entertainment, are applied to the purchase price of pianos selected by these organizations. No extra charge is made for this service. It is merely a service inaugurated by the Cable Piano company to promote larger sales and to increase the good will of the public.

The McConnells have established an office on the third floor of the Cable Piano company, 84 North Broad street, where they are meeting their many friends, and from which two stenographers are engaged in answering the hundreds of radio correspondents who write to them each week.

KANSAS' DECISION ON KLAN DELAYED

Topeka, Kan., December 6.—Another month's delay in the two-year-old Ku Klux Klan ouster suit is probably in store. The supreme court failed today to hand down its decision in the case, which was argued a month ago and under ordinary procedure would have been handed down today.

CROSS FIGURE PUZZLE

The Atlanta Constitution's Cross Figure Puzzle

First Prize $1,000.00 in Cash

The Elephant puzzle recently conducted by The Atlanta Constitution proved so popular with Atlanta Constitution readers that the Cross Figure puzzle is announced, with large cash prizes, to satisfy the demand for another puzzle.

The first prize is $1,000.00. The second prize is $500.00. All prizes in the Elephant puzzle contest have been paid, and the names and addresses of the prize winners published. The prize winners in the Elephant puzzle are barred from participation in this puzzle. This gives the losers a better chance. Remember: every cent paid is credited upon your Constitution subscription. So you cannot lose even though you do not win. Nearly everyone is interested in the Cross Word puzzles, and working on them for fun and pastime. You can work on The Constitution's Cross Figure puzzle for fun and profit.

Someone is going to win that $1,000.00 prize. Why not you? No one has a better chance if you get busy and put forth the proper effort.

PROBLEM

Draw three separate chains of circles horizontally (left to right), and three perpendicularly (top to bottom) through the puzzle chart, locating them so as to obtain the greatest difference you can between the sum total of the figures in the circles running horizontally and the sum total of those in the circles running perpendicularly.

Allow at least two rows, or columns, of figures to intervene between any two chains running either horizontally or perpendicularly. You may allow as many more to intervene as you may find expedient.

The figures in the circles where the horizontal and perpendicular chains cross, or come into contact, are to be included in the totals of both chains. There will be nine such points of contact where the figures are to be added into the totals of both the horizontally and perpendicularly running chains.

You are not required to obtain the greatest possible difference that may exist between the two totals in this cross-figure puzzle. The prizes will be awarded to those submitting respectively the greatest difference without regard to whether any of them is the greatest possible difference or not. The greatest difference you can find, therefore, may win for you the first or some other prize.

The accompanying illustration demonstrates what is meant by a "chain of circles."

This illustrative chart contains the same number of figures as the cross-figure puzzle. Note there are three horizontal and three perpendicular chains. The figures in the three former are seventy-five and in the latter fifty-one. Add together the seventy-five figures in the horizontal chains and from that total subtract the sum total of the fifty-one figures in the perpendicular chains. Use any rows of figures you wish in constructing your horizontal chains and any columns you wish for your perpendicular chains. Note there are two columns allowed at least two figures to intervene between any two parallel chains. The chains in the illustration have been obtained by locating them drawn in at random and without regard as to whether better results might have been obtained by locating them differently. This illustration, therefore, gives a general idea of what is to be done, but does not furnish a clue or key to what rows or columns of figures you can encircle in the puzzle chart to the best advantage. Mistakes in adding figures, or in subtracting the totals, will disqualify your answer.

When you have obtained the best solution you can find, insert in the subscription and solution blank the sum total of the figures in the horizontal chains and directly under this the sum total of the figures in the perpendicular chains and then the difference between the two. Attach this to the chart showing your six chains. This chart must accompany the blank in every instance. Otherwise it would not be possible to verify your work.

The best chart submitted in this contest will be reproduced in The Constitution immediately upon the close of the contest, so that all contestants can check their results with it.

GENERAL RULES OF THE CONTEST

- Only bona fide residents of Georgia and adjoining states, meaning Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina, and Tennessee may take part in this contest. Employees of The Atlanta Constitution and immediate members of their families, and persons who won prizes in the elephant puzzle contest conducted by The Constitution, are barred from entering this puzzle contest.
- No solution will be accepted unless accompanied by a subscription payment of not less than three months.
- A contestant may submit as many solutions as desired, provided each solution once received and recorded cannot be changed or withdrawn.
- Only one prize will be paid to any person, household, or group of persons working together. When in the judgment of the contest manager, two or more solutions have been copied or worked in collusion, such solutions may be rejected by him and the subscription money refunded.
- The Constitution is to decide any question which may arise that is not covered by the published rules, and those entering this contest agree to abide by its decisions and accept them as final and conclusive.

All solutions must be mailed or delivered to The Constitution office on or before 9:00 P. M., Tuesday, January 20th, 1925. Solutions sent by mail bearing postmark of that date will be accepted. This contest extends from Sunday, December 7th, 1924, to and including Tuesday, January 20th, 1925.

In case of ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied before any prizes are awarded for less correct solutions; and another puzzle will be submitted to those tied. That is, if two or more people should tie on the best solution, the first two or more prizes will be reserved for them, and they will be rewarded in the order of the standing of their solutions of the second puzzle.

In the event of ties for any prize, or prizes, a second puzzle of the same type as this cross-figure puzzle will be presented to those tied to solve. However, instead of single figures the numbers will consist of double figures such as 15, 24, 36, etc., and the problem will be to construct a chain of circles across the chart so as to obtain the greatest difference between the sum total of the even and sum total of the odd figures within the circles. If necessary to dispose of further ties, this puzzle will be presented for as many as five additional times under slightly changed conditions and rules, after which, should any ties ensue, each contestant will receive the full value of whatever prize he wins.

The contest is open to both old and new subscribers alike. The regular subscription rate of $2.50 for three months, $5.00 for six months, $9.50 for twelve months to the daily and Sunday Constitution will prevail. Daily only subscriptions will not be accepted in this contest. Full amount of subscription must be remitted in every instance. When sent through an agent, no commission can be deducted.

A person who is now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, and paying a carrier or agent by the week or month may send or bring direct to The Constitution a three, six, or twelve months' payment with the solution. Whatever the carrier, dealer, or agent must be paid to him, as the remittance sent us should date from the day it is received. The carrier or agent will be notified by The Constitution of such advance payment. Renewals on mail subscriptions will be extended for the length of time paid for from present date of expiration. The contestant can have solution credited in his or her name, and paper sent to some other party. Two six-months' subscriptions at $5.00 each are equal to one yearly subscription. One six-months' subscription at $5.00 and two three-months' subscriptions at $2.50 each, totaling remittance $10.00, are equal to one yearly or two six-months' subscriptions.

IMPORTANT FACTS TO REMEMBER

While the amount you pay with the solution of the puzzle does not have any effect on your winning a prize, it does affect the amount you will receive, should you win one of the first nine prizes, as the value of these prizes is determined by what the winner pays. This is explained in the prize list, which you should study carefully before sending in your solution.

Remember that the subscription and solution blank must not be separated from the cross figure chart. The time a solution is received has no bearing upon its winning a prize. Accuracy is what counts. No more than one prize will be awarded to any one person.

The Amazing Crime

by Henry C. Rowland

Henry C. Rowland, author of this new Blue Ribbon serial, is the author of "To the Strong the Fair," "$100,000 Reward," "Spice," and a series of great stories about the band of international crooks operating in Paris after the war. He is one of the most popular fiction writers in America. His stories always have a compelling plot, vivid characterization, and a dash of mystery, of adventure, and love.

SHELBY POINDEXTER, daughter of a middle western banker, would have liked to be a scientific detective or an astute young woman secret service agent. She cherished a secret, boyish craving for adventure. But she hardly hoped to get it in such wholesome quantities and so close to home—crime and mystery and excitement all getting into her daily life.

*The Airplane
a Turkey Buzzard*

AT THE START of the story occurs the crime that suggests the amazing possibilities for destruction controlled by the gang Shelby is to oppose. There is the inexplicable lassitude of men usually quick, vigorous and active there is the strange visit of the colonel of the Royal Dutch Engineers, the airplane with wings like a turkey buzzard that hovers above the scene; and the arrival of Shelby Poindexter and young John Olivant just as the criminals are leaving.

BUT THE FIRST crime is merely experimental. You will be thrilled by the series of adventures which involve Shelby; Tom Payne, a rich friend; Cla-

It seems that after the Alabamians had already made one trip to the west with Mike Dumeire, the regulars, along with Mike Dumeire, were stricken with fever, and with this contingent confined to sick rooms, Coach Reynolds Tichenor, then assistant football coach, gathered together a number of substitutes and regulars and set out for the game in Dallas. Most notable among the cripples was John Davis, then mascot at fullback, who had been stricken with fever.

The selection of an all-eastern eleven is a difficult assignment under any conditions. It is particularly difficult this year because of the fine performances turned in by so many men on the various elevens throughout this section. I have limited myself further by eliminating, without consideration, all members of the Yale team who have not played the last game. The reason for this is quite obvious and requires no explanation.

Against Cornell, McGinley stood out far above any of his fellows. Beattie at the other tackle did not really find himself in his two final games. But against Cornell, McGinley stood out as did McGinley against Cornell. Strong, rugged and powerful in his close line play, fast and shifty in his covering of kicks he would not be out of his element in the back field.

Garbisch, of the Army, and also a center, is placed at guard. Garbisch is an inspiration and a fine football player. He would play center on defense and guard when on attack. Garbisch was a guard during his first year at West Point. The rest of the team is as follows:

NOTRE DAME TO DEFEAT STANFORD

Flying Wedge Described by Late Columbia Coach

Greatest Play Houghton Ever Saw Devised by Man Who Never Played on Grid

Experts Prepare All-American Team for Constitution

This is the tenth of a series of articles describing great football strategies told by the leading coaches of the country in interviews with J. P. Glass and George Byrnes. Other numbers will include stories by Dawson and Yost.

(Copyright, 1924, in United States and Canada and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

AS TOLD BY THE LATE PERCY D. HAUGHTON,
Former Head Coach, Columbia University; Also Former Coach at Harvard.

It is a curious fact that the greatest football strategy I ever saw devised by a man who never had played the game.

Interesting, too, is the circumstance that it came up during the first college game I ever attended, a struggle between Harvard and Yale at Springfield, Mass., in 1892, when I was a boy in my early teens.

In later years I was on a university team and then as coach, practically every important strategic development in the game has come to my attention. But none has arisen to erase the conviction created by that first adventure in the technical realm of a sport which, more than any other, offers opportunity for tactical invention.

Nor can this be attributed to my youthful mind being more impressionable than my mature one. The reaction produced in me was felt by every recognized authority on the game throughout the country. The strategy was the all-absorbing topic of conversation for many succeeding days wherever men happened to be discussing football and it continued to be a leading gridiron theme for several years afterward.

New Epoch Introduced.
It was, in fact, the introduction to a new epoch. Paying the way for other related strategies it was the genesis of practically all standard formations during the ten years that followed.

One unique result was that its originator, despite the fact that he never had played the game, became head coach at Harvard. However, it was only natural that the man who had devised so important a departure as "flying interference"—for that was what his strategy produced—should receive recognition.

The man was Lorin F. Deland, an inventor of Cambridge, Mass. A constant attendant at games in which Harvard took part, he developed an intense interest in football. It became a hobby with him and he was soon known as a dyed-in-the-wool football theorist.

Flying Interference.
Many strategies were devised by him and turned over to Harvard for use against its gridiron enemies. There is no record of this, but in 1892, he evolved "flying interference." This met favor with the authorities in charge of the Crimson eleven, particularly as it was recognized that some strategy was required to counter the extraordinary power possessed that year by its long-time rival, Yale.

In Deland's time, orthodox formation for the team kicking off was a V-shaped wedge in the center of the field which got into action from a standing start. To procure "flying interference" he perfected a system by which the standing wedge became a "flying wedge." Deland and the many variations he has since devised to the game have passed on. But the term "flying wedge" remains, an established phrase in the English language. The importance of what he accomplished.

It is hard not to assume an historical note in speaking of Harvard's football of the late 1890s and early 1890s. It was the period of gridiron figures, who, like the great Hel-felinger of Yale, have since been the subject of legend. The Yale players were the athletes at all contests were such odd and interesting characters as "Bessie" Carter, the motherly woman who cooked the food for the Harvard training table, and "Old John," the celebrated peanut and rice man, both of whom were the recipients of affectionate ovations from the crowds that equaled and sometimes surpassed those given the players.

Neutral Field Selected.
Rivalry between Harvard and Yale was so intense that when they met it was on a neutral field.

Like every Boston boy of school age I had read football, talked it and played it whenever and wherever the opportunity offered. It was an opportunity of vast importance to me when I found I was to be a spectator of the annual classic between these two giants in 1892.

Hampton park, at Springfield, where the struggle took place, was the goal of 20,000 persons, an enormous crowd for those days. The wooden stands which flanked the field in the extreme, "Bessie" wearing a crimson badge, and "Old John," conspicuous in a long red robe and square mortar cap, by their appearance to the tune of uproarious applause. Joseph Choate, United States ambassador to Great Britain, cheered lustily for Harvard on one side of the field, while from the other the great Chauncey M. Depew replied for Yale.

"Acta of Human Passions."
Excitement was at fever heat from the first whistle blown. In its account of the game next day, spoke of Hampton park as "an Acta of human passions, bellying with the motherly thunder of a dozen tornadoes—a huge quadrangular crater filled to the brim with the hoarse tumult of human passions, and blazing with blue and crimson fires."

PLAYERS WORE HAIR LONG WHEN HAUGHTON YOUNG.

In 1892 when Percy Haughton was seeing his first collegiate game at Harvard, little dreaming that one day he would represent the Crimson on the gridiron and later become the directing genius of its football fortunes, the players were a fearsome lot.

In 1880, a Princeton player who was to the followers of the pastime the same sort of institution that Nick Altrock is to the baseball fans of today, had committed a gorgeous bit of horseplay by growing an enormous crop of hair. Playing against Harvard spectacularly, his locks were taken seriously as a natural protection. No player would appear without a mop of hair until 1895, when Yale went against Harvard close-shaven. Instantly long hair became out-of-date.

Percy Haughton, in his own undergraduate days at Harvard, was a crack end and was also a figure of note in baseball. At one time he was a racquet champion and in 1916 he became president and part-owner of the Boston National League club.

He started coaching at Cornell in 1899.

He was Harvard's football boss for nine years and a schedule of 77 games played during most of this period shows 64 victories, 5 ties and only four defeats.

Haughton in 1918 became a major in the chemical corps, and went to Columbia in 1923.

The V-shaped wedge which was to form the basis of Professor Deland's invention.

Princeton originated it and it became standard, making a joke of the kick. The quarterback stood over the ball in the center of the field. The rest of the team, starting at a point slightly in his rear, was arranged in oblique lines, the front of a V, with five men in each wing.

The quarterback put the ball in play by taking hold of it and touching it with his foot. Then he tucked it against his body, his team mates closed in tight against him and they all charged down the field. The merit of the play lay in the circumstances that while technically it was a kick-off the opposition did not get possession of the ball.

Spectator Surprised.
This was the formation with which Yale opened the first half and it was the one which everybody expected Harvard to employ when the second half began. But when the intermission which succeeded the first half ended—despite the bitterest sort of struggle neither side had scored—and the final came out, the reaction of the spectators was a murmur of surprise ran through the throng of spectators.

Yale lined up in the usual formation, but Harvard's line was different. The line was a V-shaped wedge, the intersection of the side-line and Harvard's 35-yard line, five men—Center Lewis, Left Guard Waters, Right Tackle Newell, Right Halfback Laidlaw and Fullback Gray—deployed in "Indian" file in an oblique line which pointed toward Quarterback Trafford, on the extreme left, in the angle formed by the side-line and Harvard's 35-yard line, four men—Right Guard Mackie, Left Tackle Upton, Left End Emmons and Right Halfback Laidlaw—were similarly arranged, their line also pointing toward Trafford.

The Big Sensation.
What did it all mean? This was the question in the mind of every person save the few who were in on the secret of the Deland strategy. But the mystery soon was dispelled. With-out putting the ball in play—this prevented the Yale men from getting into action—Trafford waved both his arms. Instantly, the five-man combination of the right and the four-man combination on the left, charged toward him. Running in lock-step, and gathering momentum as they progressed, the two combinations directly neared Trafford.

As they did so, Fullback Brewer hurled himself forward between them. At exactly the right moment, the right and the four-man combination of the right and the four-man combination of the left, charged toward him. Running in lock-step, and gathering momentum as they progressed, the two combinations directly neared Trafford.

Threat Is Limitless.
The threat of attack is limitless. The Harvard machine was pitched into full speed before Yale could even get into motion. Harvard and Yale adherents alike foresaw a long advance and even the probability of a touchdown. In the Blue stands a stunned silence ensued. Followers of the Crimson were bursting with delight and began to shout a chorus of victory.

The Yale players, rallying as quickly as they could, threw themselves against the Harvard wedge. But they did not stop it. But what they were unable to do, fate attended to. Brewer, carrying the ball, tried to evade the interference on the Bulldog's 35-yard line, fell to the ground and was pinned down promptly by a Yale man.

The "flying wedge" had accomplished a notable gain of 20 yards and, as it did not immediately stop it, had opened a new vista for football. But I must confess to a deep disappointment, which has persisted for 32 years, that Deland's really splendid advice did not accomplish an immediately commensurate result. It should have been followed by a touchdown and that touchdown should have meant a Crimson victory.

Score Prevented.
Unfortunately, having stopped this play, Yale stopped others. Having prevented a Harvard score, it proceeded to make one for itself. An injury which took Emmons, the Crimson mainstay at left end, out of the line-up counted materially. Brewer lifted a long punt to Butterworth, who ran it back five yards to Yale's ten-yard line. "Laurie" Bliss, the

Coach Demonstrates How the Game Is Played

Philadelphia, December 6.—Alumni of the University of Pennsylvania today vanquished the hitherto undefeated Red and Blue varsity eleven, 12 to 0. Only three punts were played.

In the second period Lou Young, coach of the varsity, playing for the alumni, straight-armed six of his pupils and dashed 30 yards for a touchdown.

STARS OF EAST DEFEAT WEST

Cleveland, December 6.—An all-star eastern college football team defeated an all-star western eleven today by a score of 13 to 12 in a game staged by the Big Ten club to provide funds for the hoped-for Cleveland stadium. The crowd was disappointingly small.

The all-star football game—a contest that ended with a fourth period packed full of thrills. Though the east seemed to have the edge all the way, the west nearly won the game by a brilliant spurt in the last period. Nardacci, the little West Virginia halfback, made both touchdowns for the east. He kicked the extra point. Iowa quarterback, made both for the west. Prevost of Penn State, place-kicked once for the point that decided the victory. The other three attempts at point after touchdowns were blocked.

East (W. Va.)—(12) Belding (Iowa) (All-American); (13) Rohrer (Wisc.) (Star); (14) Slaughter (Mich.) Johnson (IIT); (15) Vick (Mich.) Crowther (Col.); (16) Taylor (O. S.); Prevost (P. State); (17) Hancock (Iowa) Hynes (Colgate); (18) Anderson (N. D.); Ashbaugh (Pitt.); (19) B. E. Fletcher (Ill.) Dahl (Allegheny); (20) Gibson (Case); Hadden (W. & J.); (21) Stringer (Cornell).
Score by periods: 0 0 6 7
Touchdowns: East, Nardacci (West Virginia) 2; West, Devine (Iowa) 2.

JOHNSTON LEADS N. CAR. STATE

Raleigh, N. C., December 6.—Al A. Johnston of Rocky Mount, N. C., has been elected captain of the North Carolina State football team for next year. He plays halfback and has been on the team two years.

Blue left halfback, made a brilliant 40-yard run to Yale's 50-yard line. Then came a series of irresistible smashes for short distances that eventually put C. Bliss, Blue right halfback, over the line for a touchdown. Butterworth kicked goal and the score was 6 to 0 in Yale's favor. But this was the final result.

NOW that about the only games left for this year are Pennsylvania-California and Notre Dame-Stanford, the all-American, the all-Eastern and the all-Southern team selection season is well under way. All-Southern teams have been named. Today Tad Jones, coach of the undefeated Yale eleven, names his all-Eastern aggregation. Next Sunday, in The Constitution, Knute Rockne, coach of the unbeaten Irish, picks his all-Middle Western crowd.

The biggest thing in the all-American line right now, though, that is scheduled for early publication is the combined and joint selection of an all-American eleven by the country's three greatest coaches—Jones, Rockne and Glenn (Pop) Warner, coach of the undefeated Leland Stanford team. It will appear soon in The Constitution as probably the most authoritative pick available. Three great coaches, in different sections of the United States, who have seen practically all of the stars, are making the selection. That's enough to make it authoritative.

GORDON KEITH'S all-prep selection for the schools in and near Atlanta is of more than passing interest. The men who pick the college all-something squads are picking men generally who are winding up brilliant careers. The prep boys are just getting a good start. Where are they going? What will they do when they move up to the colleges and universities? Have they the stuff to perform in the bigger game with the same brilliance that marked their prep athletic careers?

the boys who star in prep schools. There are a lot of different southern schools anxious to get every one of the all-prep material from this year's prep schools here. Stumpy Thomason goes to Georgia Tech; Jacobsen, U. S. B. end, goes to Georgia; Malsby, U. S. B. guard, goes to Oglethorpe; Smith, quarterback, goes to Auburn; and Spear, a tackle, goes to Tech. They spread out to different fields, but Atlanta eyes are always focused on them. An all-prep selection has considerable meaning.

HOW MUCH DID YOU LOSE ON MOREHOUSE YESTERDAY? Something like twenty years ago, Atlanta University beat Morehouse college for the city colored collegiate football championship. Since then Morehouse has won consistently. Yesterday, Atlanta University boys scooped up a couple of fumbles and completed a season of awful upsets by spilling Morehouse, 13 to 0, and without making a first down.

Believe us, Algonquin, those Morehouse and Atlanta U. boys play football. They don't miss it. They played the hardest game yesterday that we have seen this season, and we bare none. That little Green came out on the field like a race horse. For a while all he used his speed for was to keep out of the way of Morehouse tonnage, but when he scooped up the fumble he went 70 yards to Morehouse's goal in darn short order. We're not going to miss the game Tuskegee plays here shortly.

MOREHOUSE HAS A NOTRE DAME STUNT. At the end of the first quarter the starting backfield retires and the "four horsemen" replace it as the second squad starts. Dark horses, of course, but they didn't show the usual effectiveness of most dark horses with the kind of jockeys A. U. puts out.

Georgia Distance Runners Beat Tech by One Point

BY MACK THARPE.
The University of Georgia cross country team was successful in downing the Yellow Jacket cross country team by one point yesterday afternoon at Grant field. The final count showed Georgia 27, Tech 28, but in a cross country race the holder of the smaller score happens to be the winner.

4 HORSEMEN STRICTLY AMATEURS

Notre Dame, Ind., December 6.—(Special.)—The four horsemen and their leader, Captain Adam Walsh, today discredited reports that they were anticipating participation in the professional football next fall, the denial came voluntarily from the men when they read stories appearing in western papers during their trip to the east last week in which it was alleged that the entire backfield and Adam Walsh would play on one of the leading pro clubs of the country next season.

Don Miller is now preparing to take the bar examination preparatory to establishing a practice under the guidance of his brothers in Cleveland. Instead of practicing his feet flat and firm and getting set for the delivery, Cobb was on his toes. He used a snap swing, a quick chop, and therefore he hit himself.

Could Meet Any Ball.
Being on his toes he could quickly shift his body and using the chop he could meet any kind of ball. The pitcher delivered and place it. Where the orthodox system demanded that the batter wait until the pitcher put the ball over the plate, or gave him a break, Cobb was ready to meet it with his stand at the plate, the quick, changing shift, he perfected the scientific style of hitting. There are not many players who can do this. He is a natural hitter. He is a natural hitter. He is a natural hitter.

TECH SOLDIERS START FOOTBALL

Battalion football got off with a good start Saturday afternoon, with the first battalion winning from the fourth and the second stopping the third.

Chapman, for the first battalion, was the outstanding mark in the backfield for the afternoon, opening the game with a brilliant forty yard run. Knight and Hal Smith played the most consistent game in the line for the first battalion, holding down the ends in great style.

The next game between the second and third battalions proved to be a closely contested one with the second winning after a series of passes which placed the ball on the one-yard line. Then they bucked it over for a touchdown. The game ended 7-0.

BY WALTER CAMP,
(Special Correspondent of The Constitution.)

San Francisco, December 6.—(Special.)—There is the most widespread interest in the post-season games out here on the coast this year, and it will give the whole country—south, east and middle west—some idea of what this means when one considers for a moment that more people witnessed the California-Stanford game out here than were ever gathered together to see any athletic contest. There were 78,000 in the stadium and 15,000 paid for seats on a prepared hillside, while several thousand more dotted adjoining hillsides of less advantageous position, but still within sight of the play.

Each of these two teams takes on as competitors on New Year's day an opponent of the highest caliber—Pennsylvania, while Stanford ranks—California playing Pennsylvania, an unbeaten eastern team, and Stanford meeting Notre Dame, acknowledged as one of the greatest teams of the year.

Already all sorts of speculation is going on as to the results and the general consensus of opinion out here is that the contest will be a great one. Stanford is not as good, and they have no general to match Stuhldreher, one of the best quarterbacks in the country. They have, however, in Lawson, a fine end of the rugged type and a fighting line that is good on the defense, and in Hay they have a great line plunger. Moreover, their success over California in the forward passing game has given them great confidence in their own attack. Both the coaches of teams had a good serviceable kicking game with the ends covering the kicks.

STUHLDREHER LAUDED.
Turning to the Stanford-Notre Dame affair, the latter's backfield, known as the "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in the best welded machine in the country, while Walsh is a great center, the Stanford backfield is not as good, and they have no general to match Stuhldreher, one of the best quarterbacks in the country. Moreover, their success over California in the forward passing game has given them great confidence in their own attack. Both the coaches of teams had a good serviceable kicking game with the ends covering the kicks.

Irish More Respected.
As California and Stanford played to a tie, this indicates that Notre Dame is more respected out here than Pennsylvania. But perhaps there is another consideration to be taken into account, and that is the method by which Stanford first tied California, after the latter had led by a score of 20 to 6. The success of Stanford in Cobb decided that this handicap could be offset by using three bats. Just before his turn at bat he would pick up three bats and swing them until he took his position at the plate. Then he would throw away two of them and the weight would be left on the third. That is what he practiced and he discovered the idea correct. He was the first player to carry three bats to the plate and nearly all players do that today.

By using three bats as a freak position at the plate, and by swinging three bats until the pitcher was ready to deliver the ball, Cobb overcame the physical handicaps of his position. Instead of planting his feet flat and firm and getting set for the delivery, Cobb was on his toes. He used a snap swing, a quick chop, and therefore he hit himself.

Weather Retards Speed.
The time was 19 minutes, 10 3-5 seconds. This was not as low as everyone predicted, but the weather conditions were responsible for the time being as much as it was. The course was wet, which will always hold the runner back. The course covers a distance of three and a half miles which goes out to the water works, and after a runner has made this the last period in making two touchdowns was due entirely to forward passes. And they argue out here that California will be able to correct their defense to that style of play.

That may and should be so. But Penn is adept at the execution of these passes, having won over Cornell by this method. So it resolves itself into the ability of Andy Smith, the California coach, who witnessed the Penn-Cornell game, to devise a satisfactory defense to this aerial game. California will find in McGinley, the Penn tackle, a tough customer, in Papivorte, a good guard, and in Craig and Fairchild excellent ends, while the Penn backfield is well above the average. On the other hand, California has in Horrell, one of the star centers in the country, and in Inlay, a most elusive runner who will take a lot of stopping should he break loose. Dixon is also good.

TY COBB'S LIFE STORY
Chapter XIV.—Swinging Three Bats—Crossing the Infield—A Bit About Hitting Left-Handers.

BY H. G. SALSINGER.
Ty Cobb began revolutionizing baseball in 1907. Having discovered a way to cross up the fielders in batting Cobb set about to discount the advantages other batting leaders had in weight and power. He realized that a bat in the hands of a giant like Lajoie, Crawford or Wagner was much lighter and easier to handle than a bat in his hands.

Cobb decided that this handicap could be offset by using three bats. Just before his turn at bat he would pick up three bats and swing them until he took his position at the plate. Then he would throw away two of them and the weight would be left on the third. That is what he practiced and he discovered the idea correct. Dear Sir:
I bought six thousand Concord grape vines from you in 1923; all proved to be Concord and bore 2,500 baskets this year. I would say to anyone that you ship exactly what you sell. I am perfectly delighted with my vineyard and its prospects.

Smythe Shows How Attacks On Exchange Will React On City's Business Interests

Editor Constitution: In response to your editorial "Why Not Atlanta," in this morning's paper, permit me to say that it voices the fond hope and expectation which has been held by those who have been working since 1916 through the Atlanta Commercial exchange, for the creation in Atlanta of the greatest southern spot market in not only cotton, but all farm products.

Our organizers have held this end in view since the conception of the Atlanta Commercial exchange, and under the presidency of E. P. McBurney, the founder of the exchange, and Frank M. Inman, and James H. Buchanan, the members have worked always, with that object ahead of them.

From a beginning of only 32 members, this institution has grown into a splendid organization of some 250 business men, representing all of the leading interests of this city, who have been steadily working for the advancement of the farm products of the southeast.

Two years ago, the public-spirited members of the exchange, with their personal funds erected a modern office building to provide enlarged exchange facilities, believing that they could induce the cotton firms of the western states to open offices here. This gave Atlanta the only building of its kind, except Memphis, between New Orleans and New York, and there are only one or two others in all the cotton states.

As a result, some four or five of the largest spot firms of this country have since established their offices in Atlanta, because the wire service and broad facilities afforded by such an exchange, with the cotton compresses and storage warehouses now in Atlanta, enabled them to handle their business to the best advantage. These firms concentrate their business in Atlanta, which means an income for compresses and laborers they bring their bank accounts here; their corps of employees rent or own homes here; and thus their expenditures reach into every channel of the city's trade.

You ask in your editorial, "Why Not Atlanta?" May I not answer that such actions as have occurred recently seem to be designed to prevent the operation of such an exchange, as is the Atlanta Commercial exchange, and yet this exchange has always been operated solely and entirely under the enactments of the congress of the United States in the Smith-Lever act, which has been pronounced constitutional by the supreme court of the United States.

Business cannot be conducted where its necessary channels are subject to interruption and interference, and it would seem therefore, that the results accomplished by the Atlanta Commercial exchange in its years of work are to be overthrown, and Atlanta is set back years in the stride which were being made toward the goal to which your editorial refers.

Firms May Withdraw. Already some of the firms with offices in Atlanta are threatening their withdrawal by their home offices, because they feel that the spirit of antagonism to the necessary and legalized methods of the cotton control business, is fraught with such risks of loss to their business, that they cannot afford to be exposed to them.

But why should "legitimate cotton trading" be proscribed because this "element enters" into all properly conducted business, of holding against speculation by the use of the government's legalized and court-approved contracts in the New York and New Orleans and now the Chicago cotton exchanges?

The Wall Street Journal of Monday, December 1, in writing of the opening of the Chicago Cotton exchange, says: "At least 80 per cent of the contracts dealt in on the two exchanges are now handled in the simplest form by a price insurance for spot cotton which someone has either bought or sold. Cotton is being handled with a smaller margin of profit than any other commodity, with the possible exception of the grain, dealt in on the exchanges."

"If price fluctuations were not insured against in the way they now are, the risk would be so great as to make cotton such a highly speculative commodity, that no one could afford to handle it without a larger margin of profit which it is not less to say would be paid by the producer himself."

"A manufacturer may have an order for cotton goods to be delivered some time in the future. He can at once accept the order for goods and then place an order for cotton to be delivered at a future date. That dealer who agrees to deliver the cotton in the future, by purchasing a contract for future delivery corresponding with his agreement to sell to the manufacturer."

"A broker on the floor of a cotton exchange does this. He takes the order of one broker with whom this broker deals, represents four times out of five it will be someone else in business who has bought the other way, and his transaction being closed, now wishes to sell. That someone else might be a dealer in Liverpool and have a contract to deliver cotton to a mill in Lancashire protected by a hedge, and as he has now delivered the cotton wishes to close out his hedge."

"This is the main function of the cotton exchanges and no other medium has ever yet been devised to furnish a protection equal to it. The United States is the producer of the world's cotton crop. It is essential that the marketing facilities for this commodity and it is in this work that Chicago is now to join."

Atlanta Strategic Point. Atlanta is the recognized strategic point between New York and New Orleans in all the southeast as the logical market to be designated by the government for spot deliveries on the contracts of New York and New Orleans and Chicago exchanges. Mr. Oxley, assistant secretary of the department of agriculture, through whose inspection and report on the methods of the Atlanta Commercial exchange, was secured for Atlanta, the designa-

WEEKLY BIBLE TALK

The Raising of Lazarus.

THE RAISING OF LAZARUS.

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan.

(John 11:31-34.)

The Jews who were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, into the grave to weep there.

Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, she said unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him! And some of them said, could not this man, who opened the eyes of the blind, have caused this even this man should not have died?

Jesus therefore then groaning in himself came to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

Jesus said, take away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, said unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh for he hath been dead four days.

Jesus said unto her, said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God?

Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid, and Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee, for thou hast heard me.

And I knew that thou hearest me always; but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they might believe that thou hast sent me.

And when he thus had spoken he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with graveclothes; and his face was bound with a napkin. Jesus said unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

The raising of Lazarus is one of the most beautiful narratives in Holy Writ. It records the effect of the Saviour as well as His supernatural power, and it also records the faith of the sisters of Lazarus.

In the verses of this ninth chapter from John preceding our text, we read the beginning of the account:

"Now a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha."

The next verse tells us that the Mary mentioned was the woman who anointed Jesus and wiped His feet with her hair.

Mary and her sister Martha sent to Jesus, saying, "Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick."

They knew that Jesus had power to heal, knowing His affection for Lazarus, they confidently expected Him to come at once and restore their brother to health.

The fact that Jesus loved Lazarus is the only fact we have upon which to make an estimate of the character of the latter, but that one fact is sufficient to establish his merit even if there had been any testimony to the contrary—but there was none.

"For the glory of God."

When the message was delivered to Jesus, He informed His disciples that this sickness was "not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby."

The same thought was conveyed in our text for last week when Jesus said that neither the man born blind nor his parents had sinned "but that the works of God should be made manifest in him."

It seems, therefore, that sickness (and even death, in this instance) may occur for the express purpose of permitting God's power to be proven.

If any one makes a protest against this Bible fact, he may recover his composure by considering that all that man has, even his health and life itself, are the gift of God.

If man is on earth to carry out a divine plan, he must accept the part assigned to him, trusting in the wisdom of the Heavenly Father. God knows best whether the result to be accomplished justifies the means employed. Both the cause and the result have resulted in the spread of belief in Christ's Messiahship.

Jesus Delays.

It will also be noted that Jesus deliberately tarried where He was long enough for Lazarus to die. That He had in mind the miracle which He afterward performed is evident from the verse already quoted and from verses eleven to fourteen, in which He plainly told the disciples that Lazarus was dead, adding, "I am glad for your sakes that I was not there."

Here we have a supernatural knowledge of a death that occurred later at a distant place, and of an intended miracle. We also have a reasonable given for the performance of the miracle.

When Jesus arrived at Bethany, Martha was the first to greet Him. Somewhat reproachfully, possibly, and yet in faith she said, "If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."

When Jesus tried to assure her that her brother would rise again, she mistook His meaning and answered as if the Master had referred to the resurrection at the last day. An immediate resurrection was more than she hoped for or even thought of.

Jesus Weeps.

Martha went back to the house and secretly informed Mary, saying, "The Master is come, and calleth for thee."

Mary expressed the same faith that Martha had and in the same language. But neither realized the fullness of Christ's power. The sisters wept and their Jewish friends wept with them. In the shortest verse in the Bible we are familiar to all Sunday school children—we are told that "Jesus wept."

In this time, faith in Christ's power was limited to His power to heal, but in this case He was to break the bonds of the tomb and call back to the body a spirit that had departed.

Even Martha, when Jesus asked that the stone be removed from the sepulchre, protested that the body had been in the grave four days and was in the process of decay. Jesus again reminded her of His promise which, it seems, had been too great for her to comprehend.

Christ thanked God in advance of the physical evidence that His silent prayer had been answered, and announced that the prayer was uttered aloud because of the multitude standing around "that they might believe that Jesus had sent me."

Was it not worth while to employ the miracle to make known the power that He possessed as the only begotten Son of the living God, and to pray publicly in order to call attention to the power about to be exercised?

Just As Easy.

The raising of the dead seems more astonishing than other miracles performed by Christ, and yet it does not differ from them: all of them required more than human power.

It was just as easy for a supernatural Christ to raise Lazarus from the grave as it would have been to stay the hand of death had He arrived earlier. In fact, He might just as easily have healed Lazarus from the contrary, without going to Bethany at all, but He chose this way because of the impression it would make—it was more convincing proof of His divine character.

The profound conviction produced by this miracle is felt today and will be felt throughout the ages to come. Doubting Thomases would be more numerous at the present time but for the completeness of the evidence which Christ offered of His deity.

I have dwelt upon the miraculous in this and former Bible Talks because it is the crucial point in the belief of Christians; in today's text it reaches its climax.

If One Accepts.

If one accepts as true the raising of Lazarus, he will not reject any other portion of the Bible. If, on the contrary, he rejects the miracle, the reasoning that leads him to do so will, if carried to its logical conclusion, lead him to reject one by one the other portions of the Bible.

They assume the existence of a fixed law that is inconsistent with the performance of miracles and they then proceed to rule out the miracle because it is contrary to the assumed law. In like manner, they assume that Christ was a man and nothing more; then they reject as unreasonable or impossible every supernatural act and attribute.

The Christian begins with three assumptions: First, he assumes the existence of a God, all-wise, all-powerful, all-loving—a first great cause sufficient to account for anything that is or can be.

The Atheist's Attitude.

The atheist rejects the Christian's assumption and assumes the existence of matter and force as the source of all things in existence. The atheist does not explain the origin of matter and force, he assumes their existence as the Christian assumes the existence of a God.

The Christian, we contend, is more reasonable than the atheist because it is more rational to believe that the finite came out of the infinite than to believe that the infinite came out of the finite.

So with the Bible: when we consider the superstitious and other books, its record of prophecies fulfilled and its statements of truths that could not originate, so far as we can see, with the persons who stated them, it is more reasonable to believe that the Bible was inspired than that it is a man made book.

Accepting the Bible as true, the Christian makes the basis of his reasoning, while the unbeliever, rejecting it as an uninspired book, discards it as a "collection of myths."

No Difficulty in Believing.

So, too, with the Bible: the Christian believes the Bible account of

Things New and Old About the Bible

Spiritual and Practical Interpretation.

Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

The literary interpretation has been stressed at length because it is most frequently misunderstood, but the spiritual or devotional method is of primary importance for the cultivation of spiritual life. Sympathy with the life, spirit and purpose of the Bible is necessary, the fullest appreciation. The secret of the Bible's greatness is the inspiration of its authors and the key to its richest treasure is the inspiration of the reader. The divine element in the Scripture will not yield its full significance to critical tests. The Holy Spirit bestows special inspiration and guidance upon the devout reader. A noted biblical scholar says: "He is to be said to understand a writer who in reading thinks the same thing that the writer thought when writing." Dr. Fiske, of Yale, has forcefully said: "We cannot fully understand the Bible until we possess more of its religious experience." While the Scriptures are to be interpreted as other literature, its interpretation is not to be based on the literary or historical, but on the spiritual and devotional. The Bible is to be interpreted as a living word, and its meaning is to be found in the life of the reader.

All this is a strangely confused notion. It is a strange notion to assume that there is no occasion to exercise human judgment on the matter of faith and practice as settled by human discussion.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

CARE OF SCRATCHES.

I get cuts and scratches quite often, and I use iodine and vaseline but have poor success with it. Please suggest the proper care of such minor wounds. (Rev. B. W. S.)

Answer: Immediately wash the cut or scratch or abrasion once only with ordinary tincture of iodine, then apply an appropriate protective dressing, but not petroleum jelly as a rule. If the wound is not bleeding, seal it over with a coating of flexible collodion. Or cover it with a piece of adhesive plaster. You see the important feature, after the immediate first-aid application of iodine, is to prevent contact of anything with the wound, that is anything not sterile.

The Old Plant Controversy.

You told an inquirer that it is healthful to have growing plants in the sickroom or bedroom. Why, please? I have been told often that they take the life out of the air, rob it of oxygen or similar things. (Mrs. M. E.)

Answer: The amount of oxygen a profusion of growing plants would use is infinitesimal and of no importance in the sickroom or bedroom. There is enough carbon dioxide from the air and give off enough oxygen to be of some service in freshening or purifying the air for human beings. Then the notes, if porous, evaporate considerable moisture, which is sorely needed in the average heated room. Finally, the plants afford pleasure to the invalid and other occupants of the room. So the more plants you can keep growing the more healthful everybody will be—except maybe Sissy Gamp.

Shaving.

Is it at all possible for one to develop a cancer from shaving the hairs from the under arm? (F. P. E.)

Answer: Any prolonged or frequent irritation predisposes to the development of cancer, but probably shaving with a safety razor is the least irritating way to remove hair.

X-Ray and Tonsils.

Please tell me whether X-ray treatment is effective in place of surgical removal of infected tonsils. (B. K.)

Answer: Infected or diseased tonsils are best removed by operation. X-ray treatments are generally not satisfactory in such cases, but in to believe. But Luther and Calvin both held that the church was requiring men to believe a false interpretation of the Scriptures. And they both said that the only possible way out was for each Christian to read and decide for himself. Of course the private reader might be even more mistaken than the pope. But that was between him and his God. There was where God had located the responsibility for finding truth and keeping it, and the church could not put the obligation anywhere else. This is the meaning of private judgment as the reformers insisted on it. And to say that it has nothing to do with the Bible is to make the whole Protestant position a phantasm.

This is closely related to the spiritual method, but gives an additional stress to the exercise of the will. We may best understand the word by using the word. There is wonderfully illuminating power in a good deed. We can never really understand the high command "Love your enemies" only merely enlarged tonsils (and adenoids) X-ray treatments are often satisfactory.

Company.

How can I get rid of nits? I have used kerosene and rid the hair of the lice, but the nits are still there. (B. A.)

Answer: The nits are the eggs glued to the shafts of hairs near the scalp. Saturating the hair with kerosene, for a few hours, then a shampoo, usually kills off the lice. Care must be taken to avoid flame while kerosene is on the hair. To remove the nits moisten a soft cloth with hot vinegar and draw small strands of hair through the cloth.

Calories in Protein.

How many calories are there in an ounce of protein? What amount or proportion of protein is there in an ear of the corn? (C. M.)

Answer: About 113 calories. About 3 per cent of the nutritive material of green corn is protein.

Kidney Stones.

My doctor tells me I have kidney stones. Someone said I should not drink lake water on account of the chlorine but should use spring water. Kindly advise me whether lake water is injurious. (A. E. S.)

Answer: Had your doctor thought so he would have advised you not to drink lake water. The chlorination of the water supply is a factor of safety for us all and in no way injurious. I know no reason why one with kidney stones should prefer spring water to lake water for drinking.

Cancer of the Stomach.

I would like to get one of those little stomachs, if you will please tell me where. (M. E.)

"North of 36" at Howard Theater 4th Anniversary

The Sunshine Kiddies Are Featured in the Prologue.

"North of 36," the new Paramount picture which will be the fourth anniversary presentation at the Howard this coming week, is an epic of the stirring and colorful pioneer days that bridged the gap between Indian warfare and America's industrial birth.

The story takes place just after the Civil War—a story of the greatest of all cattle drives from the plains of Texas to the markets of Kansas, then the far-west terminal of civilization. The tale has an historical as well as romantic appeal. Miss Wilson, as the young girl who leads her 16 loyal and devoted cowboys and the immense herd of cattle over an unblazed trail for many hundreds of miles, is a dauntless, courageous character.

This is Jack Holt, the young man who loves her, but does not aspire to her because he is a killer, and who guards her from many perils despite her scorn of him, because she believes he is a thief and in league with a ruffian.

Rudabaugh (Noah Beery) commands interest and admiration throughout. There is tracking of a murderer, political intrigue, perilous fording of swollen rivers, stampeding cattle, an encounter with Indians, love—the story has all the elements of a stirring picture with the colorful, picturesque background of the days following the Civil War, when this country was in the throes of a grim reconstruction.

Ernest Torrence, playing Jim Nabors, Taisie's (Miss Wilson) ranch foreman, completes the quartette of featured players in the production. Other big names in the cast are David Dunbar, Stephen Carr, Guy Oliver, William Carroll, Clarence Geldhardt, George Irvin and Ella Miller. Irvin Willat directed the production, which was adapted by James Hamilton from Emerson Hough's great novel. The "Sunshine Kiddies," a troupe of children from four to twelve, who made a decided hit here a few weeks ago, have been brought back for the fourth anniversary celebration, and will present a special miniature musical show.

Mr. Keese, recently-appointed musical director of the Howard, has taken hold with a vim and prepared an elaborate musical setting for the fourth anniversary program. For an overture he has selected a work seldom heard in Atlanta, entitled "Capriccio Espagnol," by the celebrated Russian composer, Rimsky-Korsakov.

During the presentation of the comedy, the Howard symphony orchestra will predominate in a series of latest popular successes, featuring "Where's My Sweetie Hiding?" Because of the popularity of this unit Mr. Keese is presenting them on the stage in a unique version of "Everything You Do."

The feature picture, "North of 36,"

MANHATTAN, AT RIALTO, STARS RICHARD DIX

Taken From Farnol's Novel,
"The Definite Object."

Richard Dix and the Rialto theater join in a gala celebration this week. Dix is a star in his own right and the Rialto has the honor to present to Atlanta fans and admirers Richard's first starring picture, "Manhattan." Hence the celebration.

The comedy, "A Monkey Mix-up," has been added to the Rialto screen program and with "Manhattan" makes the list for the week one to be long remembered.

Richard Dix has attained the heights of his first venture as a star is entirely successful, according to the verdict of the great American motion picture public, which has accorded his picture a great reception.

Jackie Logan plays the pretty girl involved in "Manhattan," and the others in the cast include Gregory Kelly, one of the most popular stage stars of Broadway who makes his movie debut in this picture; George Siegmann and a list of others.

"Manhattan" was directed by R. H. Burnside from the adaptation by Paul Sloan and Frank Tuttle, of Jeffery Farnol's great novel, "The Definite Object."

In the picture Dix has the role of an active young New Yorker whose ancestors had left him more millions than he'll ever know what to do with. He is bored by the dull routine of the teas, dances and idle amusements of his set. More than anything else he craves adventure and the staid old island of Manhattan seems utterly unable to provide it. There's but one thing left to do and he does it—goes out in search of action, anything that promises excitement. His quest brings him to Hell's Kitchen section of the city and more thrills to the square foot than he ever dreamed were in store for him.

If it's pell-mell action and a real he-man story with unusual heart-appeal you're looking for, why don't trouble yourself to look further. Here it is—plus! Combine all the hair-raising scenes of all the screen thrills you've ever seen, all the high spots of the funniest comedies you've ever enjoyed and there you have "Manhattan."

It's Dix's first as a star and it's a wow!

Jackie Logan plays opposite the star in the leading woman's role.

Provides a wonderful opportunity for beautiful music and Mr. Keese has spared no effort to obtain the proper emotional and dramatic numbers necessary to enhance the beauty of the film.

Prominent in the score is "Honest and Truly," used as the theme for Lois Wilson and Jack Holt, and excerpts from "Alcala," a recent addition to American opera from the pen of Cecil Fanning and Francesco De Leone. Other short subjects such as "Aesop's Fables" have been cued with selected musical arrangements.

"LOVER OF CAMILLE" IS LOEW'S PHOTOPLAY

Star in Great Drama.

"The Lover of Camille," screen adaptation of the famous stage play, "Deburau," by Sacha Guitry, which David Belasco produced, is to be one of the features at Loew's Grand for one week beginning tomorrow.

"The Lover of Camille" is the story of Jean Gaspard Deburau, one of the many unfortunates whom Camille wins and casts aside. He is the idol of France, a master pantomimist, loved by all women except the one he loves.

Gregory Kelly, well-known on the legitimate stage for his work in the Booth Tarkington plays, "Twined," "Clarence" and others and in "Little Jessie James," is also well-cast as George Seigmann, Gunboat Smith and a host of others just as prominent.

"Manhattan's," one of Paramount's "Famous Forty."

by all women except the one he loves. Broken-hearted, he tries to hide his sorrow from the public behind his grinning mask, but the disillusioned lover cannot go on, and he leaves his beloved public forever.

Monte Blue portrays the role of Deburau, and Marie Prevost is Camille. Others in the cast are Willard Louis, Pierre Gendron, Rose Dione and Winifred Bryson.

For the first time since Sacha Guitry immortalized the role of Deburau in France and Lionel Atwill created the role in America, the great play, "Deburau," by Sacha Guitry will be seen in Atlanta.

Just as the names of Sacha Guitry and Lionel Atwill will be indelibly written into dramatic history as the authors of France and the United States on a special stage, so is the name of Monte Blue destined to be stamped into the records of cinema accomplishments as the creator of the role in the silent drama.

Those of us who loved the clown pantomimist, the hopeful suitor, the rejected lover, and finally the disillusioned actor on the legitimate stage will still love him on the screen. All that was conveyed to us through words and actions on the stage are presented through actions alone as effectively as if we could hear as well as see. Monte Blue, who has the honor of being the first to attempt the portrayal of the role on the screen, has accomplished what many have hoped for, but very few will ever achieve.

The part of Camille is played admirably by Marie Prevost, whose performance does not fail to live up to the traditional role of the Lady of the Camellias, which gained prominence in the Dumas play by the characterizations of Bernhardt, Duse, Barrymore and Rejane.

The production is of unusual merit, worthy of the names of Sacha Guitry

Howard Anniversary Week.

It's here! The Howard's fourth birthday. All week the management of the theater will celebrate with special anniversary presentations. The theater has been beautifully redecorated, new carpets and drapes have been more enticing than before. Atlanta can well be proud of such a theater to show their friends visiting them. For the gala picture offering the management after viewing several productions have decided upon "North of 36," a production even greater in scope than "The Covered Wagon." Alex Keese, the music director of the Howard symphony orchestra, has arranged an elaborate musical presentation for the anniversary that will long be remembered. The "Sunshine Kiddies," who made a decided hit here a few weeks ago, will present a very timely offering as the prologue presentation. Many other features are also included in the surprise party at the Howard and the management have spared no efforts to make the anniversary week a big one.

as the author, and David Belasco as the producer of the play.

Harry Beaumont, who was so successful in his direction of "Esu Brummel," "Babbitt," and "Main Street," has done even better work in "The Lover of Camille." This last production places him without a doubt among the foremost in the directorial ranks.

Dorothy Farnol has proved herself a genius in adapting plays for the screen by her excellent bit of work on this picture.

Norma Talmadge 'The Only Woman' At Metropolitan

Co-starred With the Perfect
Lover, Eugene O'Brien.

Norma Talmadge returns to the screen in her latest photodrama, "The Only Woman."

This feature shows Norma reunited with her erstwhile leading man, Eugene O'Brien, and the pair wend their way through a sequence of highly emotional love scenes which reach a climax in a thrillingly realistic yacht wreck.

The story, written by C. Gardner Sullivan, reverses the usual theme of sacrifices by parents for their children, and submits the problem of a girl who sacrifices herself on the altar of marriage to save her father from financial ruin and disgrace.

Though she hates the man, she marches up the church aisle amid a throng of society friends and becomes his bride, and they launch upon a honeymoon with hardly a cheery prospect in view.

It is on this honeymoon, designed as a yachting cruise on the Mediterranean, that a terrific storm arises. All members of the crew are swept overboard to destruction, and it is only through Eugene's aid that Norma is saved.

At the height of the storm a three-masted schooner bears down upon the yacht, smashing it amidships and rending the little vessel into splinters. How Norma and Eugene finally are rescued and she comes to a realization that she loves her husband are details left for you to see on the screen.

It is good entertainment, with Norma and Eugene at their best. Others in the cast include Matthew Betz, Edwards Davis, Winter Hall, Stella d'Amico, Lanti, Murdock MacQuarrie, Neil

"Romola" Mammoth Production.

Henry King's "Romola," the new inspiration picture starring Lillian Gish, is ready for public exhibition, editing of the George Eliot story having been completed last week. Dorothy Gish appears with her sister in this mammoth production, which has been over a year in the making in Florence, Italy. The verdict of Metro-Goldwyn executives who reviewed the film last week, is that "Romola" is without question one of the greatest achievements ever brought to the screen. The spectacular scenes in the film, it is said, have never been surpassed. William Powell and Ronald Colman have roles in the production.

"That new bookkeeper seems to be a hard worker." "Yes, he does seem to be a hard worker." The next question is—is he?—Louisville Courier.

Dodd, E. H. Calvert and Louis Dumont.

The main musical theme around which is built the score for "The Only Woman" is the latest ballad, "When You and I Were Seventeen." Enrico Lettis has selected this haunting melody to comment the different phases of this unusual love story, because of its flowing melody and fine harmonic texture. William Tell overture, always so popular and effective, will open the program and an organ interlude by J. Gordon Moore will round up the bill.

WHITE'S MINSTRELS AT ATLANTA THEATER

Lasses' All Star Troupe at Local Theater for Three Days.

The "Lasses" White All-Star Minstrels come to the Atlanta theater tomorrow (Monday) night, when they begin an engagement of three nights and Wednesday matinee. Now in his fifth immensely successful season, "Lasses" may be pardoned for feeling great pride in the strides the all-stars have made in its comparatively short life. Coming into a field that had many important stars bidding for the favor of the public, "Lasses" has had the proud satisfaction of seeing the organization that bears its name add to its popularity from year to year until now it is accorded a leading place in the esteem of the minstrel patrons of the country. Their recent program is the most pretentious thus far offered by "Lasses" and his fellow minstrels and includes "The Rose Arbor," a first part presented by Professor James L. Fanning and his 22 symphony artists, minstrel's best orchestra. Scenically, "The Rose Arbor" is a revelation. The olio will serve to renew acquaintance with Billy Doss, the boy with the smile, who will tickle your risibilities with a new monologue. Then there is Karl Denton, known as the Eltinge of minstrelsy, "Jazzland," as the title suggests, will offer some peppy synopses of popular songs with Burch Arkwright as arranger. Following there will be one of "Lasses'" own contributions, "Plantation Days of 1924," which calls for that all singing and dancing strength of the company. The last and biggest feature is "The Hotel de Blackville," written by "Lasses" as a broad burlesque on the 400 of Blackville. The possibilities for humorous treatment of this theme at the hands of "Lasses" will be readily seen. "The Blackville" is a comedy, comprised of Frank Long, "Jimmie" McDonald and Paul Sten, have made one of the big hits of this show. Professor James L. Fanning is the new director of orchestra of 22 pieces.

Buster Keaton's Comedy.

Wall street, the celebrated financial section of New York, is to be the setting of Buster Keaton's new Metro-Goldwyn comedy, "Seven Chances." A Joseph M. Schenck production. In this picture Buster Keaton starts out as a Wall street broker who decides to sell everything he has in accordance with Scripture teachings and give everything to the poor. He thereby ruins himself and his partners and although he is then inherits $7,000,000 on the condition that he marry within 24 hours, with the result that several thousand enterprising young women attempt to lead him to the altar. This successful comedy by Roi Cooper Megrue was produced on the stage by David Belasco. The motion picture cast includes T. Roy Barnes, Saitz Edwards, Ruth Dwyer, Marion Harlan and innumerable others. Jean Haver, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman adapted the play to Keaton's purposes.

Commuting Sap Is Portrayed As Hero of New "Boob" Play

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, December 6.—Among the eight new entertainments which came to New York this week was one produced by Arthur Hopkins and another from the studio of David Belasco, two John McGraws of the drama, two master minds who make the best of a not very good play and make the most of a good one. Hopkins invested in a comedy by Elmer Rice, the fellow who put on such a long face in a play called "The Adding Machine," which the Guild produced a couple of seasons ago, and Dorothy Parker, the girl who writes those smart verses with firecrackers in the last lines for the magazines. It is called "Close Harmony" and except the fact that its thunder seems to tinkle where they ought to boom, it has just about everything that a play needs to be rated among the best of 1924, which is plenty in this season of "What Price Glory," "They Knew What They Wanted," "Pigs," "Minick" and "The Guardsman."

Belasco offers "The Harem." Belasco's second production of the season is a farce called "The Harem," which brings back Uncle Harem to town and in which those who can never see enough of her see almost all there is, so meager is the draught of her costume. Belasco's "Harem" is rather unfortunate for "The Harem," written by Ernest Vajda, turns out to be a pretty close paraphrase of "The Guardsman," written by another Hungarian, Ferenc Molnar.

If it had only arrived a couple of months ago "The Harem" would have had the advantage of being first on the ground, and the deadly parallel would have been drawn in the other direction.

The only objection to "Close Harmony" is that Ed Graham, the henpecked and subservient laborer who is the hero of the piece, doesn't close the show with a rousing declaration of independence, which would be just a trifle and far more gratifying than his half-bred imitation that Aunt Ada would make him happy by going along to Uncle Henry. We had bet on him to go bounding up the stairs in a manly race and wallop the wadding out of his nasty little hat of a daughter. If this be hard language it only shows the power of this play to stir human resentment.

Ed is just a sap. He goes to town on the 1:25 every morning and comes home on the 5:02. His wife is one of those who say "I declare: this is the first time I've been off my feet all day." Aunt Ada is just tossed in as something extra to make things worse for Ed.

The house next door is inhabited by the Sheridans—Mr. and Mrs.—a good-looking loafer and his wife who was once in a musical show. The kinship of unhappiness, warred by a few jolts of Mr. Sheridan's Scotch, draw Ed and Mrs. Sheridan into embrace at the close of the second act, and Ed rushes home to pack his bag and go away forever with the neglected wife.

Three New Musical Shows. He tells her that he has no conscientious qualms whatever, as love and understanding do not abide in his home and he is leaving his family a house and money in the bank. At this point you can almost hear the audience rooting, "Go on, Ed; touch-down, Ed."

But Ed fumbles. Mrs. Sheridan goes alone. And when, for the first time in his life, Ed is in the mood to seize control of the family government his only gestures of revolt are in which respect he is not much different from Aunt Ada and the deliberate spilling of a couple of drops of ink on the floor.

The other openings of the week were "The Music Box Review," three musical comedies, called "Lady, Be Good," "Princess April," and "The Student Prince"; "Badges," a melodrama by Max Marcin and "The Man in Evening Clothes," wherein Henry Miller makes his annual return.

Walter Hiers.

Walter Hiers says that scores of actors and actresses, sending out advice to beginners, have failed to state that in this day, clean living is a vital part of every effort to win screen success.

"Maybe there was a time when people could advance themselves in the industry by unclean methods," Hiers declares. "If there was, it was before my time, and I have been in motion pictures for several years. But if there ever was such a time, it is gone. Nowadays is the sweet wholesome girl and the clean, likable man, who attain the topmost rung of success in motion pictures."

Doris Kenyon.

Doris Kenyon has completed her part in "If I Marry Again," her first picture under her starring contract with First National, and immediately starting preparing for the featured role in George Fitzmaurice's "A Thief in Paradise," which is about to go into production.

FAVORITES HEARD ON VICTOR RECORDS FOR THIS WEEK

This week Galli-Curci pairs her soprano with Tito Schipa's tenor in two great love duets, the one tragic, the other cheerful.

Victor Records.
"Tornami a dir" (Once Again Let Me Hear Thee) from "Don Pasquale" is extremely simple and melodious, in which respect it is not much different from "E il sol dell'anima" (Love Is the Sun) from "Rigoletto."

Ruffo knows his "Faust" and this week he takes up Berlioz's and records the arduous measures of "Mephistopheles' Serenade" (While You at Sleeping), an opportunity to compare two great conceptions of an identical situation. His second record is the tender melody of the duet in Schubert's "Arioso"—"Do Not Weep, Child."

Two splendid seasonal Victor records are sung by the Sistine Chapel choir this week—the ever-beloved "Adeste Fideles" (Oh, Come All Ye Faithful) and a wonderful piece of counterpoint by Palestrina, "Exultate Deo" (Sing Unto the Lord).

Victor Concert orchestra records two of Edward MacDowell's orchestral pieces influenced by true American Indian music. "From an Indian Lodge" and "Love Song" are softly barbaric and full of quiet color.

Those who like to see the old songs re-dedicated and perpetuated will rejoice over Shannon quartet's recordings this week. The melancholy strains of "Annie Lisle" are presented in this organization's rich and sympathetic style, and hard on it follows "Bony Eloise," the "belle of Mohawk Valley."

Fresh from "Chocolate Dandies" Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake do some of their own stuff this week, "Manda" and "Dixie Morn."

Lewis James makes a solo of "All Alone," a waltz song decidedly in the popular manner. "The Heart of a Girl" is diagnosed successfully by Franklin Baur and Elliott Shaw on the other side.

Paul Whiteman leads off with "Mandy Make Up Your Mind," a fox-trot in which he utilizes an unusually large choir of wind instruments. "Nashville Nightingales," by Waring's Pennsylvanians, is on the other side.

"Come Back to Me" is a number

PAUL REMOS MIDGETS AT KEITH'S FORSYTH

Skill and agility are qualities greatly to be desired by vaudeville equilibrists. And in the act of Paul Remos and his wonder midgets, who come to Keith's Forsyth theater as the headlining attraction of the program for the first part of this week, there is a splendid demonstration of both.

The average equilibrist does hand and head balancing with someone's own size. But not so with Paul Remos. He has just come to this country to introduce a few new ideas in gymnastics and his assistants are three very small midgets.

But they are a trio of tiny men of super-muscular development. Remos balances one, two or three of them as the stunt requires. And in it all there is opportunity for rich humor.

Also on the excellent program is the act of Frank Fisher and Ethlynne Gilmore, who titled their skit, "The Bashful Romeo." Miss Gilmore portrays an exceedingly sophisticated modern girl, while Fisher makes his Romeo a book and the conflict of thought supplies an unusual opportunity for bright patter and song.

Their skit is a his little laugh, lubricated and kept at the speed by its clever exponents.

William H. Macart and Ethlynne Bradford present a comedy sketch, entitled "A Legitimate Hold-Up." Now George M. Cohan not only should but does know an actor when he sees one and no less an authority than George Cohan declared this team two of the best comedians he had ever seen.

Macart and Bradford have given vaudeville some of the finest sketches of bright bits of comedy, harmony singing and dancing. They are called "Two's Company" because much of the patter has to do with what constitutes a crowd. Regardless of numbers, this team is good company.

The Alice Isabelle Trio offers a musical act of unusual appeal. A Pathe new reel and a Felix Cat comedy complete the splendid bill.

'AN EXCITING NIGHT' LYRIC MUSICAL FARCE

Chorus, in New Wardrobe, Dances in Series of Musical Numbers.

Atlantans who like bright, breezy, well-dressed, tuneful, musical comedy have a fourth chance to see just that kind of show at the Lyric theater this week when the Loie Bridge Players Musical Comedy company put over "An Exciting Night," the fastest of the series of musical comedies they have presented since they succeeded the popular Lyric Players Dramatic company.

Edgar Barnett, producer and director, general of the company, appears in the cast for the first time, playing opposite Loie Bridge in a rich comedy number. Francis Weldon, technical director of the players, who was a big hit in the juvenile role last week, appears again in the first big musical splash of the play, a dancing number in which Jeanne LeBrun, beautiful prima donna, sings and the chorus girls of the chorus dance in butterfly garb.

The action transpires in the fountain room of a big New York hotel where members of three wealthy and aristocratic families are residing for a night. Intrigue, romance, adventure develop in thrilling sequence, with a succession of surprising situations that verge occasionally upon the risqué. The general trend of the comedy, however, is wholesome and enlivening.

Ageing Heart-Breaker. Mr. Barnett portrays General Stammer, the blustering husband of the dowager played by Loie Bridge. He has won more medals for victories on the battlefield than on the stage, but still feels his oats despite his age.

Miss LeBrun is Mrs. Geraldine Van Austin, the dashing, young-looking mother of Miss Geraldine, who is played by Mildred Millard. A mixed-up love affair develops between the mother and daughter and the father and son, played by Earl Young, as August Sommers, Sr., and Eddie Heffernan as August, Jr., while Tommy Wiggins contributes a rich measure of buffo comedy as "Patsy," the hotel attendant.

All the principals have part in the series of musical sensations which are interspersed into the action of the comedy. Mr. Weldon has created a new and splendid array of costumes for the chorus, some of them even prettier than the beautiful assortment which has partially draped the attractive dozen figures during the last week's performances.

"I'd Like to Know You Better," the song with the chorus and Miss LeBrun, sung by Mr. Weldon, is the first really spectacular chorus number.

You, in which Frank Carleton is supported by the chorines in mannish dress after a stunning "living fountain" spectacle arranged for the chorus, is another exceptional number.

Freda Sullivan, talented young sister of Nellie Sullivan and one of the most promising child dancers in Atlanta, has a small part in another gorgeous number.

Thrown upon at $1. Tickets for children's matinee are on sale by all presidents of P.T.A. clubs and at the Cable Piano company for both concerts, three days prior to date of performances.

FAMOUS ORCHESTRA TO BE HEARD HERE

The Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, one of the oldest and largest orchestras in the United States, directed by Fritz Reiner, will be in Atlanta on December 11 for what is generally regarded by music lovers as the most important artistic event of the season. Two concerts will be given here, the afternoon and evening series. The orchestra will present a program of special appeal for young people and for the evening concert a brilliant program has been arranged for grownups, it is said. Both events are under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Club, the first sponsored by the Junior Music Club, the evening concert being the second attraction of the civic concert series. All children will be admitted for 25 cents to the matinee and grown people for $1. Evening prices range from $1 to $2.50, with the entire balcony

Scores of youngsters and grown-ups are taking advantage of The Constitution's sensational free Christmas doll offer---the most outstanding holiday toy offer ever made by this paper. Why not you? "Little Miss Georgia"---conceded to be the most durable and expensive doll made by an American manufacturer---will make an excellent Yuletide playmate for you, or a magnificent present for "little sister."

She would retail at $12.50 OR MORE---and she rolls her eyes just like a real, live baby. ("Little Miss Georgia's" rolling eyes are an innovation in doll manufacture, and this wonderful feature is found only in a few of the most expensive dolls made.) In addition, "Little Miss Georgia" walks, talks, sleeps, winks, blinks and does everything else that the premier doll of all times would be expected to do. She's absolutely non-breakable; elaborately outfitted; has real hair, and her eyes are guaranteed not to drop out. "Little Miss Georgia" is 24 inches tall, and she is truly the triumph and perfection of the toy art.

Scores of youngsters and grown-ups have already won these magnificent dollies---and there's a "LITTLE MISS GEORGIA" WAITING FOR YOU.

All that's required of you in this sensational FREE doll offer is that you secure FIVE new subscriptions of 26 weeks each to The Daily and Sunday Constitution---a task that is easy, interesting and pleasant and that entails so rich a reward.

Any NEW subscription in Atlanta and its suburbs and in any town or city where The Constitution has an established carrier service will count. On rural routes and in small towns without carrier service, subscriptions will have to go by mail and must be paid in advance at the rate of $5 each, making a total of $25.00 for the five NEW 26 weeks' subscriptions. However, The Constitution is in no way responsible for any funds paid in advance to contestants until the money has reached the office of this publication.

By a NEW subscription is meant a subscription to a person who has not been a regular subscriber to The Daily and Sunday Constitution or to The Daily Constitution for the past 30 days, and does not take the place of some other subscription directly or indirectly now or in the future.

What others can do so easily, so can you. Don't delay longer; fill out the entry blank below and get busy NOW in order that you may be a winner in this great offer made only by

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All the books you read about in this column during the month of December may be bought through Atlanta book stores. If any book is not in stock the store will take pleasure in ordering it for you. Don't forget your book store in Atlanta, north or south side, is like a public library and is always waiting to help you select a book for your own, or for your little friend's library, and that Christmas is the best time to give and receive books!

To the grownups it seems a short 12 months since the newspapers and the book stores were displaying handsome and beautiful books for the little folks, and here we are again, for the editor-in-chief of The Constitution requests that there must be an unusual display of books for Christmas, especially for the boys and girls under 16 years of age. So, immediately the writer started out to interview the book stores and to write to the publishers, all of whom were not only enthusiastic over the idea but most willing to cooperate in every way—either by contributions or special displays, in fact they are willing to do anything to please the juniors. What a wonderful display the Atlanta book stores had Children's Book week! And they are going to have another for Christmas week, the fact that they could have a display every week until Christmas and not exhaust the supply of juvenile books, for in my store, the book stores have never seen so many beautiful books, hundreds of them, and all so artistically displayed.

boy readers. The following paragraph is clipped from a letter written to Mr. Tomlinson:

"When I see one of my boys (I have three) with one of your books in his hands, I just think to myself, 'Yes, he is being amused, but his character is being helped, too, and he doesn't know it.'"

"Sergeant Ted Cold, United States Marines" (a world war story); "Prisoners of War," "The Young Sharpshooters at Antietam" (civil war); "The Young Minute Men of 1812," "The Camp Fire of Mad Anthony," "The Colonial Colors," "The Rider of the Black Horse," "The Champion of the Regiment," "A Lieutenant Under Washington," "A Jersey Boy in the Revolution" are included in this series.

Other interesting and instructive books for boys are the following: "The Dragon Flies," by Donald Hamilton Haines, who writes the story of "The Four Musketeers," "Solferino," by Frederick Sleath, a romance of the most exciting and least known side of the late war; "A Lincoln Manuscript," by Homer Green, a stirring story of the civil war; "Two American Boys in the War Zone," "The Plattaburgers," etc.

Tales from Shakespeare. By Charles and Mary Lamb. Illustrated in full color and in black and white by Elizabeth Shippen Green Elliott. This is the most beautiful edition of this well-known classic ever published. The illustrations will delight all artists and Shakespearean lovers. There are four volumes of "The Golden Books," which is a beautifully illustrated series of children's classics, among them being "Andersen's Fairy Tales," "East of the Sun and West of the Moon," "Grimm's Fairy Tales," "Heidi," "Knappe," "King Arthur and His Knights," "Robin Hood," "Robinson Crusoe," "The Black Arrow," "Treasure Island," "Two Years Before the Mast," "Jim Davis." $1.50 a volume.

Other Christmas books that must not be overlooked are "The Blue Fairy Book" by Andrew Lang, with illustrations in black and color by Frank Godwin, $3.50; "The Red Fairy Book" by the same author, with illustrations by Gustaf Tenggren. These volumes contain an entertaining collection of fairy tales, among them being "Cinderella," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Beauty and the Beast," and other selections that have been read and retold for several generations.

Bible Stories for Children, by Margaret Livingston Hill, with illustrations of C. Arnold Slade, contains the old, old story beautifully told in a simple way for children from 6 to 10 years of age.

Poems for Little Men and Women. Edited by Norma Bright Carson, with illustrations in color, black and white, by William Francis Taylor. This handsome volume contains an anthology of children's poems selected from the writings of Eugene Field, R. L. Stevenson, James Whitcomb Riley, and other well-known writers of verse. What a pleasure it will be to the little folks to find that "Wynken, Blyken and Nod," "Little Orphan Annie" and other popular selections, are among the poems.

A Christmas Carol, by Charles Dickens, with illustrations in color, black and white by Arthur I. Keller. No Christmas without an attractive display of this volume would be Christmas. It never grows old, and the illustrations are wonderful.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS. "Pussy Willow's Naughty Kittens," by Lillian E. Young, is one of the most attractive and unique books for children that we have seen this season. It is not only a very interesting story, but the character of the illustrations and the original method of placing them adds to its attractiveness.

Young mothers in general will recognize that it is the work of a real mother, who, realizing the demands of children to be entertained, also being amused, but his character is being helped, too, and he doesn't know it.

"The Poppy Seed Cakes," by Margaret and Miska Petersham. This is a delightful story which begins "Once upon a time there was a little boy, and his name was Andrew," etc. The gayest colors have been used to make this story attractive, and it will be among the best sellers. Price $2.00. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

The Poxy Ring, a book of verse, which contains only short poems full of beautiful sentiment and written in simple language.

Silverfoot, by Maud Lindsay, who wrote the attractive story entitled "A Story Garden for Little Children," etc. The illustrations and picture jacket, in color, is the artistic work of Florence Lily Young. The book is illustrated by My Old Man, the author. The writer has contributed a charming story which is woven around a befo-the-war young planter, who, upon joining the army, leaves his beautiful horse, "Silverfoot," to three enthusiastic little girls. There are quite a number of characters which were all part of southern plantation, and as the atmosphere is all right, the little heroines are delightful. It will prove a delightful story of the long ago. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Boston. Price $1.00.)

CHATTERBOX—1924. Among the books that Santa Claus does not forget is Chatterbox—it has been a welcome visitor for forty-four years at Christmas time, and its charm and attractiveness always catches the eye and the fancy of the little folks whether in New York or Atlanta.

It is just the style of a book that you can select for the youngest in the family or send to the little fellow far away. It proves a welcome visitor in any home, and the little folks who are accustomed to receiving this annual Christmas visitor are looking forward with much pleasure to possessing a new Chatterbox.

This handsome volume of course improves each year in its selections of adventure stories, charming verse, and all kinds of little stories, jokes, guessing contests and there are even stories suitable for big boys and girls. There are 300 pages with 200 illustrations. Prices $1.65 and $2.25. (The Page Company, Boston.)

THE NOTION COUNTER. A Trilogy of Truths. By E. M. W.—Nobody in particular. "I've solved the problem of Christmas shopping. I'm not in the market for socks or beads. From shop to shop I'm done with my shopping. The 'Notion Counter' fills all my needs!"

"Between quaint covers of gay design. What sketches of present-day folks and things! My clouds of the blues take a merry lining. From the fine philosophy happiness brings."

"Not only a guaranteed 'gloom dispeller.' In leisure moments to read and digest. But the very best nineteen-twenty-two seller. For sisters, aunts, cousins—and all the rest!"

The reading of The Notion Counter, those "Notes About Nothing by Nobody" which the Atlantic Monthly Press published a few months ago, is rapidly becoming a national pastime. This is shown by the demand for the book, all parts of the country. The Pacific coast is now calling for it in large numbers, and a reader in Georgia has broken forth in the above verses.</

Guerrant-Merryweather Wedding Is Lovely Church Event

Simplicity and beauty marked the marriage of Mrs. Sarah Guerrant and Jack Merryweather, which was solemnized Saturday at 8 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. Sprule Lyons, pastor of the church, in the presence of a small gathering of relatives and close friends. Following the marriage service, Mrs. Susie Bowden Johnson sang "At Dawning," accompanied at the organ by Charles A. Sheldon. Mr. Sheldon played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and during the ceremony he played soft airs.

Dr. Fred Curtis and Sam Maier were ushers and during the seating of the guests, an appropriate musical program was given.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Susie McIntyre, as matron of honor, and Samuel Woodward acted as best man to Mr. Merryweather. Mrs. McIntyre wore an attractive gown of gray crepe lavishly headed in cut steel. Her hat was a wide-brim model of black velvet trimmed with a handsome silver ornament. She wore a corsage bouquet of Parma violets and valley lilies.

The lovely young bride wore a striking ensemble suit of russet brown charmer trimmed in brown fox fur. Her becoming hat was fashioned of gold lace and brown velvet trimmed in pastel shades of small flowers. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony, Mr. Merryweather and his bride entertained at an informal reception at their new home in Boulevard park.

The bride is one of Atlanta's most popular and best loved young women, possessing a gracious personality and charming manner, and numbers her friends by the score.

Mr. Merryweather is a prominent young business man of this city and holds a responsible position with P. L. Gomez & Co.

Miss Ball Weds Mr. Rossignol at Quiet Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. John Wylie Ball announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ethel Eugenia, to Joseph Rice-Rossignol, formerly of Savannah, Ga.

The wedding took place Saturday evening at 6 o'clock at 73 Myrtle street. Rev. Father Hassen, of Sacred Heart church, performed the ceremony.

Miss Mary Reynolds Weds Agnew Hilsman, Jr., in Albany

Albany, Ga., December 6.—A marriage which came as a surprise to their many friends, both in Albany and throughout the state, was that of Miss Mary Reynolds and Agnew Hilsman, Jr., in Monticello, Fla., Thanksgiving day. The couple motored down to the Florida city and were married at 4:30 o'clock in the Episcopal church of that city by Rev. Robert T. Johnson. Only two friends of the couple, Oaty Pace and Luther Daniels, were present at the ceremony.

Mrs. Hilsman is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reynolds of Putney, Ga., and came to Albany several years ago when her parents moved here from Franklin, N. C. Since that time she has been very popular in Albany society. Mr. Hilsman is the eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Hilsman. He has lived in Albany all of his life and is one of the most popular young men in the city. He is a graduate of Princeton university and a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Hilsman left Albany Friday night for a short honeymoon trip to Florida, after which they will be at home in Albany.

Miss Atkinson To Wed Mr. Page.

Of interest in both Georgia and South Carolina is the announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss J. C. Atkinson, daughter of Rev. J. C. Atkinson, pastor of the Methodist church of Barnwell, S. C., and Cordie Page, of Conway, S. C.

Miss Atkinson, until four years ago, lived in Georgia, her father being for several years a member of the north Georgia conference. She is a graduate of Wesleyan college, Macon, Ga.

Mr. Page is a member of an old South Carolina family. He received his B. S. and B. L. degrees at the University of South Carolina, and for several years has been a member of the Conway bar. He has recently been appointed assistant attorney general of the state and after the first of January will reside in Columbia, S. C.

Miss Fortson Weds Roy Bert Moore.

One of the prettiest weddings of the Thanksgiving season was that of Miss Pearl Elizabeth Fortson and Roy Bert Moore, which was solemnized November 27 at 2:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, near Elberton, Ga., in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

The attendants were: Miss Mattie Mary Fortson, Olin Moore, Miss Mary Cleveland and Ralph Moore, brother of the groom.

Preceding the bride came the flower girls, Hilda and Hazel Moore, twin sisters of the groom.

The bride and groom entered together.

Rev. J. C. West, the bride's pastor, performed the ceremony.

Following the ceremony the bride's mother, Mrs. Mildred Gaines Fortson, entertained at a reception.

Assisting Mrs. Fortson were Mrs.

Jesse W. Fortson, Mrs. J. A. Cleveland and Mrs. P. J. Warren, and Mrs. J. H. Fortson. Mrs. Milton Almond and Mrs. Clifford Bond kept the bride's book.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mildred Gaines Fortson and the late Charles H. Fortson. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Moore.

After a visit to the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moore will be at home with the bride's mother at Elberton, Georgia.

Miss Coursey Weds William Hodge.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Coursey, daughter of Mrs. Charles M. Coursey, and William I. Hodge, of Newnan, Ga., which took place Thursday, November 27, in West Point, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Hodge are at home to their friends at 40 Elmira place.

Miss Moore Weds Mr. Cooner in Macon.

Of wide social interest throughout the state is the marriage of Miss Sara Ann Moore to Francis Marion Cooner, of Macon, which was solemnized Saturday, November 29, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Moore, Rev. T. M. Sullivan, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating.

Miss Nancy Moore, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor. Little Miss Nell Elizabeth Tucker was ring-bearer.

The bride was lovely in a gown of blue velvet with touches of silver. Her hat was a chic, small silver and blue creation. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and valley-lilies.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooner left in their car for a wedding trip, before going to Macon, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Cooner is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Moore. Mr. Cooner holds the position of city clerk at the J. B. Riley Wholesale Drug company, of Macon, and is held in high esteem.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Heath and Miss Elizabeth Heath, of Stillmore, Ga.; Mrs. J. W. Neal, of Marshallville, Ga.; Mrs. Law and William Jones, of Fort Valley, Ga.; Miss Florie Cooner, Miss Ann Cooper, Misses Lois and Dorothy Dupree, Messrs. Jesse Cooner, Bill Powers, Alton Davis, Arnold Schilling, of Macon.

Miss Bradford Weds Emory Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bradford, of Kirkwood, announce the marriage of their daughter, Minnie Dorris, to Emory Martin on Saturday, November 29, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Emma Baggett Bradford, of Lithonia, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Martin will make their home in Atlanta for the present.

Bride-Elect Is Given Shower.

Mrs. F. F. Linn was hostess at a shower for Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Elizabeth Linn, a bride-elect of December. The color scheme of green and white was carried out throughout the house.

Mrs. Linn was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. John W. Linn, of New York. Twenty-five guests were invited.

Miss Robertson Weds Mr. Thompson.

A marriage of much interest was that of Miss Rubie Robertson of Conyers, Ga., to Elton Thompson of McDonough, Ga., the marriage taking place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Robertson on November 30.

After the ceremony the couple left for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at the home of Mrs. R. L. Thompson of McDonough, Ga.

Miss Mauldin Weds Albert M. Polk.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Carroll Mauldin, of Decatur, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruby Oliver, to Albert M. Polk, of Lincoln, Ga., on Wednesday evening, November 26, Rev. Marvin Franklin officiating.

Miscellaneous Shower Honors Miss Lester.

One of the most delightful affairs of the past week was a miscellaneous shower given by Misses Mary and Edna Cook at their home in Inman park in honor of Miss Blonde Lester, who is to be married on December 18 to DeWitt Whittier, of Macon, Ga.

Yellow and white were the colors used for decorations and carried out in the refreshments and score cards.

Punch was served from attractive bowls embedded in flowers and green by little Miss Elizabeth Anne Davis and Master Robert Klenbold, who also presented the gifts from yellow and white baskets.

Miss Lester was lovely in a gown of brown hand-embroidered begaline with hat to match. There were 55 invited guests.

Miss Colwell Gives Bridge-Supper.

Miss Irene Colwell entertained at a bridge-supper at her home in Inman Park on Monday evening, December 1.

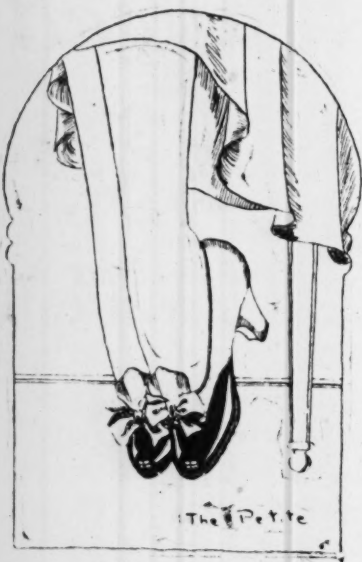

Miss Colwell was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. William Carlton Colwell, and her cousin, Mrs. Eustace Trotter.

The guests included: Miss Ruth Johnson, Miss Anne Bowdoin, Miss Elizabeth Mahby, Mrs. Eustace Trotter, Mrs. William Carlton Colwell, Walter L. Simmons, Jr., Neil Riley, Ernest P. Earnest and Seward Livermore.

Young Matrons' Class Holds Meeting.

The Young Matrons' class of Grant Park church held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Fred N. Waller, 62 Haggell street, Friday, November 28, with Mrs. A. Stone, W. B. Stanley and Mrs. J. W. Rountree, assistant hostesses. Forty-two were present.

Magnificent "Follies" Production Outstanding Event of February

Bringing gaiety and verve to the very climax of an unusually gay season and preceding the quiet period of Lent by a fortnight will be the eagerly looked-for production of the Junior League "Follies" under the personal direction of Ned Wayburn, internationally famous producer of the most successful attractions on Broadway. Enthusiasm increases each day with avid anticipation of this marvelous production that will have its premiere at the Atlanta theater on Monday evening, February 16. Nothing is being overlooked and no energy and thought spared to make this magnificent entertainment beyond the fervent expectations of everyone. Stunts, clever and colorful, vivid and original costumes, and the latest and most effect staging and lighting direct from Broadway, combined with pretty and attractive girls, who know the art of feminine appeal, trained under one—Ned Wayburn—whose knowledge of producing successful attractions is incomparable, insures a performance replete with skill and artistry that will thrill the most satiated theater-goer. Although rehearsals for the "Follies" will not begin until January 19, work and thought by the members of the league, and especially Mrs. Eugene Harrington, general chairman of the "Follies," began months ago. Among the successfully staged productions under Ned Wayburn are the "Honey Moon Cruise," "Greenwich Village Follies," "Ritz Revue," "Madam Pompadour," "Rose Marie," "Vanities," "Scandals" and many others.

Feast of Candles To Be Marked by The Chanukah Ball

Celebrating the approaching Feast of Candles or Chanukah, the Atlanta chapter of Hadassah Medical organization, together with the Abayath Achim Sisterhood, will give one of the gala occasions of the year, the Chanukah ball at Taft hall, Auditorium Armory, December 16. The Chanukah ball is always one of the chief events of the festival, and this year, from all present indications, the results will be far surpass all previous years. Under the leadership of the chairman, Mrs. Isidor Jacobs, plans have been laid for one of the largest and most pleasant dances ever given in Atlanta.

The following is a list of the chairmen of the various committees: Program, Mrs. Jack Weinberg and Mrs. L. J. Kaplan; tickets, Mrs. E. H. Lipman and Mrs. Abner Hirsch; refreshments, Mrs. I. Klein and Mrs. public is cordially invited.

E. Cuba; merchandise, Mrs. J. Fauman and Mrs. B. Bender. Vick Meyers Melody orchestra will furnish music for the occasion.

Kle Club To Have Social Meetings.

The December social meeting of the Kle club will be held Wednesday morning, December 10, at 11 o'clock, and instead of being at the Elks' home, as is customary, the meeting will be at 189 East Seventeenth street, the home of Mrs. Leroy Hatfield, who will be hostess to the club members.

There will be an interesting program and all members are invited. Those who expect to remain for lunch will please telephone Mrs. Hatfield at Hemlock 1394-W.

The Kle club will sponsor a novel entertainment at the Elks' club Saturday, December 13, at 8 p. m. This program will be both interesting and instructive and will consist of a lecture on the Canadian Rockies by Professor L. O. Armstrong, noted lecturer, accompanied by motion picture illustrations, several delightful musical numbers and a sleight of hand performance by W. R. Williston, magician.

Admission will be free and a basket will be passed for free-will offerings for the Christmas charity fund. The public is cordially invited.

Atlanta Writers' Club To Have December Dinner

The December dinner of the Atlanta Writers' club will be held in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club on Thursday evening, December 11, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. In addition to a short club program and some routine business affairs, the club has secured Frederick Warde, the eminent American actor to deliver as the principal feature of the dinner a lecture on "Shakespeare and His Plays." Mr. Warde has achieved wonderful success on the lecture platform and the one selected for his engagement here carries numerous character delineations from Shakespeare's plays such as "Hamlet," "Richard III," "Romeo," "Falstaff," and others. As the capacity of the dining room undoubtedly will be taxed to the utmost, the membership of the club is requested to make reservations promptly at $2 per plate, which includes the dinner and the lecture. Any member of the club may bring such non-members as he desires at the price stated. The Writers' club has prepared an ambitious and brilliant program for remainder of the winter, including three meetings to be devoted to readings of original manuscripts and one particularly notable event not yet announced, but of which the membership will be advised in due course. The Writers' club has grown to a membership of more than 200 and is in fine condition.

Bazar and Lunch To Be Served Tuesday.

The Women's Union of Central Congregational church will have a sale of articles suitable for Christmas gifts or useful things for household or personal use, and cakes and candy. They will also serve luncheon consisting of scalloped oysters, French fried potatoes, cranberry jelly, hot rolls, doughnuts and coffee, price 50 cents, in the assembly hall of the church, downstairs, on Tuesday, December 9, opening at 10 o'clock. All are invited to come.

Mrs. Candler Elected President Of American Legion Auxiliary

At the meeting of the American Legion auxiliary, Argonne unit No. 1, held in the Chamber of Commerce building Tuesday afternoon, December 2, the following officers were elected for the year 1925: Mrs. A. Warren Candler, president; Mrs. W. C. Elrod, first vice president; Mrs. Frank B. Saunders, second vice president; Mrs. Louis W. Brogdon, recording secretary; Mrs. Lawrence E. Owen, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ernest P. Brown, treasurer; Mrs. John W. Quillian, historian; Mrs. Lane Mitchell, chaplain; Mrs. Tyler M. Bullock, sergeant-at-arms. Executive committee includes: Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. W. H. San-der, Mrs. George W. Corley. Mrs. George W. Corley is the retired president, who has done splendid work, serving as president of the auxiliary just after the consolidation of the Henry Thomas Ross unit No. 78 and Atlanta unit No. 1; of the interest she has shown, having attended all state and national conventions and department committee meetings during her term of office, she unstintingly gave her time and service to all auxiliary activities here in the city. Section I, Article 9 of the by-laws, dealing with the time and place of meetings of the unit, was amended to read: "That the regular monthly meetings of the unit would be held at the same time and place as the regular monthly meetings of Argonne Post No. 1." It would be well to add here that the next meeting of the post will be a very impressive one, at which new members will be received according to the legion ritual. This meeting will be opened to the general public and will be held in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club Friday night, December 12, at 7:45 o'clock. It is hoped that all ladies of the auxiliary will attend.

Oglethorpe Team To Be Complimented At Dinner Party

One of the interesting events of the week will be the dinner given to the Oglethorpe football team, which has won the championship of the S. I. A. A., at the Capital City club, Tuesday evening, December 9, at 7 o'clock.

The hosts and hostesses of the occasion will be a group of friends of the university, whose names will be announced later.

A silver loving cup will be presented to the team by G. F. Willis, a member of the board of founders.

Musical will be furnished by the Oglethorpe orchestra.

"ORIGINAL 13"

WILL FEATURE LARGE BAZAR

The junior department of the Atlanta Woman's club will be greatly featured at the splendid bazar which will be held in the banquet hall of the club, beginning Monday at noon and lasting through Wednesday of next week.

The lovely young ladies who constitute the "Original 13" will be in colonial costume, selling all kinds of delicious candies. The tiny "Bluebirds" the youngest group in the club, will have on their dainty chignons, dispensing popcorn balls. This attractive little group has arranged a beautiful dollhouse, which will be on display with all sorts of dollies, to attract the eyes of little folks.

The Camp Fire Girls and Girl Scouts will also handle home-made candies and other fancy and tempting bonbons. The "Original 13" will serve Monday at the candy booth, also assisting the committee in the hospitality of the occasion. The little "Bluebirds" and Camp Fire Girls will be on hand Tuesday and the Girl Scouts will have charge of all knickknacks on Wednesday.

Flower Lovers' Division.

The flower lovers' division announces quantities of seed, plants, bulbs and flowers on hand for the bazar. Mrs. Crenshaw, chairman of the committee, is enthusiastic over the splendid cooperation received from the florists, not only of Atlanta but from Louisville and other cities further north. Several of the home firms have donated much shrubbery, etc., to the sale of this committee and anyone desiring to beautify her home by planting everything beautiful and by filling the Christmas vases with gorgeous flowers of this season may get much instruction in how to care for these flowers, etc., after they are planted.

Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, general chairman of the bazar, has had assisting her during the last week, a number of members of the club, who have made the most attractive lots of aprons of every conceivable design and style. These women met several days at the clubhouse, where they spent the day and sewing together, enjoyed the parties and accomplished a great amount of beautiful sewing for the bazar.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, as co-chairman of the bazar, has assisted much in gathering the articles from the several hundred active members of the club, while Mrs. Alonzo Richardson was assigned to assembling those from the members who are not actively engaged in work with any of the departments of the club.

Mrs. Sharp To Be Present.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, will be present at the club each day during the bazar and do everything in her power to make it a brilliant occasion for the Woman's club. Every department head and division leader is expected to be present or arrange to have someone to look after her booth. Chairmen of committees of the club will also have booths and have someone in charge each day. Hundreds of articles are being sent in for sale and this promises to be one of the biggest remunerative ventures the club has ever made.

Mrs. C. K. Ayer is chairman of a children's patinee which will be staged on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons from 2 to 4 o'clock at the bazar, when attractive features will be presented, including "Piccinny Twins," "Aunt Jemima," "Uncle Remus" impersonations, together with comic dancing, music and banjo playing.

The public is cordially invited to attend the bazar and club members are expected to invite their friends who are not members of the club.

The entire club plant will be open to visitors during the three days of the bazar, beginning at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Klebold Gives Tea to Club Group.

Mrs. J. R. Klebold was hostess to the members of the junior banquet hall insurance group of the Atlanta Woman's club Friday afternoon at a bridge-tee at the club.

The banquet hall, where the guests assembled, was beautifully decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and early winter flowers. The prizes were unique French novelties.

Members of the group present were Miss Grace Freeman, Mrs. U. T. Koch, Mrs. Paul Turner, Mrs. Oscar Lindholm, Mrs. C. W. Stoddard, Mrs. Capers Andrews, Mrs. D. E. Tyler, Mrs. T. S. MacCauley, Mrs. W. K. Wyant and Mrs. Klebold. The next regular meeting of the group will be held Friday, January 9, at the club.

Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, New York's first woman secretary of state, will have charge of the taking of the census in that state in 1925.

Mammoth Bazar To Feature Week's Calendar at Club

Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of the Home Economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club, has appointed Mrs. H. E. Jessup chairman for the mammoth bazar which will be held during the week at the clubhouse. Mrs. C. R. Pyburn is the co-chairman, and each and every member of the department will take an active part in making this one of the big things which will be put over during the year. Four large tables will be loaded down with all sorts of attractive articles, including cake, candy, dolls, cook-books and miscellaneous articles.

Cake and Candy Booth.

Mrs. Harold Roberts will preside over the cake and candy booth, which will be gaily decorated in red and green, symbolical of the Christmas season. The American Bakeries company, one of the cook-book advertisers, has most generously offered to take charge of the decorations, and the result will be one of the most attractive features of the entire bazar. Each day at this table, a very interesting contest will be held, and the lucky winner will be the happy recipient of a wonderful cake.

Mrs. Ernest Covinton, the chairman of the doll table, is planning to have all sorts of dolls, walking dolls, talking dolls, hye-dolls and every other style of doll that St. Nicholas can think of to distribute among the little girls in the city.

Another interesting table will be the cook-book table, where Mrs. George Roberts will try to persuade the visitors that no kitchen can possibly be complete without a copy of the Atlanta Woman's Club cook-book.

Miscellaneous Table.

Then, there will be the miscellaneous table, which will be in charge of Mrs. W. W. Alexander, and here all sorts of wonderful things for the home will be on display. Many articles which have been made by the vocational classes will grace this table, and too much cannot be said in regard to these beautiful things.

Among those assisting Mrs. Jessup and Mrs. Pyburn will be the executive board of the department which includes Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, the chairman; Mrs. W. H. Griffin, secretary; Mrs. Ben Padgett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. M. Manry, treasurer; Mrs. T. G. Delph, vocational classes; Mrs. George Roberts, cook-book; and Mrs. George Ripley, press. Others assisting will be Mrs. H. A. Manning, Mrs. M. M. Albright, Mrs. W. P. Timmie, Mrs. M. L. Hollowell, Mrs. J. H. Beckham, Mrs. Ernest Brown, Mrs. Ada Wood, Mrs. William Carter, Mrs. C. E. Evans, Mrs. W. D. Alexander, Mrs. W. H. Snav, Mrs. S. M. Whitner, and Miss Ethel Tutwiler.

Announcement is made by club leaders that the first gift to the campaign has already been made in the form of a car of brick shipped at once to the school and given by the Georgia-Carolina Brick company, of which Howard Stafford is president. Officials have under advisement the giving of a second car load, according to Mrs. Fitzpatrick, well-known club leader, and past president of the Georgia federation.

Activities of Decatur Woman's Club.

The art department of the Decatur Woman's club is making much progress in the study of polychrome work. The class met this week at the home of the chairman and director, Mrs. J. E. Hosmer, at 375 Scammon street, and engaged in making household accessories in polychrome such as candlesticks and book ends. The class will meet early next week to continue the study.

The hospital committee of the Decatur Woman's club, Mrs. W. H. Nelm, chairman, has done much commendable work during the past month and has worked out a constructive plan for the future.

Mrs. Nelm reports that her committee, consisting of Mrs. W. F. Kirby, Mrs. C. E. Edwards, Mrs. R. S. Sloan and Mrs. Boyd Sutton, has been sewing for the Scottish Rite hospital, making sleeping garments for the patients, nurse's aprons and other articles which the hospital has requested them to make. It is their purpose to extend this aid to the county clinic, which has given such valuable aid to the county, and other health units who request their help.

Augusta Clubwomen To Raise $2,000 For Tallulah School

Augusta, Ga., December 6.—Augusta clubwomen have enthusiastically endorsed a city-wide campaign in the interests of the building fund for Tallulah Falls school, owned and directed by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Decision to undertake a campaign to obtain $2,000 from the friends of education was reached at a community dinner held this week at the Partridge inn, at which Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, vice president of the school's board of trustees, was a speaker. The Augusta federation of clubs and the Augusta Woman's club will participate actively in the campaign, which is to begin formally on January 12.

Announcement is made by club leaders that the first gift to the campaign has already been made in the form of a car of brick shipped at once to the school and given by the Georgia-Carolina Brick company, of which Howard Stafford is president.

Officials have under advisement the giving of a second car load, according to Mrs. Fitzpatrick, well-known club leader, and past president of the Georgia federation.

Junior Music Club Holds Meetings.

The Druid Hills Junior Music club held its meeting Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the studio of Miss Oleo Robinson, on Clifton road. Those taking part in the program were: Dennis Daniel, Maude Evans, Clara Wilson, Dorothy Poits, Ruby Varbrough and Louis Kroboth, with the violin.

The club will give a program at the House of the Friendless this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Dr. Parkes Cadman To Lecture At Atlanta Woman's Club

Dr. Parkes Cadman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was elected president of the Federal Council of Protestant Churches of America, at a recent meeting of this body held in Atlanta, will be a principal speaker at the Atlanta Woman's club, Monday afternoon at the regular meeting. Dr. Cadman will address the members and their friends at 7 o'clock, just prior to leaving the city an hour later. It is with much appreciation that the Woman's club has as its guest and speaker upon this occasion, a man of such magnanimity and one who has the honor of representing 45,000,000 people of the Protestant denominations.

Other Distinguished Guests.

Other very distinguished guests who will be present Monday afternoon, will be Honorable William Jennings Bryan, who will bring to the club a significant message. Dr. James H. Shotwell, of Columbia university, accompanied by Dr. Sidney L. Galick, international secretary of the commission on justice and friendship, who is a world-famous figure, will be other noted people, who will participate in the program of the afternoon.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, announces an hour of the meeting to be devoted to the observance of the anniversary of our beloved poet, Joel Chandler Harris, whom the entire world knows as "Uncle Remus." Mrs. E. L. Connally, first vice president of the Uncle Remus Memorial association, will preside over this program, and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, life president of the organization, and a past president of the Woman's club, will be present as honor guests of the club.

Dr. Wightman F. Melton, writer and scholar, will talk on the life of Joel Chandler Harris and the influence his life had upon the community. The relatives of the beloved poet have been invited to attend, also as honor guests of the occasion.

The meeting will be open to club members and each may bring a guest at this time, as it marks the an-

Chairman of Music.

Mrs. W. D. Chiers, chairman of music for the club, has arranged a most delightful program of music, including reading and dancing, which will follow the "Uncle Remus" hour of observance. Miss Frances Matthews will give a reading from the pen of Joel Chandler Harris. An attractive dance called "Going South" will be a feature of the program by Misses Sarah Sharp and Robert Harth, pupils of Mrs. William Claer Spiker, and a group of songs will be rendered by Miss Virginia Futre, who appeared as the leading lady in "Pandora."

Those attending the meeting will have the pleasure of viewing the mammoth bazar which will be staged by the Atlanta Woman's club, beginning Monday at noon. Mrs. Arthur Hazard, treasurer of the club, will be present to receive membership dues from those who are in arrears.

Mrs. John D. Evans, chairman of Americanization, has invited the Neighborhood classes, sponsored by this division, as special guests at this meeting.

Girl Scout Troop Donates Fund Toward Camp Civitania

Every camp lover in Atlanta from the newest little tenderfoot to the most dignified camp councillor is offering his bit for the equipment and building at Camp Civitania, the beautiful woodland site contributed by the Atlanta Civitan club to 700 Atlanta Girl Scouts. Dorothy Fugatt, of Troop 11, has designed a huge poster showing a Girl Scout driving a turkey laden with gifts. This poster bears the caption, "Thinking of Others." An Thanksgiving day Dorothy presented this poster at Scout headquarters with a check for $40 at 8 o'clock, in the E. A. Minor lodge room. This money was collected in Troop 11. One the same day Mrs. Albert Thornton, Sr., the local founder of the Atlanta Girl Scouts, presented a check for $1,000. The Junior league has contributed $150.

Plans have been accepted for the main building and construction will start within a short time. One sample hut will be built of the type that will be used for housing. Contributions from scout troops, individuals and organizations are expected with which to build enough huts to enable the camp to operate during the coming summer. Sallie Ruth Stanton, of Atlanta, who is a member of the Girl Scout troop at the Scottish Rite hospital, has been given honorable mention in a nation-wide contest put on by The American Girl magazine. The contest offered prizes for the best letter on "What I Wish in My Magazine."

The letter written by Scout Stanton was considered so good that it has been reprinted in pamphlet form by The American Girl Publishing company and distributed over the United States. The letter is as follows:

"Scottish Rite Hospital, Decatur, Ga.

"Dear Editor: I would like to have the following things in The American Girl during the coming year. Our troop consists of crippled girls at the Scottish Rite hospital and we get much pleasure from reading The American Girl. We girls are together day in and day out and we often discuss the magazine and its contents.

"For the reason that most of us are confined to the bed, we like first to read the adventure stories of the Girl Scouts. Second, we like the various suggestions about handicrafts as they give us new ideas by which it is always fun to work out the to pass the time away in bed. Third, puzzles and read the poetry. Fourth, the Girl Scout pictures inspire us and give us new ambition to do great things like other Girl Scouts when we get well. Fifth, we always like to hear Girl Scout news. It is of interest to us to find out what our scout friends are doing.

"Sallie Ruth Stanton, Age 17, Troop 28."

Woodberry Club To Give Plays At Egleston Hall

A program of one-act plays will be presented by the Woodberry Dramatic club on Wednesday evening of this week at Egleston Hall. Constance Mackay's little dramatic classic, "The Bean of Bath," will be given with Lorraine Osburn as Beau Nash, May Clarke as his servant, and Dorothy Mahoney as the "Lady of the Portrait." It will be costumed and staged in the 18th century period. Yeats' "Land of Heart's Desire" will have in the cast Claudia Shingler, Eleanor Ross, Eleanor McMannon, Virginia Boyer, Margaret Hardee and Betty Stribling. The dancing of Miss Stribling will be a beautiful feature of the play. The staging will be that of the primitive cottage life of the period. Several Irish songs will be sung by Miss Frances Woodberry. Mrs. Marguerite Harvey is director of the program as head of the department of expression at Woodberry Hall.

Miss Mona Morgan, of the cast of "Seventh Heaven" and a representative of the Shakespearean association, read the "Merchant of Venice" to the girls of Woodberry Hall Thursday morning and she was received with great appreciation.

After the chapel service on Friday a program of missions was given by Misses Virginia Boyer and Martin Bullard.

The Delta Pi Delta sorority was entertained in the parlors of Woodberry Hall on Friday afternoon, the hostesses being Miss Margaret Hardee, a resident student of the school. A large number enjoyed her hospitality.

The first of a series of entertainments to be given by the Woodberry freshmen of the Pi Epsilon sorority of the school was a bridge party at the home of the hostess, Miss Sarah Hoshell, on Linwood avenue on Friday afternoon. There were four tables and a delightful social hour followed. The decorations were autumn leaves and flowers. Those present were Misses Sarah Hoshell, Caroline Ashton, Auverne Harper, Kate Rogers, Betty Stribling, Marion Morgan, Jane Clarke, Martha Bullard, Marion Carlock, Dorothy Anderson, Sara Anderson, Mabel Elder, Lillian Williams, Allie Stephens, Catherine Clippinger and Ellen Bricker.

The popular Black Cat club of Woodberry Hall was entertained on Wednesday by Miss Willie May Simpson at her home on Sydney street. Large yellow and white chrysanthemums were arranged artistically throughout the home. On the daintily appointed table was a silver bowl of flowers surrounded by tapers. Miss Simpson was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. John A. Simpson, and her sister, Mrs. B. F. McDaniel. The guests were Misses Electra Mae Anderson, Katherine Huff, Peggy Greenwood, Sallie Parker, Virginia Patterson, Claudia Shingler, Ethel Smith, Lillian Williams and Willie May Simpson.

Many Woodberry girls attended the wedding of Miss Esther Cherry to Travis Brauman on Thursday evening. Miss Frances Woodberry sang the bridal songs. The Woodberry basketball team will shortly challenge a number of teams for games. At the recent election under the direction of Miss Theodora Newton, their athletic instructor, Miss Caroline Ashton, was elected captain and Miss Virginia Patterson, manager. The Woodberrian, the school annual, is meeting with great success in its preparation. It will appear shortly before commencement.

Cercle Francais Holds Meeting at Brenau College

The Cercle Francais at its last two meetings enjoyed most interesting programs. John S. Hendricks, director of the voice department, sang, by request, his own composition, a pathetic incident attending the burial of the unknown soldier in Washington. Continued and enthusiastic applause, followed, to which Mr. Hendricks graciously responded by singing Messner's "Elgie." Miss Henrietta Howard read Victor Hugo's hymn, "Gloria a Notre France Eternelle." A French translation of McCrae's "In Flanders Fields" was read by Miss Eva Buckner, with intelligent appreciation and beautiful French diction. The meeting closed with the spirited singing of the American, English and French national anthems by the entire circle.

The second meeting of the circle celebrated the fourth centenary of the poet, Pierre de Ronsard. An excellent paper on the life and works of Ronsard was read by Miss Elizabeth Royer, of the French senior class. Selections from the poet's works were read by Misses Beverly Wood, Dorothy Silverstein, Caroline Hazlehurst and Eva Buckner—all well done, especially the charming ode to Cassandre, by Miss Buckner. On the stage, wreathed in palms, was a life-size crayon portrait of Ronsard, made and presented to the circle by the talented Miss Caroline Hazlehurst, pupil of Mr. Weyand.

The first number of the lyric course for the season of 1924-25 was given on Friday evening by Miss Ada Ward as the lecturer of the evening. Her subject for this lecture was "You Americans," and indeed she was proclaimed as bringing one of the most delightfully chosen messages ever listened to by a Gainesville audience.

The vespers service of the Young Women's Christian association, held on Sunday evening at the First Methodist church under the leadership of Miss Mary Jim Oliver, a member of the executive cabinet of the Y. W. C. A. The chorus, made up of students from the college, led in the singing of a number of well known hymns. Miss Edith Hampton gave an excellent talk on "The Hour of Prayer." Miss Mildred Crawford was the next speaker on the program. Miss Dorothy McDonald gave a violin solo, and Miss Laura Baker sang beautifully a well known sacred solo. At the close of the service they were dismissed by Mr. W. B. King, pastor of the church.

The endowment fund, under the direction of Miss Marjorie McElroy, sponsored a most unique program on Saturday evening in the form of a "Backward Dance."

giving holidays. While here they were home guests at several social affairs, also attending the Tech-Aurum football game, and the military hop at Fort McPherson Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Huie, of New York, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Huie for the past week.

Miss Mary Presswood has been ill for several days at her home in Fulton avenue.

Miss Louise Farley Honored at Tea.

Mrs. J. T. Floyd entertained Miss Louise Farley, of Birmingham, Ala., the guest of Mrs. C. B. Collins, at a tea, at the Atlanta Woman's club Friday afternoon.

Her guests were Miss Louise Farley, Mrs. C. B. Collins, Mrs. A. T. Flowers, Mrs. Clinton Reed, Mrs. Emmet Holloway, Mrs. John Elder, Mrs. Fred Forrow, Mrs. Elizabeth and Mrs. R. A. Williams, Mrs. Fred Sherman, Mrs. T. E. McCutchen, Miss Louise McCutchen, Miss Evelyn Floyd.

Camp Fire Girls Are Dressing Dolls.

Campfire Girls are dressing dolls to be given at Christmas to the little girls in Atlanta who otherwise would not get a doll.

The dolls will be on display in the window of the Cable Piano company. They will be turned over to the West End house to be distributed.

Miss Emily Dexter, teacher of psychology at A. G. Scott college, opened the Campfire training course there November 24 with a lecture. The subject was the "Teen Age Girl."

Following the lecture by Miss Dexter, Miss Mollie Whitehead, Smith-Hughes expert, conducted a handiwork class. Every member of the class made a count book.

Miss Margaret Thomasma, national associate field secretary, lectured on the "Scope and Aims of Campfire Girls," on November 28. She gave a brief historical sketch of Campfire and explained that as fire is symbol of home and camp of the outdoors so the name Campfire Girls was chosen. She told just what Campfire is, and read the seven laws, explaining each. Miss Thomasma told how the Campfire progress is based on educational principles and pointed out the many things accomplished by the program, such as: new interest in the home and health ideals. She brought out the adaptability of the program, successfully used in various ways.

December 1, Miss Thomasma lectured on "Symbolism," and on the 10th on "The Honor System." A practical demonstration in "book-binding" followed.

Bride of December

Mr. Lester Travis Brannon, formerly Miss Esta Louise Cherry, whose marriage was a beautiful event of last Thursday evening, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pinkney Cherry, on Poplar circle.

College Park Social News.

The officers of the College Park chapter of the U. D. C. entertained at a tea at the home of Mrs. Oscar Palmer Tuesday afternoon.

The house was decorated with hickories, chrysanthemums and other fall flowers. Miss Santa Mueller rendered several delightful violin selections accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Kurt Mueller, at the piano. Miss Mary Joe Merritt gave several delightful readings, after which sandwiches and tea were served. About 35 guests were present.

Mrs. Walter Gunson entertained the members of the Wednesday Morning Bridge club this week.

Mrs. L. C. Gunson won the prize for top score, which was a pretty hand-painted bud vase. Mrs. Cathy won the prize for top score, which was also a bud vase. Mrs. Caldwell cut the consultation which was a fancy box. A delicious salad course was served. Those present were Mrs. Cathy, of Atlanta; Mrs. Upshaw, of Atlanta; Mrs. Horace Chase, of Atlanta; Mrs. Freeman Doss, Mrs. J. C. Caldwell, Mrs. J. M. Dobbis, Mrs. Pudney, Mrs. C. D. ## Peachtree Woman's Club Meeting.

The friends and members of the North Peachtree Road Woman's club are urged to attend the regular meeting of the club at 5 o'clock, Tuesday, December 9, in the Mason Temple building, Buckhead. Dr. Frank Loveridge will speak the subject of his interesting talk to be "The Quest for Happiness."

About three hundred and fifty books were donated to the library maintained by the club, at the book shower held recently. This makes a total of approximately eleven hundred books on the shelves—and at the disposal of the public. The book is urged to avail themselves of the use of these books, which are of the highest quality, as each book is carefully bound and placed in the library. The library is open every Saturday afternoon—and anyone who so desires may visit the library at that time.

Marietta Society Circles Interested In December Weddings and Parties

The marriage of Miss Louise Inman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Inman, and Eugene McNeel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan McNeel, Sr., of Marietta, will be a brilliant event of Wednesday, December 10, and will take place at the First Presbyterian church on Peachtree street. The ceremony will be performed at 8:30 o'clock by Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the church.

A marriage of interest to many friends was that of Miss Irene Mayes, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Luther Mayes, to T. O. Andrews, of Jacksonville, Fla., which occurred at 5 o'clock on Thanksgiving day at the home of Dr. J. H. Patton on Church street, with Dr. Patton performing the ceremony. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Esmer Mayes entertained at a lovely six-o'clock dinner at their home on Whitlock avenue. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Andrews left for Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Florence Wolfe, whose approaching marriage to Robert McNeil, of cordial interest, was the honoree at a lovely party given on Wednesday afternoon by Miss Elizabeth Northcutt and Mrs. George Hardeman at the home of Miss Northcutt on Church street.

Mrs. Morgan McNeel, Sr., Charles De Four, Mrs. Frank McNeel, Mrs. Morgan McNeel, Jr., and Miss Margaret McNeel attended a lovely luncheon given on Monday by Mrs. William H. Kiser at "Knollwood," her home in Atlanta, in honor of Miss Louise Inman.

A pleasant social affair of the week was the bridge party given on Thursday afternoon by Mrs. P. A. McIntyre at her home on Hillside avenue.

A most delightful event of the week was the bird supper given on Tuesday evening by William DuFree at his home on Whitlock avenue. After dinner the guests were entertained at bridge.

Miss Frances Campbell has returned to Marietta college, after spending the week-end with Mrs. Doyle Budge.

College Notes From Agnes Scott.

Deatur, Ga., December 6.—On Tuesday afternoon, November 25, the seniors of Agnes Scott college entertained their sophomore sisters at a tea in the Proplean hall. Miss Byrte Daniel furnished music throughout the evening. Miss Mary Ben Wright delighted the girls with a reading in negro dialect. The outstanding feature of the occasion was the presentation of the senior rings to the sophomores. The rings were suspended by white ribbons from a white hoop hung in the center of the room. The names of the sophomores were called by Miss Martha Lin Mankie, the president of the senior class. Miss Ruth Drane sang, "In the Garden of Tomorrow." Later, punch and sandwiches were served and the girls enjoyed dancing.

On Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the chapel, Dr. Valeria H. Parker of the United States department of protective measures, lectured to the college students and faculty, on "What the Policewoman has Accomplished." She outlined the steps by which the policewoman has risen to prominence and told something of the work she is doing in protecting the youth of the country. The lecture was both interesting and instructive, especially to the classes of Sociology.

On Friday, November 28, the alumnae played the varsity team hockey on the athletic field. As a great many alumnae were at Agnes Scott for Thanksgiving, they were able to have a good team. The students scored two goals in the first quarter, one shot by Miss Josephine Walker and the other by Miss Dorothy Owen. Excitement reached its height when Miss Daisy Frances Smith shot two goals in the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Campbell.

Miss Sarah Frances Northcutt, who is a student at the State Normal school in Athens, spent the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Northcutt.

Mrs. W. B. Tate entertained a number of the school set at an informal dinner on last Friday evening at her home on Cherokee avenue, in compliment to her son, William, and his classmate, Joe Farrington, of Selma, Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. Madison Fowler entertained a number of friends in a most delightful manner on Monday evening at a bird supper at their home on Forest avenue.

Mrs. Horace Field, Mrs. Lizzie W. Northcutt, Mrs. Welbourn Venable and Miss Mabel Corelyon were hostesses at the Marietta Golf club tea on last Saturday.

A most enjoyable event of last week was the prom party given on last Friday evening by Mrs. S. C. McIntyre at her home on Kennesaw avenue. Judge and Mrs. S. H. Stoley and Miss Sadie Sibley are spending the week in Columbus, Ga., with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Chappell.

Miss Margaret McNeil is attending a series of lovely affairs in Atlanta given, in compliment to Miss Louise Inman, bride-elect of Deatur, Ga.

Misses Glenn Hancock and Sarah Patton attended the College-Haverty wedding in Atlanta on Wednesday evening and are spending the week-end with Mrs. Walter Keenan.

Miss Emma McRamb has returned home after a visit of several weeks to relatives in south Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Malone will leave next week to spend the winter in Cocoa, Miami and Sarasota, Fla.

Miss Lucile Allen has returned to Dixie Hall after spending a week with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. O. Lidge.

Miss Annie Mae Dixon, of West Point, Ga., spent Thanksgiving and the week-end with Mrs. Doyle Budge.

I Paid $5.00

To obtain powders like these.
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I long paid $5.00 per box for my face powder. So do most beauties in the movies and on the stage. We have them made to order, by the greatest of experts, and no price is too high to pay.

I have for 40 years consulted the leading powder experts. I have obtained their best, regardless of the cost. So many of my friends have for decades ordered their powders through me.

When I offered my beauty helps to women, they overwhelmed me with requests for powder. They wanted to use what I used. But I could not offer them this powder at the price I paid.

So I went to the makers. I told them I could sell a million boxes at ordinary prices. They finally agreed to supply it—my identical powders—under my name.

Now you can obtain it. Every druggist and toilet counter has it. It comes in two types. One is heavy, clinging, cold cream powder. That is the type I like best. But the other is light and fluffy. The heavy powder in square box costs $1.00, the light in round box 50c.

You will find these supreme creations. No powders you have used can compare. Any face powder branded Edna Wallace Hopper is an exquisite product.

Hearing Music in New York

Musicales Intimes

BY MARGUERITE BARTHOLOMEW.

One might safely assert, that should some enterprising impresario announce a musical series, "Dejeuner" or a group of "Midnight Soirees" in New York, that a voracious musical public would seize upon the novel idea with avidity. As it is, a very popular form of musicales intimes are the various "Artistic Mornings" featured in the ball-rooms of several of the great hotels. The originator of the idea was Albert Morris Bagby, whose brilliant musical mornings at the Waldorf-Astoria have been for years occasions of most select and exclusive gatherings.

Another popular series entering this year upon its eleventh season are the Biltmore Friday morning Musicales under the management of R. E. Johnson.

And Andreus de Segura, who retired from a successful operatic career three years ago and has since been actively engaged as voice teacher and operatic coach, announced in the fall a new series to be given by him on alternate Thursday mornings at the Hotel Plaza on Fifth avenue. Not only musical celebrities but famous dramatic stars are scheduled to appear, the number including Ethel and John Barrymore, Laurette Taylor and Irene Bordani.

The second Friday morning musicale at the Biltmore was a particularly brilliant affair. A capacity audience of nearly one thousand filled the spacious green and gold ballroom on the twentieth floor. A gallery of boxes extends along each side of the hall and these are held by subscribers as well as the majority of the reserved seats on the main floor.

Males Also Present. The "fall set" is most numerous, represented on these occasions, although one is amazed to find a generous quota of males in evidence, by no means to be classed as retired financiers in their dotage. A lavish display of sumptuous fur wraps and the modish two-piece tailleur, so popular this season, are engrossing fashion features. The program as usual announced two singers and an instrumentalist and proceeded in conventional manner.

It was opened by Magdeleine Brard, artist pupil of Alfred Cortot, eminent French pianist. Five years ago as a girl of sixteen, she made a triumphal tour of this country captivating her hearers by an astonishing virtuosity. With the same girlish charm and simplicity of manner she played contrasting groups by Chopin and Saint-Saens with fluency, delicate finish and distinctive style.

Miss May Korb, coloratura soprano of Newark, N. J., pupil of Marcelle Senrich, sang an aria from "Traviata" and a group of songs delightfully. At the beginning of her career she won the prize at the Newark Festival audition and was later chosen as the only female vocalist to appear at the Stadium concerts in New York. She is a striking blond of prepossessing personality and her voice is a lyric soprano of exquisite bird-like quality and beautifully schooled.

Benjamin Glick, popular tenor of the Metropolitan was enthusiastic, greatly received in arias from "Carmen" and "Arlésiana" and a group of French and Italian songs. On the stage he lapses frequently into light comedy. His repertoire, when in acknowledgment of an encore, he searched frantically through a small notebook for and the Westman on Tuesday night, December 9.

tions and variations of its opening measures.

Sponsored by Bauer.

Two separate series of soirees of an intimate and informal character are the Beethoven association concerts, sponsored by Harold Bauer and the Sunday evening programs given by the Little Symphony orchestra under George Barrere, celebrated flautist of the New York Symphony. The latter are given in the Henry Miller theater to a distinct following that includes an appreciable French contingent and many prominent musicians. Mr. Barrere conducts these evenings very informally, introducing each number with verbal comments delivered in a highly humorous and individual manner. He delights in programs of unusual transcriptions and unfamiliar selections by obscure as well as celebrated masters. His miniature symphony orchestra plays with great clarity and finish, giving the impression of slightly robust chamber music.

The night of November 23 Miss Bettie Gilmore of Birmingham, Ala., appeared as soloist with the Little Symphony, playing a group of three selections by Tchaikovsky, Debussy and Ravel. Miss Gilmore is a concert harpist, whose artistic work is widely known throughout the south.

Georgians Visiting In Havana, Cuba.

Havana, Cuba, December 6.—The winter social season of the Cuban capital was ushered in during the past week with much festivity, in which many visitors from Atlanta and other parts of Georgia participated.

A large party of Georgians, headed by Miss Beryl Brodenburg, president of the Augusta Business and Professional Women's club, left yesterday after spending a week in Havana. The party included Mrs. Leola C. Westmoreland, Mr. and Mrs. John Saneen, Mrs. Emma R. Clausen, Miss Nellie D. Henry, Mrs. Ruby R. Cason, Mrs. Florence D. Dour, Miss Myrtle Young, Miss Rucha Brazell, Miss Florence K. Fund, Miss Addie R. Barnes, Mrs. Sallie Barrett, Mrs. Edith L. Sevier, Miss Minnie Hilton, Miss Nettie Dunn, Mrs. Almie D. Allen, Miss Margaret Cavanaugh, Miss Estelle Wagoner, Mrs. Etta L. Fortson, Mrs. Mamie B. Goodwin, Mrs. Julia Betha, Mrs. Lolo Y. Speer, Mrs. Margaret Shurley, Miss Margaret Collins, Emory Williamson, Moses C. Murphy, Jr., Mrs. Agnes Mathews and Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Elliott, all of Augusta; Mrs. Frances Godbee Vidalia; Dan M. Vickers and Elias Lott, Douglas; Ben F. Johnson, Thompson; Sims E. Mitchell, Waynesboro; Judge Milton C. Barwick, Louisville, Ga.; and John M. Crook, Columbus.

The American club annual Thanksgiving ball was a brilliant event that was attended by about 500 guests and a reception committee, formed of club officials, including the president, Leonard E. Brownson, and a past-president, Robert Hollingsworth, who just returned from a visit to his former home city, Atlanta, welcomed many out-of-town guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Jose Pennino, who have visited in Atlanta on several occasions, entertained a group of friends at this dinner-dance and they will also be host and hostess at the opening dinner-dance of the Jockey club, Tuesday evening.

When Winter Comes!

When winter comes, the washwoman moves indoors. And "indoors" generally means one room, or at best two rooms. Of course you are not going to subject your clothes to that sort of treatment.

If you send your washing out, why not safeguard yourself and family absolutely, by calling in an organization like your laundry, which makes a business of sanitation and which sterilizes while it washes.

But sanitation—while it may be the biggest reason—is just one reason why your clothes should go to the laundry. The other is that clothes last longer when they are done by our gentle, thorough wash method of pure soft water and mild, white soap.

Yes, there is a family wash method to suit your purse and taste. Just telephone.

Washington Official Circles Face Heavy Social Season

BY MARTHA STRAYER.

Washington, December 6.—It's going to be a hard winter on congressmen's dinner coats and their wives' evening dresses.

While party leaders were holding party caucus, party leaders (ladies) have been holding social ditto. And with the congressional machinery just beginning to run smoothly on Capitol Hill, the barrage of teas and dinners is on.

Mrs. Coolidge having announced the official white house social program, the way is clear for other and less important programs. And of these, among the congressional set, the most outstanding is that of the Congressional club, which begins its social season with a tea Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Byrnes is President. This club has a membership of about three-fourths of the congressmen and their wives, with a smaller sprinkling of senatorial families. It has a handsome and expensive club building, on an expensive location at New Hampshire avenue and sixteenth street. Its president is a southern

Saturday evening, following the performance of the club's Marionettes at the High school auditorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton J. Baxter entertained informally at a lovely dinner party Sunday, at their home on South Hill street.

Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Newton J. Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. Will Wheaton, Mrs. Charles W. Miller, and Mrs. Hill Newton, Will H. Wheaton, Jr.

The members of the Rotary club gave an enjoyable party Friday evening at the Country club, the occasion being "Ladies Night." Mrs. J. H. P. Mason was in charge, her committee consisting of Mrs. J. H. P. Mason, Mrs. Frank Pittman, Mr. E. Shapard, Jr., Mrs. T. H. Wynne, Mrs. Robert Otis Crouch and Mrs. Newton J. Baxter.

congressman's wife, Mrs. James Byrnes of South Carolina.

Mrs. Coolidge having preempted Thursdays for white house dinners and receptions, congressional ladies must keep hands off that day. And the Congressional club has followed suit and preempted Tuesdays and Fridays for its affairs.

To Entertain Coolidges. The high spot in the club's program is its annual reception for the President and Mrs. Coolidge, which will come along early in January, when the season is in full swing. The president accepts less than a dozen invitations in a winter, it means something to entertain for him.

Second in importance is another reception for Speaker of the House and Mrs. Frederick H. Gillett, which will follow in February.

Then on New Year's day, after congressmen and their wives have taken off the swallow-tail coats and best afternoon gowns worn to the white house, there is a smaller and less important reception at the Congressional club. This will begin at 8 p. m., with dancing until midnight.

Senate Luncheon Club. Each Friday afternoon there will be a musicale, tea or lecture, and each Tuesday evening a dance or card party. Each Tuesday afternoon there will be a matinee card party, following lunch.

Besides this large and very comprehensive congressional social organization, there is a smaller and less exclusive one among senators' wives. It's the Senate Ladies' Luncheon club, which once a month lunches in a private room at the capitol, and once a season has a very special luncheon at one of the big downtown hotels.

The wife of the vice president automatically becomes president of this little senate group. Mrs. Coolidge, its last president, kept on attending the capitol luncheon, but she was elevated to the white house.

The white house social program, which was announced last week, included the regular route of receptions and dinners. It will move smoothly along from week to week, beginning December 18, and will be pushed before the year puts a stop to the official season.

R. E. Lee U. D. C.

Holds Meeting at Mrs. Oscar Palmour's

The Robert E. Lee chapter, U. D. C., College Park, held a meeting in the home of Mrs. Oscar Palmour, Tuesday, December 2, at 3 p. m. Miss Eloise Oeds, a talented musician graduate of Atlanta Music Conservatory, presented an attractive program. Miss Zenta Mueller gave two violin numbers, "Czardas," Monti; "Cradle Song," Jarnfeldt.

Mrs. Mueller was accompanied by her talented mother, Mrs. Kirk Mueller.

College Park was glad to welcome these friends who on Friday in College Park, Mrs. Mueller yielded to the entreaties of friends and gave "Pastorale," by Scarlatti. Miss Mary Joe Merritt sang "The Gift of the Magi," by O. Henry; "A Little Dutch Garden," Anon; "Apple Blossoms," Charles Wesley Martin.

Miss Louise Weaver, a talented pupil of Miss Lansing and Miss Jennie Anglin, a graduate student of piano, were expected. By unavoidable circumstances, they were detained. The chapter hopes to have these talented artists at some future time.

Mrs. Palmour was a gracious hostess. Refreshments of Mrs. Palmour, Lily Love, chairman of social department.

Heartily thanks were returned to Mrs. Palmour, Mrs. Mueller, Miss Zenta Mueller and Miss Merritt. The chapter is looking forward eagerly to the unveiling of boulder and tablet December 14, 2:50 o'clock, on Georgia Military academy campus.

Montezuma Chapter Elects Officers.

Montezuma, Ga., December 6.—At the annual meeting this week of the Phil Cook chapter, U. D. C., the following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Mrs. L. C. Cheves; first vice-president, Mrs. W. H. McKenzie; second vice-president, Mrs. F. M. Mullins; third vice-president, Mrs. Watt Espy; recording secretary, Mrs. Lawrence McKenzie; treasurer, Mrs. C. A. Maffett; historian, Miss Annie Kate Brown; registrar, Mrs. A. P. Lewis; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Geo. Chastain; press chairman, Mrs. Fred Smith.

Junior Assembly Dances Interest New York Society

New York, December 6.—A fitting climax to a week of unending gaiety in New York society was provided on Friday night by the first of the Junior Assembly dances, the most ambitious of the numerous affairs arranged for the young women of this season as well as for those introduced last year. The dance was held at the Ritz-Carlton and the guest number numbered several hundred and included the most representative members of conservative society. The Junior Assembly is the most exclusive organization of its kind in New York. Its entertainments are directed by a committee of prominent matrons. The Friday night dance was preceded by a large number of dinners.

Notables of society were seen in a Spanish opera, "Carmela," on Thursday and Friday in the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom. These performances were given, the proceeds going to a babies' hospital and clinic in which the members of society are interested. More than two dozen of the attractive and talented younger women composed the chorus.

The Grand Duchess Cyril, of Russia, who has been awaited with eager interest, arrived tonight on the steamship Paris, coming at the invitation of the Monday Opera club. She will be extensively entertained here and in Washington. Tomorrow afternoon there will be a large reception at the Colony club for the debutantes to meet the Grand Duchess and tomorrow night the Colonial Dames of America will entertain the royal visitor at a formal dinner and reception.

Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James has arranged a dinner and musicale for her Wednesday. The Grand Duchess was formally welcomed tonight on behalf of New York society by a committee consisting of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, Princess Richelieu, Mrs. Snodgrass, Mrs. Richard Mortimer and Mrs. Henry H. Rogers.

A number of important weddings took place during the past week. On the occasion of the marriage of the families of the couple, that of Miss Grace Van Arsdale Burt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Frederick Burt, and Robert Henry B. Loughborough, attracted unusual attention. It took place this afternoon at St. Thomas's church, a reception following at Sherry's. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires.

Miss Sallie Maria Rupert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Justus Rupert, and Charles Keichum, were married this afternoon in the Church of the Resurrection, the ceremony being followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Dr. Russell Bourne officiated.

The wedding of Miss Marian Chate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Chate, Jr., and Charles Barney Harding took place on Wednesday at St. Bartholomew's church. The minister was the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks. A reception was held after the ceremony at the bride's home.

One of the foremost of the charity events of the week was a calendar bazaar held at the Waldorf-Astoria this afternoon as a benefit for the Little Mothers' aid association.

Debutante parties tonight included a dinner and dance at Park Lane given for Miss Lucy Gurnee and a supper dance for Miss Helen F. Potter at Pierre's. Miss Ellen Graves and Miss Dolores Carrillo were hostesses at a dance at the Sulgrave.

The Churchwomen's League for Patriotic Service, one of the larger philanthropic groups, gave a festival at the Roosevelt hotel on Friday and the participants included many of the best-known women of society.

Tenth Audience Rehearsal For Big Symphony Concerts

All heads are bowed in homage to Italy's most popular composer since Verdi—Giacomo Puccini, died in Brussels on November 29. He was in the happy position of a favorite with all music lovers. An unfinished work, "Turandot," lies on his desk. Quoted from a 1907 notebook: "The admirable musicianship of his operas, his brilliant technique and his fertile and varied orchestration enlist the sympathies of dilettanti while his typically Italian flow of melody and his strongly developed dramatic feeling and power of emotional expression endear him to the less cultured classes. Whether we are to find in him a second Verdi rising from strength to strength and developing his genius with advancing years, time alone can show, but the opening of his career unquestionably justifies the most sanguine hopes for his future."

Leide for this fourth concert presents overture, "Mignon," by Ambrose Thomas (1811-1896). The story of "Mignon" was written by Carle and Barbier, based upon the episode in Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister." The overture is made up almost entirely of excerpts from the opera. There are two principal themes. Although not considered brilliant, it is instrumented in a skillful manner, and has some effective contrasts and combinations. Particularly interesting is the manner in which the romance, "Know'st Thou the Land?" sung by Mignon, and the brilliant polacca, sung by Elena, are presented.

2.—Phaeton, "Symphonic Poem," by Camille Saint-Saens (1835-1921). Phaeton has succeeded in gaining permission from his father to drive the chariot of the sun. The horses fill the air with their snorting breath and stamp the ground impatiently. The ride begins, the steeds soon perceive the youth's light weight and inexperience with the reins. They madly rush headlong and leave the traveled road. The chariot tossed higher and higher approaches terrestrial regions. The whole universe is about to perish when Jupiter strikes his lightning bolt and stops the imprudent fighter—Phaeton is no more. The heat of the horses is carried by the strings and harp. The introduction is taken up by the different choirs.

In the second part there is a violin obbligato in slow, sustained and heavenly melody against the changing roar of the horses, first a gallop and then a trot. Cymbals, tom-tom and bass drum give forth the lightning crash.

3.—Fantasia, "La Boheme," by Giacomo Puccini (1858-1924). Puccini taking from Murger's famous novel, built his masterpiece, "La Boheme," giving only four scenes from the lives of the joyous Bohemians. The fantasia includes: (a) Opening scene, (b) Bohemian's trio, (c) Love duet, finale Act I, (d) Rudolph's vocal duet, (e) Opening of Act III, (f) Musette's song and finale.

4.—"Sicilian Vespers" by Giuseppe Verdi (1813-1901). Vespers is a composition gives the condensed episodes of the history of the Italian revolution in Sicily against the French invasions. (a) Funeral march which describes Sicilian slavery and tyrannical peasants, occasional cry of the children and women is heard. (b) War call and revolution. (c) Finale: song of victory.

5.—Melody in F by Anton Rubinstein (1830-1894) arranged by Vincent d'Indy (1851-...). This delightful composition was originally a short piano selection, cleverly built upon a simple and pretty melody. The piece is made out in an exact pattern like an old-fashioned garden with box hedges and straight paths, each the same number of paces long. D'Indy, in his arrangement, in the first part gives the melody to the cello; in the second, to the French horn; in the third, to the first violins, the finale, to full orchestra.

G.—"Pomp and Circumstance March" by Sir Edward Elgar (1857-...). This thrilling and magnificent march was composed for the coronation of King Edward VIII. After a powerful and stirring introduction, the piece breaks into a tune with real snap, first as the main theme or melody and then in the bass. A repetition of material used in the introduction, contrary to the usual practice in marches, leads to the trio, wherein there is a "healthy" popular tune. The melody is accompanied by a uniform beat and the whole piece is exceptionally stirring and martial, besides possessing a new and original beauty of its own.

The next "rehearsal" will be on the composers and musical form of the fifth concert. H. KNOX SPAIN.

Weddings and Music Feature Calendar Of Social Events

Weddings and music will hold everybody's attention during the week, with Miss Louise Inman's wedding as the event which will gather all society on Wednesday evening at the First Presbyterian church, and will center interest of friends in Atlanta, Marietta and the entire south. In the afternoon, on Wednesday, Miss Mary Clifton will wed Dr. Casimer Patrick at All Saints' Episcopal church.

Music will find its keynote in the coming of the Cincinnati symphony orchestra on Thursday for two concerts. Following an established custom when playing in Atlanta, the afternoon program will be made an especially appealing one for young music students, and both boxes and orchestra will be filled with lovely young girls and boys for whom this concert has an attraction peculiarly its own.

College gayeries will be particularly delightful on Friday and Saturday, when the Marionettes will present "Dulcy" at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium on those evenings, and on Friday when Georgia Tech Cotillion club members will entertain at a dinner-dance at the Biltmore hotel.

Third in the brilliant debut parties of the season will be the beautiful ball at which Miss Aileen Harris will be presented by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Harris, to their friends. This outstanding social event among the debutantes will be given Friday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Other debutante parties of the week will be given to Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, on Tuesday, by Mrs. W. D. Ellis, Jr., to Miss Constance Cone, on the same afternoon, by Mrs. A. S. Adams, and to Miss Louise Gay Stubbs and her guest, Miss Virginia Reynolds, of Denver, Col., Miss Stubbs and Miss Reynolds are lovely debutantes who have come recently to Atlanta, and Miss Stubbs' grandmother, Mrs. Edward S. Gay, will entertain at the Biltmore tea-dance on Tuesday in their honor.

Saturday will be no less gay than each preceding day, for Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown will entertain at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving Club in honor of their two charming daughters, Miss Maria and Miss Frances Brown. And at the Biltmore tea-dance Mrs. Charles C. Harman will compliment Miss Ida Sedler, Mrs. Paul Seydel will be hostess in honor of Miss Mary Ann Lipscomb, Miss Catherine Davidson will entertain, and Bethel Farnsworth will entertain one group of the season's debutantes, while Eddie Pope and Garland Walraven will compliment another.

Miss Elyea To

Wed Mr. Minchener.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Dorothy Elyea and Calhoun Emmet Minchener is of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends.

Miss Dorothy Elyea is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Elyea. On her paternal side, she is the granddaughter of Mrs. Emma Glenn Elyea and the late Theodore Elyea, and is a descendant of the Glenns, pioneer citizens of Atlanta, and of the Shumates and Gatewoods, of Virginia. On her maternal side, she is the granddaughter of the late George Winthrop Dwyer, of Savannah, a prominent and gentle man, and is of the blonde type of loveliness. Although she has never made a formal debut, she has been exceedingly popular socially, and has a wide circle of admiring friends.

Mr. Minchener is the son of B. E. Minchener, of Montgomery, Ala., and the late Rosa Calhoun Minchener. He has one sister, Miss Mary Minchener, of Montgomery. On his paternal side, he is the grandson of the late Frank Minchener, who came direct from England. On his maternal side, he is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick H. Calhoun, of this city. He is related to the Coles, of Covetta county, and is a descendant of John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina. He is a graduate of Tech High school and Georgia School of Technology. He is now draftsman with the Otis Elevator company.

To Wed Mr. McLanahan.

Much interest accompanies the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Frances Gurr by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fort Land, of Macon, Ga., to Alexander McLanahan.

Miss Gurr was graduated at Lanier High school, Macon; received her degree in music at Wesleyan college; graduated with first honors at Guston Hall, Washington, D. C.; studied piano a year in New York; attended National Conservatory of Music at Fontainebleau for two years, where she studied under Philippe, the most famous piano teacher in Europe. It was during her stay in Paris last year that she met Mr. McLanahan, who was then studying architecture.

Besides being a brilliant and gifted pianist, she is a graceful dancer. She is very athletic and is one of the most beautiful young women in America. She has been extensively entertained in Atlanta upon visits to Mrs. J. W. Spears and Mrs. Charles D. Orme, and has a wide circle of friends here who will be interested in this announcement.

Mr. McLanahan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Hawley McLanahan, with whom he is associated as an architect, having offices in Philadelphia and Paris. He served with distinction during the world war, having won the honors of an American ace. His parents own a handsome villa

In the group of lovely attendants, in the upper left-hand picture, at the Cooledge-Haverty wedding, which was a brilliant event of Wednesday evening, December 3, are Mrs. Harold Cooledge, Miss Ethel Nial, Miss Katherine Haverty, Miss Martha Boynton and Miss Emmie Nixon; the dainty little flower girls and ringbearer are little Mary Clair McGaughey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGaughey; Rawson Haverty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haverty, and Clair Haverty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haverty. The beautiful bride in the full-length picture at the right is Mrs. John Rhodes Haverty, who before her wedding on Wednesday was Miss Mary Frances Cooledge, the youngest daughter of Fred J. Cooledge, Sr. The picture of the lovely bride in the cut at the lower left is Mrs. Gabriel Haas Schoen, who before her marriage on Monday evening, which was a most brilliant occasion, taking place at the Temple, followed by a reception at the Biltmore hotel, was Miss Evelyn Barbara Hirsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hirsch. Photographs of Mrs. Haverty and the wedding party by Mathewson & Price, staff photographers, while the one of Mrs. Schoen is the work of McCrary studio.

Distinguished Visitors At Driving Club Dance.

A number of distinguished visitors were central figures in dinner parties given at the regular week-end dinner-dance Saturday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club. Debutantes and brides-elect were also honor guests in congenial parties.

The tables placed around the outer edge of the ballroom were artistically decorated in the center with slender vases of bright-colored flowers.

Miss Louise Nelson, lovely member of the Debutante club of this season, was central figure at the dinner party at which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Nelson, entertained. Covers were laid for Misses Nelson, Harriet Sheldon, Ida Sadler, Rebecca Ashcraft, Ellen Newell, Mary Ann Lipscomb, Mary Balleger, Valeria Manley, Catherine Raine, Constance Cone, Aileen Harris, Callie Orme and Margaret Nelson; Jack Sharp, Foreney Wyle, Henry Walker Bagley, William Parker Nesbitt Mayre, Parke Hunt, John Grant, Lawson Kiser, Baxter Maddox, Dan Conklin, Richard Hull, Richard Courts, Willard McBurney, George Harrison and R. M. Harris.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Downs, of Savannah, Ga., and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little were complimented by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Banks. Invited to meet these honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pegram, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr. and Mrs. J. K. Otley, Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Abston, Dr. and Mrs. S. Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Hollins Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Smythe and

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson. Mr. and Mrs. DeSales Harrison entertained a group of friends in compliment to Colonel and Mrs. Jason Joy, of New York. The guests included Colonel and Mrs. Joy, Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Jr., and Armistead Knox.

A congenial party dining together were Miss Martha Bell, Miss Margaret Elder, Miss Margaret Middleton, Mrs. Newton Lemmus, of Miami, Fla., Spencer Tunnell, Joe Haverty, Alfred Thompson, Locke Crumley and Dr. Thomas Crenshaw.

Miss Louise Inman and Eugene Egbert McNeel, whose marriage will take place Wednesday, were honor guests in a large party at which Samuel Inman Cooper entertained. Covers were placed for Miss Inman, Mr. McNeel, Miss Emmie Nixon, Miss Mary Shelden, Miss Sara Matthews, of Thomaston, Ga.; Miss Martha Boynton, Miss Arabella Dudley, Miss Margaret McNeel, of Marietta; Miss Katherine Haverty, Mrs. Arthur Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan McNeel, of Marietta; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh I. Inman, Robert Maddox, George Weyman, Edmonde Brady, Jack Caldwell, Robert Foreman, Jr., Charles Gardner, William Sibley, E. W. Simpson, Samuel Inman.

Miss Helen Warr, of Lewistown, Mont., who is the guest of Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh, was central figure in a party entertained by Dr. Charles P. Hodge.

Dr. and Mrs. Howard Bucknell entertained in honor of the Right Honorable Sir Willoughby Dickinson and Lady Dickinson, of London. Invited to meet them were Mrs. Sam Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeGivie, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Inman and W. L. Peel. Mr. and Mrs. Gus T. Dodd entertained as their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme, Mr. and Mrs. Wimberly Peters and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Haynes.

Yuletide Gaieties At the Biltmore.

Elaborate plans for the celebration of the first Yuletide season are announced by the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. Special dinner-dances, tea-dances and concert-dances are included in the series of holiday events.

A popular dance orchestra from New York City, under the direction of Roger Wolf Kahn, the young son of Otto Kahn, the noted financier, will be brought here by the Biltmore for its Christmas and New Year celebration.

Many members of the college set who will be home from school for the holidays will be present on this occasion.

On Wednesday, December 24, there will be a Christmas-eve dinner-dance sponsored by the Debutante club.

On Thursday, Christmas day, a Christmas tea-dance has been arranged. Other social affairs will be as follows: Friday, December 26, a special dinner-dance; Saturday, December 27, a special tea-dance; Sunday, December 28, a special concert-dinner; Monday, December 29, a special dinner-dance; Tuesday, December 30, special tea-dance; Wednesday, December 31, two simultaneous dances, the ballroom and main dining room will be utilized. According to the management, this is the most important series of social affairs yet undertaken by the Biltmore. A number of out-of-town guests, will be present at the holiday gaudies, it is stated.

Miss Margaret Elder To Be Honored.

Miss Margaret Elder, one of the season's most popular and loveliest debutantes, will be complimented with an elaborate tea by her mother, Mrs. Sterling J. Elder, on the afternoon of Wednesday, December 17, at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue. Miss Elder will be honored with a number of social courtesies during the winter months.

Tea-Dance Attracts Number of Guests.

A delightful affair of the week-end was the regular Saturday afternoon tea-dance in the Pompeian grillroom of the Atlanta Biltmore. Christmas trees, roses and other flowers of the season were attractively used on the tables.

Ray Knight Daniel entertained the following: Miss Virginia Turman, Miss Marion Couch, Miss Marion Hull Smith, Miss Elsie Bennett, Miss Margaret Kemp, Lansing Thomas, Garland Walraven, Armin Maier and Edward Pope.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cain entertained in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. James A. Bankston and their visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gordon, of Charleston, S. C.

The largest party of the afternoon assembled 60 guests, the occasion complimenting Miss Ida Sadler, a debutante. Her sister, Miss Mary Sadler, was hostess.

Others having reservations included W. B. Farnsworth, Mrs. Sims Bray, Captain W. T. Holland, J. L. Ellis, Miss Nellie McVey, T. H. Mitchell, P. D. White, E. B. Denmark, Eugene Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Campbell, Mr. Sheffield and many others.

Mrs. George Golden Honored at Luncheon.

Mrs. George Golden of Columbus, the guest of Mrs. Charles C. McGhee, was entertained at a beautifully appointed luncheon on Saturday by Mrs. McGhee at her home on Fifteenth street.

The house was beautifully decorated with lovely flowers.

The guests were seated at two tables, where covers were laid for 28 guests.

Each table had a beautiful central decoration of pink roses, narcissis and lavender sweet peas. Lavender candles burned in silver candelholders.

After-Theater Dances To Begin Friday.

The first of a series of after-theater dances will be held Friday evening in the ballroom of the Henry Grady hotel. Dancing will be from 10 to 1 o'clock. Supper will be served in the main dining room. Carl LeFebvre's orchestra will furnish the music.

Mr. and Mrs. De Ford Smith Entertain at Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. De Ford Smith entertained a number of their friends at a bridge party on Friday evening at their apartment on East Sixth street. The living room, where the game was played was decorated with chrysanthemums in vases.

Mrs. Smith was assisted in receiving by her sister, Miss Gladys Williams. Mrs. Smith was handsomely gowned in black chiffon.

Miss Williams wore ecru chiffon over peach satin.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Hunnicutt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Spear, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin S. Chalmers, Captain and Mrs. B. M. McFadyen, Mrs. Harry Di Christina, Misses Margaret Vaughan, Mary Bennett, Gladys Williams, Mr. Fry, George Chatfield, Wm. Grant, and MacDonald Britton.

Mrs. Freeman Honors Lovely Visitors.

Mrs. G. Frank Freeman entertained at an informal tea at the Piedmont Driving club on Saturday afternoon in honor of several attractive visitors. Miss Helen Warr of Montana, the guest of Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh; Miss Mae Quinney and Mrs. Joe Reynolds, the guests of Mrs. Klatt Armstrong, and Miss Margaret Morton of Athens, the guest of Mrs. Edward Cole.

The tea table was exquisitely appointed, and covers laid for 18 guests.

Washington Seminary Seniors Will Hold Bazar-Tea Dec. 12

The seniors of Washington seminary will hold a bazar-ten on Friday, December 12, from 2 to 6 o'clock. The handsome home of Miss Elizabeth Johnson, 60 East Fourteenth street, has been offered the seniors for what promises to be a delightful affair.

The entertainment features will make it unique as compared with the regular bazar. Tea will be served during the afternoon.

Selections by the Mandolin club, singing by Miss Sarah Sanders, violin solos by Miss Ruth Dabney Smith will vie with the pleasure of conversation.

Christmas shoppers will find useful and attractive articles for sale at exceedingly good values in hand-made and hand-painted articles. Also home-made cakes and candies.

The seniors ask a generous patronage from their friends and an interested public. The proceeds of the bazar will go to the fund for their annual, Facts and Fancies.

perplexed when he said: "I find everybody here one year older except myself, and I am growing younger every year and in due time I shall be sitting among you."

The first number on the program was a suite of dances from the opera Carmen. Mr. Damrosch explained all about the music. He said though "suite" might suggest "sweet" to the children, it was a French word which meant "to follow," and he proceeded to tell how the old composers grouped the various types of folk dances together, one following the other in agreeable contrast—one fast, the next slow; one major, the next minor; until out of these suites had grown the symphony form with its different movements. The plot of Carmen, he said, was laid in Spain, the home of so much fascinating dance music.

Describes Orchestra.

Then he introduced his great orchestra, speaking of them also as his children, divided up into various families. He described each family separately—the strings, the woodwinds, the brasses, and the percussion instruments.

And because he had chosen the suite from Carmen in order to familiarize the children with the quality of the woodwind instruments, the described them in their order, the flute first, as the highest in range, of exquisite tone quality and capable of great melody. Flutes were now the of silver, he said, but were originally of wood, hence their adoption by the woodwind family. They brought George Barrere, a famous flautist, to the front and introduced him, saying: "He is not the eldest of my children but he is one of the dearest," and Mr. Barrere played several melodies which his little hearers might know just how a flute looks and sounds.

Next, an oboe player was called to the front of the stage and Mr. Damrosch told a fascinating story from Greek mythology of how the god Apollo had originally brought the oboe to earth and taught the shepherd Paris on Mr. Ida how to play it. He said, "the oboe reflects rustic and pastoral moods and is a very important part of the orchestra."

The clarinet, he reserved for another time because it did not play an important part in the dances, but a bassoon player came forward and Mr. Damrosch explained that this odd looking instrument was the fun maker of the orchestra, just as the oboe is often called the whining baby.

Then the suite was charmingly played and an awe-struck child was quick to recognize the themes for bassoon and the flute and oboe dialogues.

Surprise Symphony.

The second number was Haydn's "Surprise Symphony" and Mr. Damrosch gave his eager little auditors, oh, such a captivating story of the composer's life and how the surprise symphony happened to be written. You see, Haydn had noticed an old gentleman at his concerts who always dropped off to sleep when the music was soft and soothing, and the composer thought he should be punished for his lack of attention. At the end of a very soft and delicate movement, he placed a terrifically loud chord, that was so deafening and unexpected that the old man jumped up from his peaceful sleep as if a bomb had exploded and every one had a good laugh at his expense. Haydn seemed to have felt sorry for the old gentleman after playing his little joke on him, so toward the end of the movement the music grows very soft and soothing again and the poor old gentleman is gently lulled back to sleep.

In order to teach the children all those hundreds of children sang it with him—it was really amazing how quickly they caught it—and after they knew it thoroughly the orchestra played it for them and they were very much amused when the big surprise chord came.

Two selections from "The Children's Corner," by the French composer, Debussy comprised the third group.

And can you imagine—the first was called the "Elephant's Lullaby."

I can't tell you how amusing the explanation of this jungle rattle song was. Mr. Damrosch told how a mother elephant croons her baby to sleep by shaking the flies away with her long trunk, while she sings:

"Be a good little elephant and never run away."

Or the big tiger'll get you in the jungle some day."

Then he asked the children what sort of instrument would best describe an elephant and it turned out to be the theme of the "Surprise Symphony."

Mr. Damrosch sat down at the piano and played it for them, improvising a little verse to fit the melody. Then the big unwieldy double-bass with its ponderous, hulking tone. The horn sang the lullaby and the oboe imitated the cry of the baby elephant when it woke up.

The second number "Gulliwog's Cake Walk" needed no explanation. Two selections from "The Children's

Atlanta Chapter Announces Meeting and Benefit Bridge

The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., will hold the final meeting of the year at the chapter house Thursday afternoon, December 11, at 3 o'clock. This will be an interesting meeting as the reports from the national convention recently held in Savannah will be given. There will be several distinguished guests present. Mrs. Cleve Webb, the music chairman, has arranged an attractive program.

Miss Fleming Weds Benjamin P. Milner.

Barnesville, Ga., December 6.—An interesting event of Wednesday was the marriage of Miss Greta Fleming of Gogansville to Benjamin P. Milner, of Barnesville, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Fleming. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. W. Browder, only the immediate families being present. The bride was lovely in a gown of brown brocade with matching accessories. As Miss Fleming, Mrs. Milner is known and loved by a wide circle of friends. Mr. Milner is now engaged in business at McCoskey, Fla., and the couple left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to Florida, where they will probably make their home for the next year or two.

Two Weddings Are Events in Tifton.

Tifton, Ga., December 6.—Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Goodman announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Rowena Dillard, to James Heard Carney, of Macon, which event took place at the home Saturday evening, November 22, at 8:30 o'clock. Rev. H. B. Fraser, pastor of the Presbyterian church, performing the ceremony in the presence of a few intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Carney are at home in Macon.

Miss Alice Kent and Thomas Wade Hodges were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kent, Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at their home on North Boulevard, Tifton. Rev. Robert Kerr, pastor of the Methodist church, performed the ceremony; Rev. F. C. McConnell, Jr., pastor of the First Baptist church, assisting.

The decorations were carried out in a color scheme of yellow and white.

The wedding music was played by Miss Josie Golden and Mrs. John S. Waters.

Brief Cases, Mrs. B. C. Postell was matron of honor and Miss Nell Tomlinson, of Macon, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Colonel Steve F. Mitchell was best man. The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Joseph Kent. She wore an ensemble suit of champagne satin-back crepe and dark brown charmeuse with leather and fur trimmings. Her hat was an early spring model of brown satin and gold cloth with gold lace trimmings and she carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses showered with valley lilies. The matron of honor wore a midnight blue georgette elaborately beaded with cut steel beads and her bouquet was premier roses.

The program closed with a lively Turkish march by Mozart.

The soldiers' home committee of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., Mrs. J. B. Phillips, chairman, will sponsor a benefit bridge at the chapter house Wednesday afternoon, December 10, at 3 o'clock. There will be attractive prizes. The tables will be only $1. All members of the chapter and their friends are invited to come as the money is to be used for the pleasure of the soldiers in the home.

'A Club' Formed By Decatur High School Students

The senior division of the Decatur High P. T. A. held a most interesting meeting on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Bush, the chairman, presiding. Mrs. Leffingwell gave a splendid report of the health clinic of Decatur. This body is giving very material aid to make the youth of our town physically fit, thereby making them able to become good students.

The membership of the senior division has reached 45 members and interest is increasing. These members are affiliating with the national organization, Mrs. Sayward chairman of the yard committee, made a report.

The special committee gave a very delightful Thanksgiving party for the senior class at which about 100 were entertained.

Prof. King made a short talk expressing his great pleasure in one organization of the high school, the "A Club."

The members of this club are: Le Conte Adams, Margaret Askew, Gladys Austin, Edna Braswell, Bettina Bush, Harriet Camp, Harriet Carter, Sara Carter, Helen Causey, Charley Will Canale, Dorothy Cheek, Frances Christian, Elizabeth Cook, Mary Nell Cooper, Louise Daniel, Sara Darrington, Muriel David, Bettie De Saussure, Lila Davis, Margaret Garretson, Manilla Hall, Modelle Hanson, Marion Hodges, Rosemary Homer, Mary Hughes, Rosalie Kaniker, Irene Lettwich, J. ## Christian Evangelism The Need of the Hour.

Rev. J. A. Schaaf, former missionary of the Episcopal National Council, makes it clear that the greatest need of America today is personal evangelism.

Such a method of winning souls was that which the Lord Jesus Christ had in view when He said to Peter and Andrew, who left their nets in answer to His call, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." But with these too, as with all other disciples, the first requisite was to "follow" Jesus, for a close acquaintanceship with Christ must precede anyone's becoming "fishers of men."

This increased zeal for evangelism which is engaging the Episcopal church at the present time must, of course, as Mr. Schaaf points out in one of his books, be based upon certain convictions which he puts in the form of questions:

- Do you believe that sin is real, and that it is spiritually fatal?
- Do you believe that the impenitent sinner is in any vital sense "lost" or that he may "perish"?
- Do you believe that man needs, and that God has provided, a divine remedy for sin?
- Do you believe that any responsibility for the salvation of others rests upon us as Christians?

In the measure that one can answer such questions out of his own spiritual knowledge and experience, his qualification as a "witness" for the Lord Jesus Christ, a suggestion is made that since the need in America is so great, there should be on every parochial program a department of evangelism. This involves a conviction on the part of the individual Christian that, "beginning at Jerusalem," as was our Lord's command to His followers, and which in a local sense means "at home," he must as a "witness" be ready to testify of the things which he has seen or experienced that may best help others to realize God's plan of salvation.

The answer given by Christ to Nicodemus makes it clear for all time that "a new birth" is the Christian imperative if one would either "see" or "enter into" the Kingdom of God. So if one would seek to bring others into the kingdom, he must first be sure that he has himself met the requisite for entrance. It is becoming increasingly clear to all who observe the church's inner life that things spiritual are taking precedence over material activities, while those who take their membership with due seriousness feel constrained to bring others to a knowledge of what salvation means.

With the same vigor that the church conducts her "every member canvass," it is suggested that she also wage an "every member evangelism," also extending this to reach the high percentage of non-Christians, ranging "from the moral scum at the top of its parasitic life to the moral dregs at the bottom of its social order," and so preponderant are the non-Christians that the plea is made to place evangelism in the program of every Christian communion in America, for, asks Mr. Schaaf, "How but by evangelism can America be saved?"

Fortified Hills W. M. U. Meets

The W. M. U. circles of the Fortified Hills Baptist church met Tuesday, December 2, 1924, at the following places:

Circle No. 1, with Mrs. J. D. McGee, Bankhead highway.

Circle No. 2, with Mrs. A. C. Pincus, Bankhead highway.

Circle No. 3, with Mrs. J. C. Bledsoe, Bankhead highway.

The society together held a missionary study class Friday, December 5, at the church, Mrs. Dr. Awtry, presiding.

The church will observe Sunday, December 30, as homecoming day. All friends are invited. The morning service will be devoted to Sunday school interests and a memorial service to departed members. The afternoon service will consist of devotional music. All members are requested to bring their dinner and their friends.

MRS. J. F. BIZELL, Cor. Sec., Route 97, West Lake Avenue.

Immanuel Baptist

The W. M. U. of Immanuel Baptist church will hold its regular missionary study Wednesday, December 10, beginning at 10 a. m. There will be a short business meeting at 3 p. m. At the meeting of the G. A. S. Thursday, a guest was Superintendent Whitten. Her talk dealt with encouraging the girls. The G. A. S. met each Thursday at 3 p. m. On next Tuesday at 3 p. m. the boys from 9 to 12 o'clock will meet and organize the R. A. band.

Voters' League Gives Meeting Dates.

Mrs. Virginia Henderson, chairman of the second ward members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, announces the first monthly meeting for the year 1924 at the home of Mrs. G. L. Wentworth, 142 Pulliam street at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Henderson urges a full attendance as this will be the last meeting of the year and quite an extensive meeting has been planned, where the new ward officers will be received and the activities of the year reviewed. Plans will be also outlined for the coming year.

Mrs. A. G. Maxwell, chairman of the ninth ward members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters will entertain the members of her ward at her home, 711 Highland avenue, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Maxwell urges a full attendance for the coming year, and plans will be formulated for the coming year, in which she is desirous that all the members take a part.

Lecture To Be Given Wednesday.

The subject of the Theological lecture for Wednesday evening will be "The Evolution of Life and Form." The lecture is free and will be given at 7 o'clock at 313-314 Grand building. All interested are invited.

Miss Agnes Woodward, a young California girl, is the founder of the only institution of its kind in the world. Girl pupils are taught to imitate feathered songsters.

"Why, where is it? I never think to look at it. Oh, here it is over here." She was tearing the white cover off the book, and then, there I was spread out before her, ready to tell her about China. "Dear, you may have the mission money for China."

I did not realize the true course of things over there. This is a wonderful little magazine, but I fear I have never done it justice, for I have never taken for the children there I was spread out again, now that I know what it is.

Oh, how happy I was! My mission money fulfilled at last. I had tried so hard to be a mission worker and now my task was successfully accomplished. Of course, I have many brothers and sisters who are mission workers for all the children in the world, for I am a World Call!

MARY WRAY McCASIL (Mrs. Paul K.) First Christian Church (Disciples), Atlanta, Georgia.

Capitol Avenue Baptist W. M. S.

Last Monday afternoon the program of the hour was spent principally in hearing "echoes" from the recent W. M. S. annual meeting in Savannah.

This society had the distinction of having eight messengers attend this convention, probably the largest number in this particular representation. These ladies brought back to their home society an interesting and inspiring report. All present seemed to be more eager to press forward in the W. M. U. 1925 program than ever before in its history.

35c "Dandere" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combed and dressed your hair, just moisten your hair-brush with a little "Dandere" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

File beautifying the hair "Dandere" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of "Dandere" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.

Here Is Soliloquy By the World Call, Missionary Paper

Editor's Note: It is a well known fact that the disciples of Christ, the fifth in the scale of numbers of the Christian denominations, is eminent in literature, and the World Call, a missionary magazine, an amalgamation of five different missionary magazines, is taken by people of every church in existence.

Miss Soliloquy on the World Call was recently read before the missionary society of the First Christian church, by the writer, Mrs. Paul McCasil, and was so well liked it was suggested that Mrs. McCasil, dressed in an ingenious costume made entirely of World Call covers, give it at the state convention recently held at Rome of the Disciples. Later, it was given at the First Christian Bible school, with children representing the different nations mentioned in World Call in costume, their parts being written by Mrs. N. T. Moore, missionary superintendent.

The Soliloquy of a World Call. Thump! Thump! Thump! It seemed that they would never finish pounding on me, nor would the incessant noise around me stop. And to think, I was bursting with eagerness to be off and out into the world! But I recalled what a time I had had getting even this far. And it really was better now for I had all my brothers and sisters around me when before I had a soul. From pillar to post I had gone, being assembled, I guess, and the only consolation I could get out of existing was thinking of the joy and happiness I would bring people after my long journey.

I think I might have been better satisfied had I known the folks around me. But they were strange little creatures, yellow-skinned, with tiny black eyes that looked out through narrow slits, it seemed to me, and they wore funny clothes, full of big flowers, and made kimono fashion. The women just hobbled around, some with babies strapped to their backs. I could see happy expressions on the faces of a few, but most of them wore a sad and tired look. I realized then that it was the women who were the heaviest burden, and who were more or less under bondage to serve the men in that far-off land.

After I had heard the good Christian missionaries and workers talk for I was associated with them very closely. In fact, I think I owed my life to them, for it was their idea that I was to be worked for. They would say how they longed for the people back home to know the true conditions, and that they did help would be a blessing and they would have more means to carry on their work. Then they would point to me and say: "He'll know it, and I would feel so proud and happy."

And now it was almost time for me to go out into the world and tell people about conditions back home. So I could go over faster than ever before. Why even now the thumping had stopped and I was being carried over my shoulders. I knew where I was. Soon they stopped and before I realized what was happening, I was rolled over and over with something white about me and someone was pressing something very hard against me. I wondered why that was done? Then what fun! All my brethren and sisters and I slid down a long chute, and lo! we were out in the big wide world.

Soon a man dressed in a blue-grey suit came along and put us all in a bag. I didn't like that bag, but I could not see a thing. They carried me around for several days until I began to feel afraid that I would not be a help to anyone after all. Finally one of them handed me to the loveliest lady and I knew my journey was ended. Now, she would put off that white thing that was binding me so tight, spread out before her in all my glory. I could tell her what the missionaries had said. I hoped I would, and this help them.

But my joys were unfounded. For the lady tossed me aside, and there I lay for days. No one paid any attention to me—I didn't realize it. I was so miserable. There were other people to be tossed into a blaze and destroyed and to be put aside, forgotten, and not help the good missionaries who had worked so hard to give me a chance to prove myself a worker for them.

One day the child of the house came in. My heart jumped for joy at the request she made of her mother. She wanted mission money for China. "Why, dear, you just took some money for mission work a few Sundays ago," said the mother. "Yes," replied the child, "but, mother, these people need this money so badly, your teacher says." Oh, why couldn't they see I was so tired, for I could tell them so much I knew! My teacher was afraid that you folks would not want to give more now; so she asked us to tell you to read about China in that church magazine you subscribed to.

"Why, where is it? I never think to look at it. Oh, here it is over here." She was tearing the white cover off the book, and then, there I was spread out before her, ready to tell her about China. "Dear, you may have the mission money for China."

I did not realize the true course of things over there. This is a wonderful little magazine, but I fear I have never done it justice, for I have never taken for the children there I was spread out again, now that I know what it is.

Oh, how happy I was! My mission money fulfilled at last. I had tried so hard to be a mission worker and now my task was successfully accomplished. Of course, I have many brothers and sisters who are mission workers for all the children in the world, for I am a World Call!

MARY WRAY McCASIL (Mrs. Paul K.) First Christian Church (Disciples), Atlanta, Georgia.

Capitol Avenue Baptist W. M. S.

Last Monday afternoon the program of the hour was spent principally in hearing "echoes" from the recent W. M. S. annual meeting in Savannah.

This society had the distinction of having eight messengers attend this convention, probably the largest number in this particular representation. These ladies brought back to their home society an interesting and inspiring report. All present seemed to be more eager to press forward in the W. M. U. 1925 program than ever before in its history.

MRS. J. L. MORGAN, Press Chairman.

Church Loses Loved Worker In Passing of Mrs. Atlee

Mrs. Frank H. Atlee, late beloved secretary of the North Atlanta district of the Woman's Missionary Society, M. E. Church, South, who died December 2 at her residence on West Peachtree street, Atlanta.

In the passing of Mrs. Frank H. Atlee, the late beloved secretary of the North Atlanta district of the W. M. S. M. E. church, South, the North Georgia conference loses one of its most consecrated and enthusiastic leaders. Mrs. Atlee was not only a leader in the woman's work, but in all the general work of her church. She was prominently identified with its every phase.

Mrs. Atlee had been a year of splendid achievement in the North Atlanta district, having organized a greater number of new societies than in any previous year. In finances this district will show a greater percentage of increase than any other district in North Georgia. No detail was too small to command attention and the decided growth of the work under Mrs. Atlee's immediate care can be attributed only to her genius for infinite pains. None have excelled her in zeal and none have surpassed her in devotion to her church and to the cause of missions at home and abroad.

The first Federation of Social Service Superintendents and its beginning in the North Georgia conference. At the invitation of Mrs. Atlee the social service superintendents of the South Georgia conference met at her home in Atlanta but in 11 neighboring states.

Mrs. Atlee has filled many offices in the woman's work in her church where her fine executive ability and spiritual leadership have contributed much to the splendid growth of the work in the First Methodist church, which has kept this church among the first in the North Georgia conference.

We know of none more fitting with whom to compare such a spirit than the minute men of revered memory in the trying days of the revolution who stood ever alert to the call of duty. So stood this little woman, ever alert and eager to obey the Master's call; no task too menial for her, no service too great for her dauntless courage.

Perhaps the finest bit of work accomplished by Mrs. Atlee was in the North Atlanta district where she has served as secretary for the past four years, nurturing the woman's missionary societies in 40 or more churches, organizing new ones, encouraging home and Texas, and writes she has not failed to keep her eyes open to find out what women are doing in the southwest along lines of church history and patriotic organizations.

Mrs. Johnson is a valued member of the Druid Hills church and is a staunch friend of the federated church women's page.

Those who had the pleasure of attending the silver wedding reception of the beloved Baptist missionaries to Japan, Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Clarke, will hold very dear in memory the beautiful picture presented by the receiving line, which consisted of Dr. and Mrs. Clarke and their six interesting children. Mrs. Johnson, Daniel's mother, of Mrs. Clarke, having the first place of honor. Dr. and Mrs. Clarke are in Atlanta on furlough for the third time since going out to Japan 25 years ago.

Mrs. McEachern Here.

Mrs. J. N. McEachern, corresponding secretary of the W. M. S. North Georgia conference, is in the city in attendance upon the fifth quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ at the Central Presbyterian church. Mrs. McEachern is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Rankin Manley, in Morning Side Park.

Mrs. W. B. Higginbotham, president of the W. M. S. North Georgia conference, came up from West Point to attend the funeral services for Mrs. Frank H. Atlee at the First Methodist church on Thursday afternoon.

Atlanta is blessed by the presence in her midst of so many consecrated Christian workers from all over the world, who have assembled this week for the fifth quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, prominent among the foreign delegates is the Rev. A. K. Reischauer, of Tokyo, who comes as a representative from the National Christian Council of Japan.

Elberton Juniors.

The Methodist church in Elberton, a junior congregation which meets every Sunday morning, with a goodly number in attendance. The leaders are Miss Fanny Henry, Mrs. J. A. McEachern, Mrs. Emma Robinson and Mrs. L. W. Collins.

Mrs. Wallace Rogers, superintendent of supplies for the Woman's Missionary society of the North Georgia conference, M. E. Church, South, has moved from LaGrange to Atlanta, Dr. and Mrs. Rogers will be at home for the winter at the Blackstone Apartment A-5, on the corner of Peachtree and Fourth streets. Dr. Rogers has been appointed presiding elder of the North Atlanta district.

Officers Named.

At the December meeting of the W. M. S. of St. Mark's Methodist church, Atlanta, the following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. W. H. Griffin, president; Mrs. J. W. Hurt, vice president; Mrs. J. S. Bragg, treasurer; Mrs. J. A. Streeter, assistant treasurer.

Baptist women note with pleasure that the Inman Park W. M. S. has made another contribution to the work of W. M. U. of Atlanta in giving Mrs. J. D. Rhodes as mission study chairman to this organization.

Mrs. Rogers will give her time and talent freely to this work.

Mrs. W. A. Johnson, a trustee of the Mary P. Williamson school, of Blue Ridge, has been elected to the Baptist W. M. U. of Oklahoma.

Baptist Campaign Is Oversubscribed By Georgia Women

For the $75,000,000 campaign launched by southern Baptists in 1919, the Georgia women and young people of the graded missionary union accepted as their quota $1,500,000. With the closing of the books this week it was discovered that they had given to Baptist causes five times the campaign $1,661,636.64. A large number, paying their pledges, signed up as emergency women, while many hundreds sent to Baptist headquarters for alabaster boxes for their sacrificial gifts. So it was that this large amount was gathered by the systematic giving of the years and the special love gifts from hearts overflowing with Christian gratitude.

LAURA LEE PATRICK, Corresponding Secretary-Treasurer, Georgia B. W. M. U.

Baptist W. M. S. Holds Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Third Baptist church held its regular monthly business meeting Monday, Mrs. C. S. Morris presiding. The chairman of the different committees gave good reports. Liberal donations were noted for charity ward at the Georgia Baptist hospital, and also the Christmas tree fund for nurses. The society will plant a tree in memory of Mrs. Withers, a pioneer member of the society. The new W. A. counselor, Mrs. Kelley, made a splendid report and announced a Christmas play, to be staged by the girls, Mrs. Howard Smith, G. A. leader, gave a good report.

Mrs. L. O. Laney gave a very good report concerning the Sunbeams.

Assistant treasurer: corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. O. Walsh; assistant corresponding secretary, Mrs. John A. Boykin; recording secretary, Mrs. W. H. Toole; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. T. P. Talley; superintendent of publicity, Mrs. W. C. Dumas; assistants, Mrs. H. E. Choate and Mrs. Merrie; superintendent of Bible and mission study, Mrs. C. A. Holze; superintendent of social service, Mrs. Norman Davidson; superintendent of Junior, Mrs. George C. W. Bates; superintendent of Young People, Mrs. B. M. Hall, Jr.; superintendent of Junior, Mrs. W. W. Holze; exander; assistants, Mrs. Charles Marshall, Mrs. Fred Shafer and Mrs. Lyman Morris; superintendent of devotion, Mrs. E. A. Underwood; agent for the Voice, Mrs. T. S. Lewis.

Mrs. W. A. Albright, president of the Woman's Missionary society of the Druid Hills Methodist church, recently suffered a sprained ankle. Mrs. Albright is one of the leading women in the North Georgia conference and was a delegate to the conference recently held at the Wesley Memorial church, this city.

The W. M. S. of the South Georgia conference, M. E. Church, South, will sponsor a conference edition of the North Georgia conference and will be profusely illustrated and which will feature every phase of missionary work supported by the conference. Mrs. Dan Harris, of Sanderville, is superintendent of publicity for this conference and will assist the editor of the Woman's Missionary page in the Advocate in the making up of this issue.

Dr. Ashby Jones in a few words made the presentation to the children of the new book, "The Bible," saying that nothing could be more appropriate as a memorial to one who gave her life in the beginning of motherhood, that a constant supply of refreshing truth for the children whose mothers had gone from them. Mrs. George Westmoreland, in a graceful manner, received the memorial book of the orphanage. A bronze tablet at the base of the fountain, bears Mrs. Mell's name.

The young women who were so closely associated with her, both as president and as a member, in this work of social service, have given this beautiful expression of their love for Mrs. Mell.

MRS. M. ASHBY JONES.

Signorina Maria Barnera, a 20-year-old Italian girl, has been assigned to regular work in the government wire less service.

Baptist Good-Will Centers Are Getting Real Results

The outstanding feature of the work of the Baptist women in Savannah is a whole is, without doubt, the Good-Will Center, which is located at 528 York street, west, in the historic "Yamacraw" district, where the foreign element and many others seemingly in greatest need of the loving and helping hand are most evident. The Good-Will Center in Savannah is one of four in Georgia, the others being one in Macon and two in Atlanta.

This work is supervised by Miss Frances Black, of Missouri, who is a graduate of our Louisville Training school and who has had the experience of other part city work besides regular missionary work. Miss Black is in possession of the rare and valuable traits in Christian character, patience and perseverance in soul-winning, in addition to her love for Christ and her consecrated life, which have brought manifold results in her four years spent in Savannah.

In 1917, seven years ago, Good-Will Center was established in Savannah, when the state board of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union sent Miss Fannie Lee McCall, a Georgia girl, who is now Mrs. Norman Williamson, one of our missionaries, to take the work under the Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Savannah and who was an inspiration in her zeal and faithfulness to the work in its infancy. Before Miss McCall's coming and before the Good-Will Center's existence, Miss Sue Kelly was city missionary under the Baptist women. She was faithful and did much to relieve the need, although handicapped by the lack of equipment to carry on the work. Both Miss Kelly and Miss McCall, as well as Miss Black, received their training at Louisville Training school.

Supported By Women.

In the Good-Will Center work our state board has aided all along, but gradually the financial part is being assumed by the Baptist women of Savannah; but not the love and interest in which the board will always hold the work, with home economics for the members have visited the Good-Will Center from time to time and given the inspiration to go forward.

Many Baptist women in Savannah, among them some of the young women and the girls, have given their time and thought, their prayer and teaching, their means and support. Loafers and loafers have laid their offerings at the Master's feet in this cooperative work of saving the body and the soul for Christ. Some have already well as Miss Black, received their training at Louisville Training school.

Mrs. L. O. Laney gave a very good report concerning the Sunbeams.

Mrs. W. A. Albright, president of the Woman's Missionary society of the Druid Hills Methodist church, recently suffered a sprained ankle. Mrs. Albright is one of the leading women in the North Georgia conference and was a delegate to the conference recently held at the Wesley Memorial church, this city.

Pageant Pictures of Fifty Years

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

It was a classic in its peerless beauty, grace and appeal!

The thousands who witnessed the pageant pictures of fifty years, 1874-1924, a pageant in song and story of the great World Woman's Christian Temperance union movement, arranged and produced for the Golden Jubilee convention by Pearl Aiken-Smith, dean of women of the school of speech of Northwestern university, faculty and students cooperating, in honor of the university's first dean of women, Frances B. Willard, at the Medinah Temple, Chicago, Ill., on the evening of November 17, were unanimous in declaring that nothing so lovely, so inspiring, had it been their good fortune to see.

Mrs. Rachel Don, fraternal delegate from New Zealand, said: "It was worth the long journey from the other side of the world just to witness the pageant."

Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, Georgia's state president, was hostess to the Georgia delegates at this delightful performance.

Figures in the Pageant.

Miss Anna Adams Gordon, president of the National and World's W. C. T. U., represented those organizations and Northwestern university was represented by President Walter Dill Scott, Dean Mary Ross Potter, Dean Winifred Richardson, Dean Raymond A. Kent, Dean Ralph Dennis and Dean P. C. Lutkin, wearing their caps and gowns and colors indicative of their college degrees. The singing voice was that of Frances Ingram, formerly of the Metropolitan opera, whose mellow, rich tones glorified the songs loved by white ribbons.

The connecting texts were written or compiled by Alice C. D. Riley, while the speaking voice was that of Emma Blaine McKendry. Her appearance and her reading left nothing to be desired.

William H. Barnes, president of Chicago Artists' association, was the organist, and the trumpeters from the Chicago Symphony orchestra were Albert Ulrich, Edward Llewellyn, J. Mascek, P. Nandke.

The splendid chorus was composed of the combined Men's and Women's Glee clubs of Northwestern university.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the Olympic games, period games and frolics of children and the tableaux by the students of school of speech.

Eloise Sterling, whose dignified bearing, blond beauty and titan trusses made an ideal Frances Willard on the stage, while behind the scenes she was stage manager. She was formerly associate director of Pasadena Community playhouse.

Jan Hal Griffe, formerly with the Metropolitan opera, was technical director of the pageant staff.

The glee clubs were directed by Mrs. Myrtle H. Bowman and Rollin Pease, the Olympic games by Mrs. Schultz-Kranz.

W. C. T. U. in Song and Story.

The pageant included a prologue, five episodes, some of which were divided into two or three parts and an epilogue, requiring more than two hours to portray. Each episode opened and closed with a fanfare of trumpets.

In each instance the story was told by the speaking voice, embellished and emphasized by the singing voice and illustrated by the tableaux and the groups of actors.

The prologue began with an organ overture, march of priests ("Athena"), by Mendelssohn, followed by the procession, march from "Athena" when the trumpeters, chorus and representatives of W. C. T. U. and Northwestern university entered.

The chorus, "America, the Beautiful," preceded the introduction by Miss Anna Adams Gordon, W. C. T. U. president, and the response by Walter Dill Scott, president Northwestern university. Fanfare of trumpets, speaking voice, "The How Has Struck." Singing voice: "The Lord Is My Light." Tableau: "World Prohibition, World Purity and World Peace."

The tableau in the first episode was "Mother Thompson Protects Home Against Intemperance, Vice and War." The crusade call was answered by a procession of "Angels of Home-loving, cultured, ballless women" who sang the crusade hymn, "Give to the Winds Thy Fears," and repeated the crusade psalm, the 146. The chorus sang "Rock of Ages," the hymn which these temperance crusaders sang so often that the saloonkeepers called them "the Rock of Ages women." The singing voice was heard in "Jesus, Savior, Pilot Me."

Development of Organization.

"The Development of the Organization" was the subject of the second episode. The Northwestern "Quaqueque Sunt Vera," sung by the chorus to organ accompaniment, died away as Frances B. Willard entered, followed by the Little Cold Water Girl. The tableau presented "The Scholar and the Crusader: the Call to New Service." The speaking voice read "The Gleam" and the singing voice sang "Fulfillment," by John Louis Nelson.

In the third episode, "The Clear Brain in a Strong Body" was read and demonstrated by perfectly trained groups in Olympic games such as foot and chariot racing, vaulting and wrestling.

Legislative Achievements.

In the legislative achievements episode, "My Own United States," was sung and the eighteenth amendment text was read. The tableau depicted "The Eighteenth and Nineteenth Amendments Striking a Balance in the Scales of Justice." The chorus sang "It's in the Constitution and It's There, There to Stay." As the speaking voice called the honor roll of the states young women in flowing white robes bearing over their shoulders the large white satin state banners of the W. C. T. U. in the states white ratified the eighteenth amendment. Chorus, "Salute the Flag," speaking voice, "The Nineteenth Amendment," singing voice, "The Star Spangled Banner."

The World W. C. T. U. with its motto, "For God and Home and Every Land," was depicted by the speaking voice in "World Federation of Women" and the tableau, "The Joining of Nations." The white ribbon Maypole dance, when every ribbon was held by a girl dressed in the costume of one of fifty nations federated in the World's W. C. T. U., a fascinating sight. Chorus, "There Are Bands of Ribbon White."

The Enforcement of Law.

"Integer Vitae" was sung as a chorus, then the speaking voice was heard in "Truth Triumphs Over Error." "Guido Reni's Angel Michael and Fiend Lucifer in Deadly Struggle" was seen in tableau, after which the organ pealed out with "Triumphant."

The Things That Are Gold.

The two parts of the fifth episode and the epilogue dealt with things that are gold, first a golden past, when a golden history of the W. C. T. U. was read, and "All's Right With the World" sung and the tableau was "A Prize of the Golden Past." "The Golden Jubilee" was the subject of the second part. "The Triumph Song" by the chorus ended with a fanfare of trumpets.

"The Golden Tomorrow" of the epilogue showed "A Golden Prophecy" in tableau. The passing of the torch from one white ribbon leader to the other from every state, to light the way to total abstinence, law observance and world prohibition, world purity and world peace was a momentous ceremony. Every glowing torch was lifted as "Hold High the Torch" was read.

At this "Call to the Children" they came again bringing gladness as they scattered white bows on every side. "The Ribbon White" was the chorus. The speaking voice read: "To Be Aims in Such an Age" and the voice sang "My God, My Country and My Flag." "America the Beautiful" was the closing chorus as the procession left the stage and Mrs. McKendry organ filled the immense hall with Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

But this is not the story of Mr. Mercer nor of the university, but of the man who made the money. It is only a glimpse we have of this man from the pen of Mr. Mercer himself.

Mr. Mercer says: "Captain Simons was a man of great wealth and had a peculiar faculty for acquiring money. He had accumulated his fortune by trading, which had surrounded him with all sorts and conditions of men. He took great pleasure in having about him gentlemen of honorable name and worldly pursuits. Mr. Simons lived for many years in the midst of affluence and worldly splendor, and he managed to have about him many distinguished men of the day."

The following were among the private dinner parties: Colonel and Mrs. Fred J. Paxton and their guests, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Conally, Dr. and Mrs. Carter Helm Jones, Mrs. Jerry A. Gumm entertained Dr. and Mrs. Trumble, Mr. and Mrs. John Moss, and Mrs. N. V. Jackson, Colonel William Lawson Peel, Mrs. W. B. Pease, Smith, Mrs. Walter Sims, and Mrs. J. A. Perdue were a congenial party. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Conally entertained a party of friends.

BY ANNIE M. LANE.

This is the story of a wealthy Isidore whose money built and endowed Georgia's oldest denominational college—Mercer university.

Simons' Hill is about seven miles southeast from Washington, Wilkes county, Ga. The old house is still standing on the brow of the hill. Its master's name would have been forgotten, his wealth scattered to the four winds of heaven had he not made a wise and generous will.

Captain Simons left everything, except a few minor legacies, to his "beloved wife, Nancy, to her and her heirs forever. To be used and disposed of as she may think best."

In the course of time his beloved wife, Nancy, thought best to marry the Rev. Jesse Mercer. So it came to pass that the deacons of the wealthy Jew finally found their way into the treasury of Mercer university.

Mr. Mercer outlived Mrs. Nancy Simons, who was his second wife for only a few months. His will is one of the longest and most interesting documents among the records of Wilkes county.

Being a Tale of Rival Wizards of the Stage and of a Strange Spell of Black Magic Cast Over an Unwilling Victim.

IF YOU have a taste for the eccentric and the grotesque, for the deep, mad humor and the perturbing strangeness that may be found in life, you can choose no better observatory than a vaudeville theater. But to discover the fantasies and incredibilities that pitch their tents there and troop away again, week after week, you must become initiated into the craft; you must penetrate into the arcana of the back stage and substage regions. If you merely sit in front of the footlights you can see only a show whose commonplaces often stupefy the imagination, but the stage door, if you have the password, opens into a fabulous country that borders the land of the thousand-and-one-nights and is just this side of the fourth dimension.

You must have the eye to see it, of course—you must be able to tell the difference between a unicorn and a trained pony. If you have that gift, if you know the Lingua Franca of the world's music halls and can listen understandingly to the languages and dialects of the six continents, you will discover many wonders. Let the conventional performers pass—the song and dance teams, the monkeyshine acts, the dramatic sketches, the jazz bands, and all the staple forms of American entertainers. They may be very clever, but they are merely people, much like yourself. Let them pass; their stories are only fables in slang.

But watch out for the creatures that come along from the other side of the looking glass and the valleys of the mountains of the moon. In no place on the shores of the land of romance can you find them so easily and so often; dwarfs and gnomes, South sea princesses, Icelandic giants, water nymphs like the Lorelei, beast-folk who have traded souls with the jungle animals they train, bird-women, snake-women, cat-women, magicians, sorcerers, seers, psychics, and soothsayers. In each there is a gleam of the ancient wonder and amazement that has made all the myths of the world. They are merely tricksters, doing their tricks, of course, if you wish to see them that way; but so was Aaron when his rod, cast down upon the floor of the throne room of old Egypt, turned into a serpent which devoured the lesser snakes conjured up by Pharaoh's necromancers.

All of this brings me to the story told by the stage manager called Ben, who had watched the strange procession of vaudeville for thirty years with never ending gusto for his trade. He would spin tall tales of the odd things that had happened since vaudeville grew up from sawdusted beer halls to plush and marble palaces; would tell them by the hour as he took his few drinks before he went home for the night; but this was the one that he thought most curious. It contained things that his blunt philosophy could not clearly understand. It hung in his memory the more vividly, no doubt, because it broke some of the immutable laws of "this business," which was his one and only phrase for every form of professionalized entertainment from the circus to Shakespeare.

THERE was, to begin with, the Marvelous Marco. Then came the Miraculous Maximillian; and added to these protagonists, to the make the eternal trinity of story-stuff, there was Mme. Miranda. An alliterative group of names, in keeping with the florid traditions of showmanship. I shall have to interpret their history in my own way, for the old stage manager's version of it was told in a vernacular which, when not profane, would be almost unintelligible to the layman. He spoke in a cryptic argot of vaudevillification.

The Marvelous Marco was worthy of his name. He almost lived up to the boastful underlining of his billing, which was "The Man Who Does Everything." He was, in fact, a master trickster, and nothing in the realm of dexterity and stage witchcraft was beyond him. He was best in legerdemain and illusions—the so-called Black Art—and he might have become a successor to Herrmann and Kellar, a star independent of the vaudeville circuits, but for his zeal to be versatile.

He was always changing his act. One season he would devote himself exclusively to subtle coin and card tricks, masterpieces of manipulation, which is the poetry of the Black Art. The next year he would give an exhibition of his skill as a "self-liberator," escaping from handcuffs, shackles, chains, straight jackets, and other unpleasant forms of imprisonment. Then he would return with some fantastic illusion of his invention, full of stage properties, incantations, and mystification, such as the levitation of pretty ladies who floated in the air without visible means of support, and the decapitation of Hindu boys, whose heads promptly grew on again, facing backward. Having thus astonished the natives, he would devote his next tour to sharpshooting, knife throwing, and wire walking. He repeated himself occasionally, of course, but when you consider the highly intensive specialization of most vaudeville entertainers he seemed exceedingly various and mutable.

Marco was indeed marvelous. There was, however, one form of trickery in which he never indulged—he never did a hypnotic act, although such affairs were extremely popular during the period in which he flourished. Marco's modesty on this point was surprising, when you consider what the stage manager had to tell about him.

"A great performer, and never tight when it came time to tip the boys," was that worthy's opinion of him. "But very cagey about his work. Once when I said, 'What you going to hand us next season, Marco?' he comes back at me with 'I'm going to make a camel pass through the eye of a needle.' Them Black Art professors are like that; always trying to be mysterious and highbrow, even among friends."

But no matter how masterly he was in the evocation of bewilderments, Marco could never contrive to look mystifying. In the full evening dress which was the field uniform of his profession he was no more impressive in appearance than a successful business man in a new dress suit. He tried to create a personality that would register across the footlights with fancy costumes, but although his spangles were expensive and well designed they only made him seem like a money-eyed householder unsuccessfully costumed for a masquerade ball; so he gave them up in disgust and went back to the standard clothes. He was a little under the average in height, wide shouldered and thick necked; stocky was the exact word for his figure. He had a broad, sallow, pleasantly homely face, with bright little eyes, and his head bulged with brain at the forehead and above the ears. Nature had endowed him with the skull of a philosopher, but vaudeville audiences are not in the habit of admiring cranial capacity.

"Marco was never much of a riot with the janes," Ben observed with a chuckle. "He couldn't make 'em sit up and say 'Sweet Daddy!'—not with that flat wop pan of his he couldn't. This kind of got his Black Art Angora, and he used to bellyache a bit about the nifty kids who were getting by with nothing but a pair of curly eyelashes. But if he could have done his turn in tights—hot dog! I went with him once when he broke out of the best cell in the county jail, stark naked, in three seconds by the watch, for a press stunt, and he looked like a second Sandow."

The Marvelous Marco flourished for years as a big time headliner. He was a veteran at the height of his power and the peak of his salary, a man of influence in the booking offices and of prestige on the circuits, when the Miraculous Maximilian arose out of nowhere, like a skyrocket, to disturb his peace of mind.

Maximilian was an upstart who had been lucky enough to catch the rising tide of salaries at its flood. He had something new to offer; the public rose furiously to the novelty, and in one season he ran his price per week up to the point that Marco had achieved only after years of struggle. It is natural that experience shall bite its lip bitterly when youth scores too rampant a success; and Marco, besides being human, was one kind of an actor.

THEN there came the little matter of their names: Maximilian had obviously patterned his after Marco's, endeavoring to improve upon the title. His "Miraculous" seemed to condescend to Marco's "Marvelous" in a way that amounted to a professional insult. Marco was perhaps supersensitive on this point, but when Maximilian began to announce his triumphs and his prosperity with flamboyant advertisements in the journals of the vaudeville trade, actually exalting himself above the Marvelous Marco in bold face black-and-white, the cause for offense was patent to the world. Maximilian was plainly stepping on Marco's toes, with much deliberation, and the latter had cause to declare a feud.

So before he ever saw the Miraculous Maximilian, Marco had learned to hate that young man and had brewed in his spleen—an organ which is larger and more active in the theatrical anatomy than in any other variety of the human species—a burning distaste for his name, his works, and his admirers. Whenever Maximilian was mentioned in Marco's presence he spat out the word "Miraculous!" as if ejecting something nauseous; and nobody laughed, because Marco's anger was not to be treated lightly. There was nothing unusual, for vaudeville folk, in Marco's attitude; such cordial detestations for rivals in the craft are a part of the game.

It quickly became known, from New York to San Francisco and back again, in all the theaters, hotels and Pullman cars where the big timers and small timers met and exchanged the gossip of their gypsy life, that old Marco was young Max's chronic foe. The hostility was talked about for almost a full season before the rivals came face to face. It was many months, however, before their trails actually crossed, because there was no chance of two such headliners ever being booked on the same bill. But they locked horns finally, as that old stage manager knew, and with such peculiar results that even Ben, grizzled cynic in the customs and accidents of "this business," was astonished and perplexed.

From a technical point of view the Miraculous Maximilian could hardly be called a competitor of the Marvelous Marco. He was in no sense a follower or imitator of Marco's line of work. He belonged to a different category of tricksters. His act was a variation of the "mind reading" specialty, now so familiar, adroitly conceived and executed. It was a very happy stroke, really a tour de force, of entertainment. Maximilian deserved the credit for its invention, but he was to be praised for an active showman rather than an artist. Mme. Miranda, his partner, was the important figure in the act, although Max got all the publicity and most of the money.

My memory of Maximilian and his Miranda in their twenty minutes of miraculosity is vivid, although I saw them only once. The great velvet curtain which is the ultimate sign of theatrical dignity—it was an opulent purple in color, proudly blazoned with the initials M. M.—parted in majestic folds to stealthy music from the orchestra, revealing a dim, mysterious stage of sumptuous black draperies patterned with occult symbols in silver. There under a library lamp sat Maximilian, looking like a dapper barber posing as a poet, with a mass of damp, frizzy hair and a pale, sweet profile, dressed like a well known club man after dinner. He was thoughtfully reading a weighty tome from a magician's library, leatherbound and ancient. Presently he intoned a sentence or two in this vein:

"Such was the mystic art of soul-speech as practiced by the Chaldean stargazers, the Hindu monastics, Zoroaster, the Persian prophet, and other sages of the east. It is known to modern students of psychical research under the name of telepathy."

Then he closed the book with a solemn thump, clapped his hands together, and called out sharply

"Come forth, my soul-mate! Come forth, Miranda!"

The draperies at the back of the stage parted and there stood Miranda in a lighted niche, as still as a statue in a shrine. Maximilian took her reverently by the hand and led her down to the apron of the stage, where the spotlight blazed strongly upon her.

She was costumed and made up after Trilby in Du Maurier's illustrations—the Trilby of the concert stage, as she sang under Svengali's baton. The long period of Trilby's vogue was not yet over and the audience recognized the portrait immediately. She was tall and slender; her figure had the Du Maurier flow of line; and the likeness was striking. There was one variation of detail, however; her eyes were bandaged.

THEN Maximilian began his talk, crisply and with good effect of elocution. He was about to give the greatest demonstration of telepathy the world had ever known. He would pass among the audience, and Miranda would remain there on the stage. She was tightly blindfolded, and no signals could pass between them. He would ask the ladies and gentlemen in the seats along the aisle or others close by to give him the titles of their favorite songs—to whisper them softly in his ear. Immediately Mme. Miranda, the miracle woman whom you see before you, would sing a few lines from that song, enough to identify it at any rate. Let the song be any one you please, ladies and gentlemen, any ballad, comic number, lullaby, dance tune, national anthem or opera aria, in English, French, German or Italian. If Mme. Miranda cannot sing the exact words she will certainly vocalize the tune, within a few seconds after the wish is expressed. Kindly confirm the fulfillment of your request, by nodding your head. And now then, to begin!

After this brisk rigamarole he scampered down the little flight of steps that had been placed over the orchestra pit and began to consult the musical wishes of the customers. He worked rapidly, bobbing his shaggy head down close to the aisle seats on this and that, calling back to Miranda, "Please sing this lady's song"—"And this gentleman's, now"—"Will you oblige this young man, Miranda?"—and so forth.

Miranda, standing absolutely motionless, without ever a gesture, rigid as an artist's model, would respond at once, in a lovely light soprano, giving the most familiar lines from the songs that had apparently been asked for. Her singing alone made the act worth while. There was great charm in her spontaneous, birdlike carolings, with absolute certainty of pitch and deft transitions from one key to another.

The person who had asked for the song would confirm her accuracy by nodding, there would be a spatter of applause, and then Maximilian would toss her another request. The act went like clockwork, and Miranda never seemed to make a mistake. She apparently had the repertory and the infallibility of a phonograph. Although most of the forty odd requests collected by Maximilian as he passed up on aisle and down the other were for well known popular songs, occasionally some one with a musical education would ask for a cryptic selection from the realm of lofty song, and would get his wish, to great applause.

Code work, of course, I thought, as I confided to Maximilian that I would like the Norwegian national air, and heard it break from Miranda's lips. When he speaks to her, the phrasing that he uses gives her the key to the title. But I marveled at the subtlety of the system of signals and the prodigious musical memory of the performers, particularly that of the woman.

"The first time that Marco ever caught their act," observed the Marvelous One's Boswell, "was right in this here theater. He had played our house the week before and had an open week ahead of him, so he stayed in town. Max followed him in to lead the new bill. So this is where it happened."

Marco, according to the stage manager's rambling narrative, had at first refused to pay Maximilian the compliment of attending his performance. He remained away from the theater for several days, and then, repenting of his sulkiness, changed his mind and asked for a pass to the matinee. Maximilian and Miranda had hardly returned to their dressing rooms that afternoon, after taking their numerous curtain calls, before Marco was back stage and at the stage manager's elbow, looking, the latter testified, like bad news.

"Where does that woman dress?" he demanded.

"You mean Miranda? In Number 6. Want to see her? Well, I'll tell you now, Marco, that egg of a Max don't let her talk with none of the performers. He shoos everybody away from her. Better lay off of her, in here. Max would catch you at it, and, feeling the way you do about him, he'd think you was trying to steal her, and it might end up in a row."

"Very well," Marco agreed glumly. "Not now. Come out to dinner with me, Ben, will you? I want to tell you something."

OVER his steak, in Ben's favorite chop house, an hour later, Marco kept muttering, almost to himself.

"Very strange. Very queer." "Meaning Max's act? The girl's the whole show. But you got to hand it to him for being there with the hokum and the code work."

"That is the strange part of it," Marco replied, with a blank, puzzled look in his eyes. "There is no system of signals or cues. He does not use a code."

The stage manager was incredulous.

"No, I'm in earnest, Ben. There is no code used that act. I ought to know. I can do all the mind reading hanky panky. I know all the codes. I've invented codes of my own, years ago, when Maximilian was picking snipes out of Ghetto gutters. With a girl as clever as this one I could duplicate his act tomorrow. Naturally I watched for his code. I studied his line of talk and his motions closely. He had only six variations of phrase; his inflections were always the same; every move of his body, head and hands was natural. She can't see through that bandage across her eyes; it isn't the right kind. But she picked up forty-three song titles in fifteen minutes, without a stutter. She always rang the bell."

"Maybe he fooled you," the skeptical Ben remarked, but without conviction.

"All right, let's assume that he did, although you don't believe that," Marco continued. "Well, then, what have you got to say to this: I sat on the aisle and Max, who didn't recognize me, gave me a chance to make a request. I asked—it sounds foolish, but I had a reason—I asked for 'Home, Sweet Home.' Now get this: Before Max had said a word to her, before he had even lifted his ear away from my whisper, she piped up with 'Midst pleasures and palaces, though I may roam.' What do you make of that—a coincidence?"

Ben found that the problem was getting knotty.

"Of course, he might have the aisle seats planted," he ruminated, "and have the routine of requests all worked out in advance. But you could have spotted the shills. So could I, and I ain't seen a sign of one around the place. This 'Home, Sweet Home' stuff of yours sounds kind of spooky. But it's a boob request, and bound to come up in any show, and the signal for it may be just what you described—nothing at all. Still, if you ain't kidding me, I'm beginning to get the idea that this bird is as miraculous as he claims to be. He's converted you into an admirer, any way."

Marco gave a bitter little laugh.

"I'll have something more to say about Mr. Maximilian and his miracle in a day or two," he promised grimly.

The next afternoon, just after Maximilian had made his descent into the audience, Marco, always a privileged character backstage, quietly appeared at Ben's post in the first entrance on the prompt side. By professional custom performers are permitted to occupy such points of vantage, where they may see an act or two before or after their own contributions to the bill, but Marco found himself the only observer.

Ben looked up from his schedule sheet, on which he had been noting the time the curtain rose on the Miraculous Maximilian, and gave Marco a mild executive frown.

"No rubbering from the entrances on this act," he said, in the back-stage sotto voce. "That's Max's demand and the house manager's order. Max is as nervous as Eva Tanguay. He says visitors jazz up the mind waves."

ORDINARILY Marco would have respected this pretentious little edict, for he, too, had moods of exclusiveness in his work. But his sense of professional courtesy did not include Maximilian. He answered therefore in the same conspirator's tone:

"Forget it, Ben. She can't see me with that blindfolding over her eyes. I'll keep quiet and move out before he gets back on the stage."

"What you looking for—wires?" Ben hissed. "This is no telephone trick."

"I want to watch the woman, that's all."

"She's a classy looking dame. I don't blame you," quoth Ben.

"Shut up or you'll disturb the vibrations."

Marco remained close in his ambush until he knew, from the sound of Maximilian's voice that the world's greatest exhibition of telepathy was nearing its close, and then he kept faith with Ben and left the entrance.

"Do they come off on this side?" he asked as he withdrew.

"No, the other."

A few minutes later Ben, glancing across the stage, saw Marco maneuvering about so that Maximilian and Miranda would have to brush past him as they went to their dressing rooms. He seemed to contrive to get into Miranda's way, and then to mutter an apology, although ignoring Maximilian, who glared at him. Then he disappeared behind the stage settings and presently returned to Ben's elbow.

"I could not see her eyes," he observed morosely. "She had not removed the bandage."

"She leaves it on until she gets to the dressing room," Ben explained. "Then he takes it off for her."

"He was leading her by the hand, but she seemed to know exactly where she was going. She didn't

Donald MacMillan in the Arctic

By Donald B. MacMillan

Commander of the Bowdoin Expedition and Special Correspondent of The Constitution.

DONALD B. MACMILLAN

This is the third of a series of articles giving dramatic pictures of an explorer's life in the Arctic, written by Dr. MacMillan, who went into the polar regions on the latest of his several trips in June, 1923, on the schooner Bowdoin, carrying radio and going as special correspondent of The Constitution.

HE white man's conception of the "long, dreaded Arctic night" is almost a joke with the native. The long night of the Arctic is as natural to him as the short night of our own land. There is no weeping on the shore, as expressed in a popular book of Arctic travel, when the sun disappears in the fall. Winter is at hand with its clear snappy cold days, its frozen fiords and harbors, its glorious moonlight nights, its glittering stretches leading to fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and sweethearts in snug little villages at the base of towering black cliffs.

The winter is one long delightful holiday, a rest from the active hunting days of spring and summer, a time of visiting and feasting. The best and most successful hunter is the best and most congenial host for his meat bench in the igloo and his meat rack outside are red with the frozen hind legs of polar bears, the flippers of the giant walrus, and the sausage-like bodies of the little ringed seal. A merry company, since all eat heartily with no thought of the morrow, which will easily take care of itself. If food is wanting in this village there is plenty in the next.

But not always are hopes of a full belly realized. The Eskimos have depended too much upon each other with the result that many a January and February finds the larder depleted and finally, with the arrival of hungry visitors, totally empty. The igloos are abandoned; a stone slab is placed against the door; sledges are loaded with sleeping skins and camping equipment, and with the cracking of long rawhide whips these children of the north are away in temperatures of 50 and 60 below zero for Peteravik, the winter rendezvous of the walrus.

With the coming of sledges snow houses go up as if by magic. The stillness of the big hills gives way to the laughter of children; the barren, wind-swept ice foot is alive with the wagging tails of magnificent wolf-like dogs. Jets of steam—condensed warm air—are issuing from the top of every white dome beneath which can be found the family seated among the warm skins of the bed platform singing their primitive songs of thousands of years ago.

Cares and cold and hunger are forgotten when once the native, stripped to the waist, his long black hair in a disordered mass about his bronzed face, with slightly bent body and closed eyes croons and yells and wails to the accompaniment of his oval six-skin drum, his only musical instrument.

Sing they may, but eventually eat they must. Therefore, within a few hours following the arrival we find the Eskimo fashioning his ivory steel-tipped harpoon point, sharpening his killing iron, trimming and softening his rawhide line, for war has been declared against the most formidable antagonist of the Arctic.

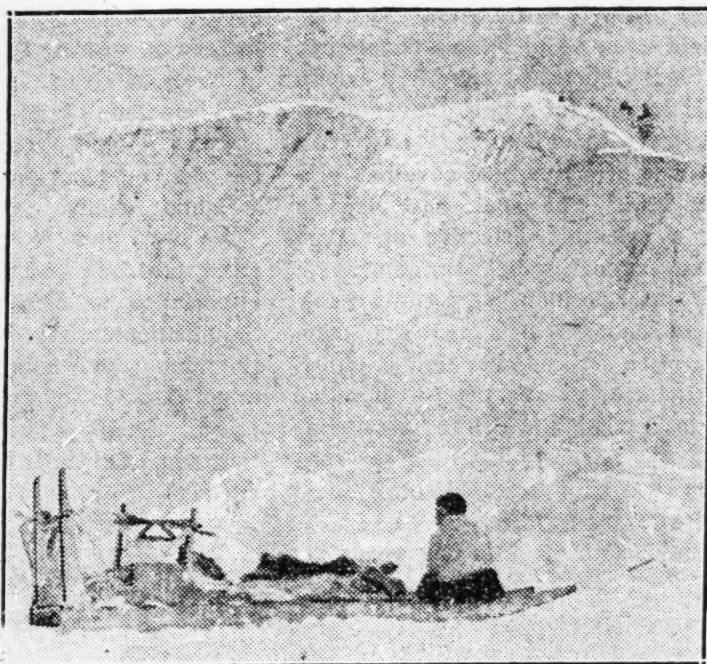

The wife is busily repairing rents in her husband's skin clothing, padding dry grass between the warm hare-skin stocking and the sole of the boot, and drying seal-skin mittens over her soapstone lamp.

With snapping of whips, yelping of dogs and a confused medley of "Ah-chook!" "Howah!" "Huk" and "I," the sledges leap and bound through the rough ice contiguous to the shore and become winding black dots on the white surface of the sea ice. Their objective is far beyond the horizon—the black steaming water of Smith Sound, bitterly cold and yet not too cold for life, which sports and frolics here as do bathers on summer beaches.

Arriving at the edge of the ice, these hardy men, now white with frost, tether their dogs by chipping holes. With harpoon in one hand, killing lance in the other and rawhide coil suspended from the neck, they walk along the edge of the water, scanning its surface closely for a break in its uniform gray blackness. They sometimes walk for miles without sign. If tired they drop and sleep in the shelter of a pressure ridge.

Bound for the hunt. This picture, showing part of a native expedition in camp, illustrates the meager equipment with which the Eskimos undertake long journeys. When they go thus to hunt walrus, they often sleep in the open without even a sleeping bag in a temperature of 60 degrees below zero.—(Copyright by Donald B. MacMillan.)

Truly these are iron men who can sleep in the open without even sleeping bags in the early dawn of the Arctic day.

Up and on with but a bit of frozen meat for sustenance; for mother and the little ones far inshore must be fed.

At last a break in the glassy surface, the appearance of a huge black head with glistening white tusks, a jet of steam and the deep guttural note! This one black spot is soon lost amidst a host of others. The herd has arrived from one of its northern feeding grounds.

With whispered ejaculations of "Ta-koo!" and "Kow I-o!" the Eskimos hurriedly arrange their hunting equipment and squat low at the edge of the ice. With both hands to their mouths to magnify and direct the sound they emit, that peculiar grunting note, the mating call of the walrus. The animals rise head and shoulders out of water. A plunge and a swirl of white water indicate that they are coming toward us rapidly.

The natives continue to emit the sound, knowing that it can be heard distinctly beneath the water. That they are tremendously excited is evi-

The fighter of the far north (at the top). A leader of the herd, now become only a ton or so of food for the natives whose winter stores have run low. dent from every word. They are now as fixed as statues, left foot advanced, weight back upon the right leg, up-raised arm with hand gripping the harpoon, and eyes intent upon the water.

A bursting of the glassy surface followed by a deep exhalation of air, and then the great ugly face and flashing white tusks! Scarcely has the water left the head when a harpoon whizzes through the air, strikes, quivers and disappears in a mighty swirl with the rawhide line fairly buzzing over the edge of the ice. The others hasten to the assistance of the successful harpooner with loud cries.

When harpooning from the ice a good sized loop is always made in the end of the line. Through this loop the native now drives his heavy toque deep into the ice. The toque is a heavy wooden handle six feet long and two inches thick, tipped with iron. Not knowing just where the walrus may be harpooned this instrument serves as a quick fastener for the end of the line.

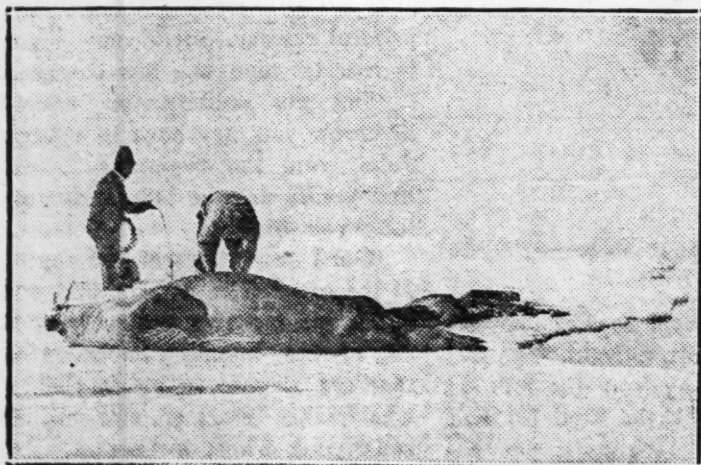

With a twang the line comes tight. It didn't seem possible that any line of that size could ever withstand the strain imposed by that plunging two thousand pounds of red meat. The secret of its strength lies in its elasticity, which does not permit of sudden additional strain.

One Eskimo stands upon the loop to keep its point of bearing well down upon the point of the toque, which is held by a second Eskimo well back from the vertical. One man can and often has done both, playing a giant walrus for an hour or more until the animal is too exhausted to resist.

Under such conditions of attack naturally the animal remains beneath the surface until all air in the lungs is exhausted, when it emerges, breathing deep from its exertions. It dives almost instantly, tugging violently at the line. More frequently now the exhausted animal reappears, eyes red with pain and anger and uttering that indescribable throaty bark of defiance.

Taking advantage of every opportunity, the native shorten up on the line, the walrus becoming less resistant

The Amazing Crime

A Blue Ribbon

THIS is the first installment of a tale of a crime at once terrifying and bizarre. A crime of such magnitude that a world might tremble in the face of its accomplishment. The plot is surprisingly novel with a theme new to fiction. The scene of the story is laid in Washington, but the characters are drawn from the ends of the world. Among them figure a superman, arch fiend and enemy of society's institutions; a reformed international crook and his mysterious pal, a spirited western girl with a love of adventure, and a clever young American of energy and charm.

A Story of Mystery, Supermen, Arch Fiends and Criminals. A Novel That Will Hold You Until The End

INSTALLMENT I.

ON THIS burning day in July, the Poindexters expected the arrival of a guest, a young man named John Olivand, whose errand to Salt Springs was primarily of a business nature.

He was coming as the confidential agent of a very rich and powerful promoter, one Julius Jedburgh. Mr. Poindexter, the leading banker of a wide region, would not have cared to do business with the sort of ruthless if duly accredited financier that Jedburgh was reported to be, but for the fact that the present scheme had been for years a dream of his own.

The Poindexter family was a branch of the old Virginia one, and it is doubtful if John Olivand would have been invited to their home but for the fact that his late father and Mr. Poindexter had been warm friends and college classmates. Also, the Olivands had been distinguished socially from the early history of Manhattan, well connected at every angle, respected, and rich until the crash of John Olivand's father. The young man had become Julius Jedburgh's confidential secretary by a fortunate circumstance that had placed the big promoter in the position of benefactor.

To facilitate the last lap of Olivand's journey and save a change of trains, Shelby Poindexter had driven her runabout twenty miles through the shimmering corn to meet him at the junction. The two had met in Washington when Shelby had visited friends there the winter before.

The immaculate elegance of Olivand's appearance as he crossed the platform to greet her made Shelby feel dusty and almost disheveled, despite the fact that she was a trim girl, very orderly in mind and person, whose friends found her sometimes uncomfortably correct not only in dress, but in deportment.

She had laid aside her romping with her dolls, and although prominent in athletics during her college course at Goucher and very fond of dancing there was a suggestion of pedantry about her. Shelby liked to discuss the arts and sciences, particularly chemistry and physics and economics. But her discourse might have been a little marred to the meticulous scholarly ear by a habit of slang that she was apt to indulge, as if to modify the didactical.

Olivand had not made much impression on Shelby when they had met in Washington against a background that was elegant and distinguished. For one thing his position of private secretary to such a man as Julius Jedburgh had been against him in comparison with diplomats and statesmen and those of high intellectual recognition. Also his lackadaisical manner had antagonized her ardent relish for topics of the hour that were stirringly worth while, and which might even be of a sensational sort.

Shelby cherished secretly a boyish avid craving for exciting adventure—"thrills without blushes," as a critic has said of a late dime novelist's prolific work. She would have liked to be a scientific detective or astute young woman secret service agent if her social position had permitted and, like a schoolboy or a great statesman, she often set aside her serious efforts to indulge her appetite for literature or lurid crime in which the everlasting and (to Shelby) disgusting sex relation was not featured, or if so in chivalresque fashion.

John Olivand had impressed her equaled only by their fear of being overdressed. This gave him a certain distinction as an artist of sorts, just as if he had excelled in growing dahlias of rare tints, or painting them on fans. But it was not enough for Shelby.

She had read the statement of a distinguished author that if a pair of trousers thrown overboard from a passing ship were to wash ashore on an island inhabited only by naked savages, the man who found them and put them on would be king before nightfall. But her analytic mind had perceived that, while this might be true, the finder would not keep on being king unless he were man enough to keep on wearing them, in the faces of covetous rivals. Shelby had also read Napoleon's brief comment: "The Dandies Fought Well at Waterloo." But she could not picture Olivand as a fighting dandy.

He was now to be her family's guest, however, and what was of less importance, he came as the deputy, the plenipotentiary, perhaps, of a big promoter with whom Mr. Poindexter might throw in to very great financial profit. Shelby knew also that her father and Olivand's had been college friends.

The looting of the bank's funds was then conducted in what might at this present day be described as the orthodox or conventional manner.

very slightly, and, as he did most people, that there was not much to him beyond his pleasant, finished manner, uninspiring good looks, and a lean, shapely physique so costumed as to be the envy and despair of young men and some older ones whose ambition to be well dressed was

"You don't seem to feel this terrific heat at all, Mr. Olivand," she said as she drove away from the railroad station and took the road for Salt Springs. "You look as if you enjoyed it."

"Please don't remind me of it, Miss Poindexter, so that I may keep on looking that way. As a matter of fact, this sort of dry, electrifying heat is rather stimulating."

"I've noticed that, sometimes," Shelby said, "but I'd scarcely have hoped that it would strike you that way."

"It does, though. There's a sort of challenge to it, just as there is to intense cold or a gale of wind or any other atmospheric dare. I suppose that some of us Americans of pioneer stock get that. Besides, it must be good for the corn." He glanced out across the shimmering blue green sea through a rift in which they were passing.

"You seem to have seized the spirit of the surroundings," Shelby said.

"More likely it's seized me. I like it. This sort of a dry scorch briskens one after the conservatory heat of Washington. I've had to be there the last fortnight."

"I love Washington," Shelby said. "We might be living there now if papa weren't so lazy. He's been urged time and again to run for senator."

"He could win in a walk," Olivand stated. "Would you like that, Miss Poindexter?"

"Of course, I would. And since our fathers were chums at college and mine speaks of you as 'John,' you may call me 'Shelby,' if you like."

"That is kind of you, and it means an awful lot to the last of a broken family, as in my case. Then you are to call me 'John.' Scarcely anybody does that."

"Do they call you 'Jack?'"

"No, a lot worse. Everybody hails me as 'Olly.' It's all right to do as you like with a given name, but to bob-tail the family one is not very respectful to the whole clan. Rather cheapening, like calling a doctor of medicine 'Doc.'"

Shelby nodded. "Most of us Americans are pretty slack in our speech. I'm slangy without realizing it. We take short cuts in expressing ourselves and then discover suddenly that our conversation is limping along on crutches."

Olivand glanced at her, surprised. In Washington Shelby had impressed him as a girl who was restless while at the same time stilted, intense, but held up in expressing herself by a prideful reserve, Shelby now seemed to read his thought. She laughed.

"I'm not entirely the would-be highbrow you may have thought me, John. And I'm beginning to think that you're not the tailor's dummy I took you for."

"But I never thought you anything of the sort," Olivand protested. "You struck me more as being rather like one of these intensely interested boys that are always trying to find out what makes things go, and why they can't go a whole lot harder. Even driving this car, you're a wondering about that."

Shelby half turned and gave him a brief look in which there was a good deal of astonishment. "I think somebody must have told you about my tastes—John."

"Please don't detract from any perspicuity. Nobody has."

"Well, then, you're quite right about me. It's natural enough. I grew up with four brothers who were always building and experimenting with things. We had a workshop and sort of laboratory on the place. Two or three times it nearly burned us out. One of my brothers is in the bureau of mines—scientific research department—and the other is state chemist. So it's natural I should have a leaning that way. But I must say I'd like something more exciting."

"Such as what?"

"You'd laugh at me."

"Not I. It's no laughing matter when a girl suffers from the pangs of excitement hunger. Don't tell me that you want a political career, to be a power behind the legislature or anything like that."

"No, I want real excitement, not the office sort. You said just now that I was like a boy, and so I am. A boy with his head stuffed full of movies and detective stories. I'd like to be a secret service agent. Isn't that what you'd expect of the daughter of a leading citizen and bank president of a peaceful city in the corn belt?"

"Why, yes," said Olivant. "It is. But why not? Jeanne d'Arc was dreaming over her flocks when she had the vision. The chances are, though, that she was dreaming of just that sort of thing. If she'd been a town girl she wouldn't have been let dream at all."

"I'd like to be one of these scientific sleuths," Shelby confessed; "get my data in the laboratory and then go out and fasten it on the one it would fit. I'm always building up adventures for myself and the silly part of it is that I never in my whole life had anything happen that could possibly be called an adventure."

"A perfectly good reason for your craving," Olivant said.

There came at this moment the thrumming roar of an exhaust from the air above and behind them. A moment later there swam within their arc of vision from under the hood, an airplane at no great height. It passed ahead in a zoom, then began for some reason best known to its pilot to emit fumes in what seemed to be a clumsy effort to write some message in the sky, which was a clear and glittering blue. But for one thing these fumes appeared to lack substance and were too light in tone, a sort of a burnt orange; and for another, the pilot seemed to lack skill or confidence or experienced control of his plane. Olivant watched his fu-two people and about an acre of corn. Nobody much hurt."

"Bad carbureting," Olivant said. "Extreme dryness and low barometer. I once heard Mr. Jedburgh say that up on the high mesas in Peru they have to use special Shelby looked at him surprised; then smiled.

"I know what you think," Olivant said, "that I am the typical modern of the effete east. But I'm only that by necessity."

"Have you ever tried to get away from it?" Shelby asked.

"No. Because it seemed to sneak up and mold me unawares. Besides there's always a sort of nervous excitement about living in a big city."

"What was your service in the war?"

"I was a sort of diplomatic buffer. We called it liaison officer. The polius called it embusque, which meant 'hider-out.' He did not add that a good deal of his hiding out had been a perfectly legitimate cover of bombproofs on what the polius also called the 'front of the front.'"

Shelby could not see him at all in any heroic capacity. The impression that he gave her was that of the highest distillation of American ease, idleness and triviality. She did not know anything about the great Jedburgh, but she thought it most likely that the use he found for Olivant would be similar to that of the young man's war service; a sort of polished deputy who had the entree everywhere and could discharge a mission gracefully, smooth the way, grease the skids, approach important people pleasantly, always ready with the soft answer that turneth away wrath—a business buffer. Olivant was pleasing to her because of a certain likeable quality and the utter absence of anything to dislike about him, more negative than positive. A girl of less wealth and family and advantages might have been fascinated by him, but to Shelby he was more than a symbol representing a certain type and hardly a man at all—a sort of swell super-cakie, but an agreeable one.

They entered the little city rather abruptly, because, like many such, it jumped off from town to country, from neat prosperous detached dwellings into farm land. It was then the dinner hour that is to say between half-past 12 and 1.

"We'll go past the bank and pick up papa," Shelby said, and it seemed to Olivant that she spoke a little breathlessly as if excited for some reason that was not apparent. The scorching heat seemed suddenly to have increased, perhaps because of their moderated pace and the radiation from concrete that a Central African porter could scarcely have trod upon.

And yet, as Olivant had already observed, there seemed a curious exhilaration to it of a kind not disagreeable.

tile maneuvers with surprise and contempt.

"Has that chap gone crazy with the heat? For one thing, he's nothing like high enough for sky-writing, and for another his ink is too pale. What does he think he's up to anyway?"

"Perhaps he's come out here to practice where there aren't many to laugh at him."

The low flying plane bucketed off on its course and disappeared. A little later it struck Olivant that Shelby's costly car was not behaving up to grade. Its firing became weak and uneven. The girl commented on it.

"This dry furnace heat and low barometer may not interfere with humans," she said, "but it seems to with gas engines. Knocks the firing silly. We had a day like this last week. The cars all lay down and three planes carburetors." He looked ahead in the direction taken by the clumsily maneuvering airplane. "That may be the reason why this chap couldn't seem to do his stunt, and it might need a certain amount of humidity to make his writing in the sky distinct. Pity we can't have one element left unpolluted. Seems as if the moment man made a conquest of anything he starts in to mess it up."

"Some day," Shelby said, "the air will be all littered up with these things. We'll have to stop, look and listen not only on both sides but overhead."

"Progress has its drawbacks," Olivant said. "I often think that I would rather have lived a hundred years ago. Except at certain rare moments, such as this, I hate most modern inventions."

Mystery of Thibet

HE Tashi Lama, most learned and most revered of Thibet's great religious teachers and prophets, has mysteriously vanished. Nobody knows where he has gone. Nothing has been seen of him since that night six months ago when he disappeared from the Tashi Lamasery under such dramatic circumstances.

Not only Thibet but the whole Orient is stirred by the mystery of Lama's dropping from human sight and by thoughts of the wonderful events it is believed to foreshadow. His thousands of faithful followers have no doubt of his eventual return, but when that will occur they cannot say.

They believe, however, that when the Lama does emerge from his retirement and takes his place again in the Lamasery they will not have long to wait for the advent of the "King of the World," that all-powerful ruler to whose coming the believers in Buddhism and other Oriental religions have for centuries looked forward.

The night of the Tashi Lama's disappearance he gathered his leading disciples about him at the supper table. As they broke bread together he surprised them with the announcement that he was about to retire from the world. It was necessary, he said, for him to cut himself entirely off from human intercourse in order to work out a "Great Message" for the uplifting of humanity.

"But, Master," his disciples pressed him, "where will you go? How long will you be absent from us?"

"That I may not tell," was his reply.

The supper finished, he blessed his companions, kissed them each in turn and started out of the Lamasery. As he stepped across the threshold a huge statue of Buddha that had stood there for hundreds of years split into two parts as if cleft by a thunderbolt and fell crashing to the floor.

The Lama paused and looked back at his disciples, standing awestruck around the supper table. "It is a sign from heaven," he said, "that this is the appointed time of my going." And, with a farewell wave of his hand, he walked quickly out into the night.

From the doorway through which he had passed his disciples saw him spring to the back of a great snow-white horse that had mysteriously appeared in the courtyard a moment before. With a wave of his yellow hat he galloped through the gateway.

As to which direction he took the watching disciples have no idea, although it was a moonlit night, almost as bright as day. Horse and rider seemed to dissolve into thin air, they declare, the instant they had left the outer wall of the Lamasery behind.

FROM that moment to this they have seen nothing of the Tashi Lama. But some of the mystics who devote their lives to the pondering of holy mysteries in the Lamasery are positive that they see now and then rushing through the air at night the great white horse on which the master rode away. But the saddle is empty except for a sacred fire whose flame streams out in the steed's wake like the tail of a comet.

These accounts of the Tashi Lama's disappearance and the great expectations which it has aroused in his followers are brought direct from Thibet by Professor Nicholas Roerich, the distinguished Russian painter and archaeologist, who has been spending a year there and who recently arrived in the United States for a brief visit.

No other man of the world outside Thibet knows that strange land better or has probed more deeply into the mysteries of its life and religion than Professor Roerich. He is an enthusiastic student of Thibetan mysticism and finds in it the theme for his most remarkable paintings.

When he landed in New York the other day he brought with him sixty new canvases, all dealing with phases of life and thought in mysterious Thibet. These have been added to the extensive collection of similar works that was thrown open to the public some time ago in the Boerich museum at No. 310 Riverside drive, New York.

"The world is entering a new cycle," says Professor Roerich, "a cycle of spiritual culture. The initiative for that cycle comes from the east. The Occident with its cult of externalism is bankrupt. The east with its three newer cults—the cult of the Mother of the World, the cult of the Love of the World, and the cult of the King of the World—is beginning to cast a new and blessed radiance on humanity.

"Great events are pending—just as stupendous perhaps as the appearance of a Lao-Tse, or a Buddha ages ago. I heard of those events in Thibet and I was also asked to bring tidings of them to the western world.

"The east is the cradle of all our religious sentiment and spiritual aspiration. It has devoted itself to metaphysics while the Occident concentrated on physics. Our physical evolution brought us to the world war, and it is only the metaphysical initiative of the east that can save us from an ultimate catastrophe."

The vanished Tashi Lama, according to Professor Roerich, is far and away the greatest of Thibet's religious teachers and leaders. Besides being a profound scholar and a master of the intricate mysteries of Buddhism, he is a man of wonderfully magnetic personality. Within the last ten years he has gathered such a following that the old Lamasery is no longer large enough to hold all his disciples.

His followers impute to him strange, supernatural powers. Thousands make long pilgrimages to receive the touch of his hand and to have, as they believe, their physical ills instantly relieved. He is thought to be able to overcome the force of gravitation by his will power and to do many other things which science declares impossible.

The philosophy of life which the Tashi Lama teaches is one that lays emphasis on the mental powers of man and aims to bring them to a high state of perfection.

"The Master left the Lamasery without any preparations for a long absence," one of his disciples told Professor Roerich. "Who brought him the snow-white horse on which he rode away? How did horse and rider disappear from our view so miraculously? We do not know. We have made every effort to learn where the Tashi Lama is, but to no avail."

What will happen when the Tashi Lama emerges from his long seclusion? What is the message he is preparing for the world? The greatest minds of Thibet and other eastern countries are pondering these questions, and many different answers are being suggested.

"King of the World"*

A curious religious ceremony in Thibet in which the Lamas masquerade as animals with terrifying devil's heads in order to frighten away the evil spirits

Professor Roerich, a portrait by his son.

A Thibetan Lama performing his devotion with aid of a mechanical prayer wheel merely enjoying a long respite from the cares of leadership in one of the lonely mountain temples described so interestingly by Kozloff in the account of his travels in Thibet. But most of his disciples think he has gone to Shambalin, the mysterious land which figures so prominently in the Chinese and Hindoo legends.

Wherever he is, there is no doubt that he is alive and well. This is proved by the brief messages of greeting that are brought periodically to the Lamasery by carrier pigeons. The birds usually arrive in the early morning and come from the north.

According to Professor Roerich, the leading minds of the east have abandoned the hopes they had based on the Occidental civilization. They think that all the east has got from the Occident are dachins and militarism, revolution and hatred. They maintain that the civilization of the western world is all external and material. The great industrial and scientific achievement of the Occident now seem to the eastern minds nothing but the means for more economic power. We build and invent, they think, for no other purpose than to make more money.

"The money power and industrial progress should not be the ultimate aim of a great civilization," argue the disciples of the Tashi Lama. "The Occidental ideal has been for the past century a rule of the world by means of economic power and political might—militarism and money. Now the west hopes for a solution of the world's problems in legislation and international economic co-operation. But it is all an external aspect of life which leaves the soul of man as it was thousands of years ago.

"The west has attempted to rule the world by external, physical power. The time has come for the east to make an attempt to rule the world by spiritual power—metaphysics."

Professor Roerich visited in Thibet the ruins of an old temple where Lao-Tse studied astrology, and he heard of another Lamasery where the actual handwriting of Christ is said to be preserved. There are numerous temples in the mountains where Buddha lived and taught while alive. Thibet is a land teeming with ancient mysteries and this is why the followers of the Tashi Lama think it so well fitted to be the first to welcome the expected "King of the World."

THAT Thibet is a land that produces a quite unique mental state is a fact that has been noted by many psychologists. Professor von Schroeder, who spent several years studying occult science in various Thibetan Lamaseries and temples, says:

"An average altitude of some 15,000 feet above sea level, as is the case with this roof of the world, has naturally a great bearing upon man's psychic functions. The unusually low pressure of the atmosphere, the weird rhythmic lines of the mountains and vegetation, the great radio-activity of the water, and the magnetic irregularities of the air, change all living beings from what we have been accustomed to know as normal, to an abnormal state. The mind works here very clearly and one does not need here more sleep than a few hours a day. The intellectual side of life seems more important than the physiological, and one sees visions and strange phenomena almost in a plain sunlight. What seems magic and miraculous on our plane of life seems reality in Thibet."

Professor Roerich's long experience in Thibet has given him similar ideas.

"A traveler in Thibet finds himself in a different world," he says. "People there live more by intuition and telepathy than reason and senses. I recall one marvelous phenomenon that I have never been able to explain.

"While on my way with my family from Dargiili to a Lamasery we saw a young Lama being carried by coolies. When we came close to him he bowed to us, and we in response greeted him in the Oriental manner. He was dressed in brilliant robes of crimson and yellow silk, embroidered with pearls, and on his head was the crown the superior of a Lamasery wears during the most solemn religious service.

"When, after some five hours of journey, we arrived at the Lamasery, we asked about the unusually dressed young Lama we met on the way. To our great astonishment the Lamas told us that there never was such a fantastically dressed young Lama, and that what we had seen was nothing but a vision!

"Another strange experience was our visit to a Lamasery where we saw a wonderful Buddha statue, made of ivory, which my wife was anxious to purchase. But having been told on many occasions that nothing can be

Enemies of the Lama, of whom there are still many, insist that he is

LD Dave's neck's mighty stiff, isn't it, Jane? That's his notion of the way to bow to a lady. He don't even know it don't look polite. Dave might seem rude, if you didn't know him, but he ain't. According to his lights, he's as polite a man as I ever knew."

The defense irritated Jane's disappointment. It would not have cost David MacIvor much in time or effort to ride around by the blot of shadow where she waited. His avoidance seemed to shame her in Sheppard Gail's sight, so that Gail could see in it a slight upon her, and apologize for MacIvor with a profit to himself from the contrast.

"I suppose he's very busy," she said quietly. "We'd better not interrupt him. We're only in the way. Let's go on, shall we?"

He shrugged and sprang lightly back to his saddle. As they rode away she felt a change in his humor; his spirits had lifted visibly and he was gay again, as he had been in the days of their first rides together. For herself, she was silent, harboring a persistent self-pity, touched faintly with resentment. MacIvor disliked her, distrusted her, probably despised her as he despised her husband and his kind. He made it needlessly plain, not only to her, but to Sheppard Gail. It was as if he had been at deliberate pains to rebuff a friendly advance; she remembered that she had meant to put him on guard against Rufe Breck, and the thought aggravated her sense of injury.

"I reckon you're sort of mad at Dave, the way he acted just now," Gail turned in his saddle to face her. "You don't want to pay any attention to that, Jane. When you've known him as long as I have, you'll understand that it's only his way."

The repetition annoyed her. "You needn't bother to defend him to me, Sheppard," she said quietly. "I think I know him very much better than you do or ever will, and I'm not likely to take offense at anything he does or doesn't do. Nobody can have any doubt where he stands; it isn't necessary to guess at him through his manners."

"One for me, eh?" he chuckled. "I reckon I got more manners than I rightly need, the way it looks to you. But you're right about old Dave, all the same. It looks like you did know him mighty well."

The tone was jocular, almost in the flippancy of Gail's old manner, and his laugh as careless, light hearted, but a shadow fell across Jane's mind as he rode on, a thin snatch of song floating back to her. The woods seemed to close in about her, stealthy and sinister. She was afraid of something which she could not name, and the gulf that separated her from the man whom she had married seemed to deepen and grow wider. She felt that she would never know him as she already knew MacIvor, always there would be that troubling doubt between the surface she could see and the man who wore it like a mask. For the second time since she had known him she was afraid of Sheppard Gail.

She tried to ridicule herself for the thought, as they rode on together, and he talked in his old key. Whatever he lacked, he was not a formidable figure; he might inspire pity, dislike, amusement, even love, perhaps, but never fear. He wasn't positive enough to be dangerous, certainly not to her, even if she read him wrongly as to others. Whatever else she might not know about her husband, she would always be unshakably certain that he loved her. And she conceded him, impersonally and even with reluctance, a kind of admiration for the manner in which, without protestations and entreaties, he could make her so steadfastly sure of this.

She was not wholly immune to the softening influence of this conviction. The spectacle of his devotion lessened, by a little, her intuitive distrust of him, and MacIvor's rudeness had the effect of increasing her consciousness of this reaction in herself. Her normal common sense ridiculed her intuitions; she was deliberately complicating her problem, she told herself. Accident had done its best to simplify life for her; after all, she was married to this man. The rational course was to put away this romantic folly which imagined sentiment in connection with that dour, stern farmer who had bowed to her as if it hurt him; to accept the more congenial existence which was hers for the taking.

But even so much effort to convince herself seemed to defeat its own purpose. She discovered, as Gail's shoulder touched hers in a chance encounter of their horses, that something in her recoiled from the contact. His laughter sounded hollow, forced, she looked for hidden meanings in his drawing speech. And she thought, again, of David MacIvor, not angrily, but with wistfulness, the self-pity, she thought, of a child whose well meant advance has been rebuffed.

By the time they reached the house she was silent, deep in her conflicting meditations, glad of the chance to escape Gail's light chatter for a space. And, when, in the early afternoon, she saw him ride away on the Tyre road, she was aware of a sense of release, as if something like surveillance had been interrupted and left her free. In the cool of the dusk her restlessness returned, and she ordered her mare saddled again and rode out alone, taking the road that led down to the station without conscious thought of direction. She had almost reached the crest above the string of slatternly shanties when MacIvor's big white horse rode above the skyline and stopped for a moment, silhouetted against a low cloud. She remembered MacIvor's trick of stopping whenever he reached the top of the ridge to give his horse a breathing space. This evening the act seemed to acquire a special significance; she knew MacIvor must be driven, pressed by multiplying demands on his strength and time, but he could still spare his beast. She came toward him with a reviving glow of approval.

"I'm glad I happened to find you, David. I wanted to tell you something—but you were so busy this morning that I didn't dare interrupt."

He bowed stiffly, his mouth tight and his eyes hard. The look was like a surly answer, but she gave it no heed.

"Rufus Breck's come back," she went on, her voice lowered a little. "I only heard it today, but I thought you ought to know."

He nodded. "I am obliged to you for the kindly thought, but it does not matter. I am too pressed just now to spare time for Rufus Breck. He can wait until I've finished with my peaches."

"That wasn't what I meant. He—he may try to kill you again, David. He wouldn't be likely to forget—"

MacIvor laughed harshly. "You are in the right, there. But he has not forgotten that I can break him in my hands if the need comes. He will not trouble me until I give him fresh cause to be afraid. By his code the account is balanced as things stand."

"I don't think so, David. I think he hates you enough to do anything he can—I'm afraid he'll—"

"You need not be disturbed on my account, Mrs. Gail. It will need more than Rufus Breck to stop me now. But I am grateful for your good intent in warning me."

The horse seemed to understand the inflection of his voice as ending the talk. The great beast moved forward, and Jane, resisting an angry impulse to ride on, turned, too, and held her place at the man's side. He did not seem aware of her presence, he held his face straight to the front, and she could see the flexed muscles about his jaws, as if he held some strong emotion between his teeth. The thought came to her that this man really hated her, as he hated her husband, that her company cost him now a sore strain on the self-repression which was his notion of good manners.

"Perhaps you'd rather I rode back alone, David." The speech escaped her against her will. She was ashamed of the tone and word the moment they reached her ear.

"Since you ask it, I will tell you plainly that I would," he said, still without looking at her. "You will find it strange, perhaps, that I should not wish to ride with my neighbor's wife. I have heard that such things are ordered differently in your country. Here we are simple folk, and have little wisdom beyond the knowledge that it is well to avoid the appearance of evil."

THE words stung her like the lash of a whip. She twisted her mare about and touched the beast's flank with a blunt spur. When she drew rein and glanced back, the man and his horse had vanished beyond a bend. She waited, in a glow of angry shame, until she was sure that MacIvor would have reached the fork in the roads, where his own path branched away from hers. Then, keeping the impatient mare to a walk, she followed. By the time she reached home, she had her resentment under control, but no more. She told herself, as she changed, that she had learned her lesson at last.

And she was so responsive, at the candle-lighted table, to Sheppard Gail's talk, that she saw his eyes lighten and felt a change in the timbre of his voice.

"Jane, you sound like you might get over hating me some time. I—"

For an instant she felt the man's appeal. All kind of angry self-contempt rose in her; here, after all, was romance. This man loved her with something better than mere intellect. Under a hard test he had proved himself; she was a fool to let an absurd illusion of sentiment stand between them, to imagine that she cared for—

He seemed to read her glance. He moved toward her, his eyes shining, his hands lifted a little, eager and yet pleading. She almost cried out at the reality of the picture that seemed to lift before her; it was as if David MacIvor, straight and still on his old white horse, had ridden between them and was watching her with those hard unwavering eyes that made her think of lake ice.

"No!" she cried. "Don't, Sheppard! I—"

He stopped and his hands dropped gently to his sides, his whole body relaxing and drooping to his wonted ease of carriage. His face changed, too, the familiar half mocking grin replacing that rapt look that had almost transfigured him.

As she met his eyes they seemed to mask his thoughts again, after that instant of revelation. And a thrill of fear went through her at the crazy thought that he, too, had seen that intervening vision of MacIvor.

Against her will the thought of the harvest drew Jane Gail again to MacIvor's orchards, and the fascination of the scene held her there in the face of a new fear of meeting the man himself. She felt as if she watched the climactic moment of some inexorable melodrama, as if, under her eyes, the patient toil of years swept up to a sudden, crashing culmination. The feeling seemed to her thought to affect even the groups of negroes among the trees; they sang and called to one another as they worked, but they moved with a strange, new swiftness,

Continued Story

By Hugh MacNair Kahler and Donald G. Herring

and there was a touch of something like excitement in their voices. The imported packers, in the shadows of the wide, flat roofed sheds, dealt with the converging streams of fruit as if by some trick of magic; their fingers seemed uncannily intelligent and alert as they graded and packed. There was a thrill even in the sight of the loaded carts, creaking away through the loose sand to the railroad, and now and then Jane followed these, to look on while a car was filled and iced.

Here, for the first time, she seemed to confront the phenomenon of prosperity in process, to see the beginnings of that future which MacIvor had foretold. The little village was still indolent and passive, except for the sweating, shouting roustabouts who loaded the car. There were still idlers napping in the shadow of the station wall, lean, languid hounds drowsing under the platform, sunburned, slit-eyed white men lounging and drawling and spitting in the background, but Jane Gail felt a new quality in the familiar scene. Beyond this barely diluted sleepiness she seemed to foresee a near day when, instead of a few cars, these sidings would load long trains when, instead of a trickle of fruit in one direction and of money in the other, there would be broad streams of both, when even the apathetic, squinting onlookers at the store would respond to some infection of envy and emulation.

She had been afraid, at first, of trying encounters with MacIvor, but she found it easy to avoid him, and guessed that he was well pleased to let her presence go unnoticed when he could. Her anger toward him had dimmed; she could make excuses for him, now, could tell herself that what had seemed a wilful affront was no more than this man's manner, could even admire the forthrightness with which he had spoken. Somehow, she felt, there was a kind of courage in that utter frankness, a courage of which most men would have been incapable; she seemed to understand that much of what passes for courtesy among people who call themselves polite, is no more than a canny willingness to avoid trouble, a sort of blend of indolence and cowardice. But she was careful to keep out of MacIvor's way, nevertheless.

She had no speech with him while the early fruit was harvested. There was a brief interval before the later varieties ripened, and she stayed away from the orchard for a day or two, riding alone, or with her husband, in other directions. Gail's manner was again what it had been when she had first come back to him, carefully careless, she told herself, gay with a sort of resolution. He said nothing of MacIvor on these rides, and she fancied that his silence was significant, although she could not guess its meaning. There were even moments when she thought that her queer fancy had been sound, that Gail, too, had seen what came between them that evening when his hands had all but closed on hers.

But she was only vaguely disturbed by this reflection. Even the thought of Rufus Breck, skulking in the pines again, seemed to have lost the power to frighten her; MacIvor, she felt, was in no danger at his hands. And, in a strange, unreasoning way, she was almost happy.

SHE had ridden out alone in the early evening, taking, by the mare's whim, the lane that led down to the station road. The sun had already dipped beyond the straggling pinces of the rim; a friendly, gentle coolness settled slowly like a shadow; she could feel a response in herself to the kindness of the hour, to the light breeze that was like a loving touch on her cheeks. And as she neared the fork of the roads she heard a slow, marching song and drew rein to listen.

The air was remotely familiar; she could not distinguish words, but she knew that she had heard the song, somewhere, long ago, and her mind fumbled for the association. It was something to do with old Meggie and the nursery in the lonesome house before she had gone to live with Warren Borden. Suddenly she laughed.

"Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled!" Even old Meggie had looked and sounded militant as she chanted it, Jane remembered. She let the mare move forward and reached the forks just as David MacIvor finished the verse. She had heard him sing, sometimes, at the little church, but never in a voice that she could have recognized as this. He stopped as he saw her, and she could have laughed at the sheepishness of his look, as if she had come upon him in some childish act.

"You'll think I'm daft," he said. "But I was in the mood and I thought there was none near enough to hear."

The tone warmed her. For once he seemed to have forgotten that she was his enemy. The voice took her into his confidence.

"You've had good news of your crop then?" She guessed instantly what had exhilarated him to the pitch of that anthem. He nodded.

"Two-eighty a crate for Mayflowers! The thing's scarce to be believed!"

"I knew you'd win, David!" Under the excitement of the news she forgot everything except her share in triumph. She laid her hand lightly on his bridle wrist, and the touch seemed to waken him with a start. He straightened, stiffened, and moved his arm so that her hand dropped.

"I'm obliged to you, Mrs. Gail." The voice hurt her with the effect of a blow.

"O, David, why have you got to hate me so?"

"You can see the necessity, at all events." His tone did not lighten. "If I could hate you as I ought—"

She caught at the phrase. "You mean that you don't—that you're just trying—"

"O, why must you have me say it? Is it not enough that this sin should have me by the throat—that my eye offends me and that I cannot pluck it out? Must I even sin in word as I sin in thought?"

She heard herself laughing softly; saw her hands clinging to his rigid arm.

"Sin, David? Must you think of it as sin?"

"What is it less?" The words seemed to be torn from him. "Can I covet my neighbor's wife and do no wrong? Sin and folly—and you must minister to your vanity by hearing it in speech! Can you not be content with what you have done to me, made of me, without the telling of it?"

Slowly the words carried understanding to Jane Gail. She saw herself as this man saw her; saw how he must regard the thought of love between them.

"You do hate me, then. You think it must be folly as well as sin to—to want me!"

"What else?" He spoke savagely.

"What have I to do with you? If you were as free as I what would it be but folly? You play with man's love and men's lives like a child with toys! You pluck a man's love for a nosegay and wear it for a day! Do you think me so blind that this is hidden from me, fool as I am? First it is Gail and then me, and then, on impulse and whim, you marry him, and again, on a whim you come back to me, only on another whim to go again to him. And now, living with him, you must still tempt me with pretty words and little tricks of touch!"

He twisted his arm from her hands. "You see? I have no scales upon my eyes! I know you for what you are! And yet, in wickedness and folly, I—"

"You care!" She marveled at herself that there should be no anger in her, but only a great glow of pride and joy, a sense of power such as she had never known. "You care, David! And I never dreamed—I never hoped—"

"I will not say the word!" He set his teeth. "You shall not carry me so far, do what you will. I will not say it!"

"It doesn't matter, since I know." She could even laugh softly again. "You must call it wicked, if you see it so, but you shall not think of it as folly, for it isn't that, David! It isn't! I thought I cared for Sheppard, but I never did! I knew that truth the moment I saw him for what he was—and I came back because there was no other sanctuary. And then—"

"And then, when he had beaten me, you went over to his side! You did but your duty, to be sure, but not because it was your duty, but your pleasure. Duty has no meaning for such as you! It is a word!"

"I went back to him because it was the price of your timber and the dreams you clung to still," she cut in evenly. "If I had not gone he would have built the courthouse and the roads and ruined you! I found out the mischief I had done you, without knowing what I did! If I had never come back to Miss Ailie's house you would have carried that election! They voted against you, those Scotch farmers, because of me! And I did not know until it was too late! And he might have killed you and gone free if I stayed. I saw that, too. And I went back to him—on my own terms, David. If it was duty, then duty and pleasure were one, for once, for I was glad to pay you back a little of my debt."

HE sat very still. "I must be asking pardon for my thoughts, then. You are no wanton woman. But here is an ill matter made far worse. There have been whiles when I could almost have despised you, thinking what I thought. But now—" he shook his head slowly—"now I can never think that again, and it will be hard."

"You want to—think evil of me?" "It would be better to think evil of Sheppard Gail's wife than to—"

"I'm not his wife, David. I live in his house as I lived in yours! You must know that and believe me. I could not have gone back, else I save his pride by living there, and he is a proud man, whatever else he may be."

"It does not matter." He spoke grimly. But she felt in the tone a throb of triumph that was all unlike the man she knew. "You are joined to him in the sight of God and men—"

"I knew that you would see it so," she interrupted. "Of course, I don't. Even my church would dissolve this marriage, and the law—"

"We have learned to play fast and loose with God and with our statutes, but we do not escape. You are Gail's wife, and in your heart you know it."

"I don't! I've never known it! I can't believe that God, even your God, who will forgive a wilful sin, will not forgive a mistake in which there was no sin, but only ignorance and impulse. I did no wrong when I married Sheppard Gail. And you would have me punished as I would not be punished for a crime! There is no sense of justice or truth in such a doctrine, David!"

He shook his head. "It is a good argument, but no more than that. You know that between you and me there is no room for even friendship now."

"I don't know it," she cried. "I won't know it! I won't believe that love is wrong! I won't believe that God's so pitiless."

"And He is not. There you speak truth at last. But here is a tangled weaving that no hand but His own can order. No man's, at least! Let not man put asunder! That much is clear."

She felt the inexorable finality in his voice, knew that no word of hers would move that unshakable conviction. And a kind of peace came to (Continued on Page 12.)

SANDHILLS

her, an acquiescence that was almost consent. She could even be glad that he stood firm and fast on his beliefs, a man like a rock, among men who drifted like tumble weeds before the winds of light desire or small advantage. There was pride to her, a pride that laughed at the petty rebukes of thin convention; she was even proud that she had spoken; proud of her surrender, prouder than all else of the knowledge that this man loved her in the teeth of his will and his beliefs.

"It doesn't matter." She heard her voice as if some one else had spoken, and wondered at herself for the conviction that the words carried. The law that must stand between them always became a trivial, minor thing; like time and distance, that might intervene but could not separate.

"Does it not?" He laughed a short, harsh sound. "There might be two words to that. But it holds fast. And it will hold."

Afterwards, remembering that it was his horse that moved forward, she could even smile at the dogged consistency of him. And he left her, at the fork of the roads, without a word of farewell or a single backward glance. She watched him till the shadows closed in about him and then, marveling at herself, she rode home to supper with Sheppard Gail's eyes watching her in the candlelight, unwontedly alert and intent. He was so silent during the meal that she wondered uneasily if he could feel, by some trick of telepathy, the rush and confusion of her thoughts.

She was glad that some unexplained errand took him away soon afterward and left her alone with her knowledge.

Adam Gail, dusty from his ride up from the railroad, found Jane at her late breakfast with Sheppard Gail, and told his news in a tone even more morose than his dismal habit.

"I guess it's all over with the railroad now, Shep. If we don't get to carry them peaches for Dave MacIvor we'll get junked, sure. And I was countin' on two cars from him today. You got to do somethin', this time, if you aim to keep the road runnin'—I'm plumb sick of this here moonshinin', bootleggin' funny business, Shep."

"So's everybody, I guess," Sheppard Gail cut in evenly. "But I don't see why it's worrying you so that you've got to spoil my breakfast, Ad. What's wrong now? Some of your hands drunk."

"I wish't they was! I'd drown 'em in the water tank! It ain't as easy as that, Shep. Somebody's taken an' spread liquor all around, yest'd'y evenin'—ain't hardly a sober negro in the township. All them pickers 't works for Dave MacIvor is sleepin' it off, an' them packers he fetched up from Georgia got fightin'—two of 'em is right wore down, they tell me. Reckon it means two-three cars 't won't get shipped. And if it keeps up—"

JANE'S glance moved quickly to her husband's face. She half expected to surprise a look of satisfaction there, and it pleased her, against her will, to find him grimly angry.

"So that's it, eh? Rufe Breck's getting square with Dave MacIvor by feeding liquor to his labor, right in picking time! I might have figured he'd do that! You're plumb right, Ad—it's got to stop sudden—right where it is! You ride on over to Tyre and tell Harley to fetch a couple of deputies back with him. We'll go get Rufe today, or know why. Still running's one thing and blockading to negroes is something right different. You tell Harley I mean business, Ad."

Adam Gail's gloom seemed to lighten a little, but he did not move. "You mean it, Shep? You ain't funnin' with me?"

"Do I sound like I'm funning, Ad? You get on over to Tyre and tell Harley what I said. This is where Rufe Breck gets off for keeps. Reckon we been too easy on him, but that's finished. You go get Harley. I'll tend to the rest of it."

His cousin's frown smoothed to something that was almost a grin. "You sure sound like business, Shep. I'll get going."

He turned. Jane could hear him running heavily across the gallery, and the thump of galloping hoofs announced his departure at top speed. Jane turned to face her husband.

"What made him talk like that, Sheppard? He sounded as if it rested with you to say whether this thing stopped or went on."

He spread his hands. "Reckon that's what he meant, Jane. It does, in a way. You know that. Harley, he sort of takes his orders from me. I never made a secret out of that, did I? Up north I reckon they'd say I was a boss. It's a bad system, but it's the only one 't seems to work. And it don't work out so bad down here. County gets pretty good government, all around."

"Then you mean that you—you've winked at this illicit traffic in moonshine—till now?"

"Maybe. We can't hire enough deputies to keep these woods clear of stills, Jane. Eat the county up in taxes. We do what we can, and let the rest slide. Moonshining don't look wrong to most folks around here, and you can't enforce a law without the people want it enforced, no matter where you live. But we can control this business, more or less, and we'll control it this time. You'll see."

He went out abruptly. She heard him calling an order to a stable hand and followed him to the gallery.

"Have him saddle Silverheels, too," she said. "I'm going with you, Sheppard."

He glanced at her doubtfully for a moment. Then he shrugged.

"Reckon you'll go, no matter what I say. All right." He called again to the negro and went back into the house for his boots. By the time the horses were ready Jane was with him on the gallery. They cantered down the lane together.

"We'll go see if we can find Dave, first," he told her. "He's bound to be out hunting for Breck, but maybe we can locate him. And I got to try and make him believe the county'll handle this job for him. Dave's bound to get himself shot up if he goes after Breck alone. And we can't afford to lose him, right now."

"You think he'll doubt you?" "I know he will." He laughed. "Dave knows we ain't been any too hard on folks like Rufe Breck. But I want you should help me, this time, Jane. He might believe you. And I'd hate to let him get shot up over this thing."

Doubt persisted in her in the face of his seeming sincerity. She tried to tell herself that she was wrong, that her fear on MacIvor's account made her see danger to him in everything, but she felt that Gail's solicitude was unreal, that he was, for some reason of his own, playing a part. She tried not to think of the thing he suggested, but she kept finding in her mind a memory of the scene she had almost forgotten of MacIvor sprawling in the sand, seemingly dead, after that first encounter with Rufus Breck. And the thought made her less attentive to her husband's inflection and manner. The danger to David MacIvor was what

He rode a little ahead of her as the road narrowed, so that there was not room for two abreast, and there was no more talk until he drew rein suddenly, with a loud hail. She checked her mare beside him and caught a deep breath of relief at the sight of MacIvor riding toward them.

"Dave, we just got word of this business, and I rode over to tell you that the county'll handle it for you, this time. Ad Gail's on his way to Tyre right now to fetch Harley and some deputies. You can leave it to us and go back to your peach crop. We can't risk getting you shot up—not now, anyhow."

He chuckled on the last words. MacIvor's glance, after one swift, expressionless swerve to meet Jane's eyes, did not change or waver; he sat erect and still, his face set and stern. Jane saw the butts of two heavy pistols protruding from the holsters on each side of his saddle.

"I don't expect you'll believe me, Dave, after the way we been letting Breck alone, but I'm talking straight, all the same. I ain't pretending I like you, but I'm saying that I can't afford to get you shot. You know why, all right. And I can't afford to have Breck keep you from shipping your peaches, either. If the road goes bust—"

MacIvor spoke evenly, without expression.

"That's right. And I'm owning up that it'll be a sight safer for me and Harley than it'll be for you. Breck ain't out to fight the sheriff, but he's gunning for you, anyhow. You better turn around, Dave, and go back to your pack sheds."

"You seem confident, Gail. What makes you think that you can find Breck and his still?"

JANE felt the challenging implication of the tone and glanced at Gail with a stab of apprehension. There was a sense of enmity in the air, and the good humor of her husband's tone and look failed to reassure her against it. She was afraid of something, with no clear understanding of what it was; she could hear her pulses and knew that she was breathing unsteadily and fast.

"We can find it as quick as you, I reckon, Dave. You been hunting for it a right good while, anyhow." Gail laughed. "And Harley and I'd be apt to have better luck; we know more about bootleg whisky than you do."

"There is a word I do not doubt, at last," said MacIvor. "I know little of that trade, but a little is too much. And I will find Breck today myself."

"You're mighty sure of it, ain't you?" Gail shook his head. "Look here, Dave—there's no sense in your getting a bullet in your back over this thing. Let me and Harley handle it. Harley's paid to do it, and sworn to do it, too. It's no business for you."

"I make it my business, then. I shall lose two carloads of good fruit over last night's work, but I count it a small price to pay. For today I shall find Breck's still, Gail."

"You got a notion where it is, then?"

"No, but I know I am to find it. That seems no more than a boast to you, Gail; but it is true. I know that I shall find—"

Gail laughed softly. "I reckon I get you now, Dave. You figure you're going to get led somehow. You think somebody's going to take hold of your bridle and bring you spang to the right place?"

"Just that, Gail. And it seems folly to you."

"No, it don't." Gail sobered abruptly. "We got different words for the same notions, that's all. I got what I call a hunch that my luck'd take me where Breck's at. You got the same feeling, only you say that something else—Providence, maybe—is going to take hold of your bridle and lead you straight."

"And if I have that belief, Gail, shall I turn back and put my faith rather in you and the blind god you know as luck? Would you, in your turn, having at stake as much as I have, be content to leave the issue to me and what I call Providence?"

Gail laughed happily. "You're right, Dave. I wouldn't. Reckon you got to go through with it, feeling that away. But it's right funny, all the same—you and your Providence headed the same way as me and my luck! Makes me think of the place in the Bible where some old prophet got a fire going in wet wood after the heathen priests fell down on the job. Which way you aim to look, Dave?"

"I had thought of riding again along the swamp. But—"

"But you been over it plenty of times before now. No use wasting good time on it again. If either of us two is right, Dave, we don't need to worry it out by thinking. You don't believe in luck like I do. Used to find my lost marbles, when I was a kid, by chucking another up in the air and looking close where it come down. Know how I aimed to hunt for Breck's still, Dave? I was going to drop the reins on my horse's neck and let him go where he was a mind to—like this!"

He knotted the straps loosely so as to shorten them and let them fall on the clipped mane of his mount. Jane, staring blankly, wondered why she did not laugh. She had encountered, more than once, this curious belief in his luck that was Gail's only religion, but never had it impressed her as anything more than the surviving, shallow superstitions with which she was familiar—the habit which made intelligent men touch wood after a rash statement, or quarrel over the grain of the card table. Now, she saw, he was in deadly earnest—as earnest as MacIvor could have been. And, glancing at MacIvor, she saw that the nonsense was as serious to him as to Gail. His eyes did not move from Gail's; there was no relaxation of the hard lines about his mouth.

"You have faith in your luck, Gail. And that is better than no faith at all." Slowly he gathered the loose reins and knotted them as Gail had done. "Your plan is good. I will follow it."

Gail nodded. "I reckoned you would, Dave." He twisted in his saddle to glance at Jane. "Must look plumb crazy to you, Jane—both of us."

She shook her head. In the still shadow of the pines it was easy to slip back into the mental state of the people who had seen mystery in just such silent spaces as these. She tried to reassure herself by reason; it was all pure folly. Neither chance nor God could be harnessed to a man's desire and purpose. And yet—she lifted a hand to her throat as MacIvor's horse started deliberately forward, as if in obedience to a command. It was natural enough—her own mare would not have stood half so long without the restraint of the bit—and yet she found it now significant and terrifying. Gail's horse followed a pace or two behind; and, still keeping a tight rein, Jane let the mare go after the others.

They rode in silence, in this wise, for perhaps two furlongs. Here the track forked, one branch leading back to the Gail house, the other swerving off through the scrub and keeping to the ridge that overlooked the brake of reeds and marsh plants that flanked the swampy branch. Here both MacIvor's horse and Gail's turned to the left without pause. Jane felt an absurd thrill of something like fear. Gail's horse, on the right of MacIvor's, would have taken, by habit, the right hand road over which they had just come, the road that led him back to his stall, but, from behind, Jane saw him turn at the left sharply, as if a hand had jerked unkindly at the bit. And yet Gail's hands rested easily on his thighs, and the knotted lines were halfway to his horse's ears.

She kept a few paces to the rear, mechanically restraining the mare's impatience while she tried to persuade herself that she was silly to attach even a momentary significance to the accident, that it was nothing but superstition that made her doubt the outcome of this fool's errand. She knew it was nonsense, and yet, as she repeated the word in her thought, she discovered an obstinate contradiction that would not hear reason. Something had made those horses turn from a familiar, traveled road to this vague cart track along the ridge; something led them now past successive forks where the casual wanderings of wood carts had left rutted trails between the scrub oaks and young pines; something—

THE trail dipped almost to the swamp and climbed again; it turned aside to cut off a wide bend in the branch and emerged a quarter mile farther down the stream, to bring her suddenly into a remembered setting. Below, where the stream narrowed between firmer banks, she recognized the word where she had knelt to drink that day when chance had shown her Rufus Breck's liquor jugs hidden under the inkberry bushes. She caught her breath at what seemed a confirming coincidence; it was down there, beside that bit of shining water, that she had watched MacIvor fight with Breck at the beginning of the quarrel that had led to this pursuit. Of course, it was only chance—there was no possible connection between that affair and the course that the horses had chosen, and yet—and yet—

She stopped the mare with an instinctive pull of the reins, watching the two horses before her lower their bodies down the slant toward the ford. And again she had a thrill of fear as they turned sharply to the right into the faintly outlined track that led back over the ridge to the closed hunting lodge where she had come with Warren Borden—how many years ago? It wasn't possible that she was the same girl who had ridden down that lane—that less than a year had passed since she had faced Rufus Breck beside that ford! She had a sense of unreality, as it, knowing better the while, she allowed a vivid dream to frighten and convince her.

MacIvor and Gail rode side by side up the track; there was almost no sign of passage here and, following them, Jane herself she would not have known it for a trail a year ago. But the horses plodded on steadily, as if they were sure of their course; sometimes she saw Gail's pressed a little to the front, and again MacIvor would be a pace or two in the lead, but there was never much distance between them.

She saw that unless they turned aside again they would presently come to the hunting lodge, and the thought awakened memories of Warren Borden, of the girl who had come with him into the sandhills—a girl who seemed remote and strange to the Jane Gail who came back, now, to the scenes that she had avoided, without realizing it, ever since Miss Drummond had taken her away from them. That girl had laughed at David MacIvor; had almost hated him; had liked Sheppard Gail and believed him. Jane felt a quick impatience for her folly, as one resents the stubborn blindness of a friend.

She saw the horses turn again and leave the trail for one even less visible; it seemed at first that there was no track here, and her skepticism revived; she was disposed to be scornfully amused at the superstition which the men seemed to share. Neither God nor luck could be hired as a guide, she told herself. The whole affair was silly, stupid; the horses were wandering at random, no more.

For perhaps a quarter of a mile they rode between the young pines, veering away from the buildings in the clearing. She was glad of this. The thought of the lodge still repelled her; she did not want to revisit it, to revive her dulling memories of the last few hours there. She saw the men draw rein and came up with them. The horses stood in a gap between dogwood thickets, and beyond them, a few yards away, she could see a square, solid structure of logs and clay, its roof in sagging disrepair but the walls still stout and plumb.

It startled her. She had not known there was any building here, within easy distance of the lodge; she guessed that it belonged to the camp; something in the construction seemed to suggest that it had been built at the same time and by the same men who had erected the lodge itself.

"Raeford's kennels," said Gail, softly. "I'd plumb forgot they were still standing. Hated to have his hounds close to the house, Raeford did. Wonder what made the horses come this way—looks like we wasted our time, Dave."

MacIvor lowered himself deliberately to the ground and took his pistols from their holsters. Jane saw that his face was strangely hard, even for him.

"You should know the smell of mash, Gail," he said, quietly. "We have wasted no time. The still is yonder. Rufus Breck is shrewder than I thought him."

Jane caught the sour smell of fermenting grain and held her breath as she glanced at the building. Above the crude chimney she saw the air bend and tremble, though there was no smoke.

"Be careful, David! He must be there now! He'll shoot."

MacIvor seemed not to hear. He strode straight to the slab door and flung it open with the barrel of a pistol. She saw him go in and waited, in the hypnosis of fear, for the sound of shots. But instead there was only a crash of metal on metal, and, as she urged Silverheels closer, she could see, through the open doorway, that MacIvor had found an ax and was using it on the copper coils of the worm. Beside her she heard Sheppard Gail's quiet laugh.

"Too bad we both found it," he said. "Didn't prove a thing. Maybe it was luck, and maybe not. Won't ever know."

He slid out of the saddle and went to the door, leaning against the frame and watching MacIvor's methodical destruction of still and worm and vat. He chuckled again.

"Reg'lar fox, Rufe Breck. No wonder Dave couldn't ever spot him by the smoke. Been burning charcoal!"

MacIvor emerged, the ax in his hands, his face expressionless.

"He is no fool, as you say. I should have found this long ago. He must have moved it when the lodge was occupied."

"Luck was sure with us this morning, for a fact," laughed Gail. "Reckon you ought to say thanks, Dave. It was my notion."

MacIvor regarded him steadily. "I have not forgotten, Gail." His tone changed. "The man himself is not far off. There was fresh fuel on his fire."

Jane started. "Let's not stay here, then. He'll try to shoot you."

MacIvor glanced at her. "You should not have come with us, Mrs."

The Marvelous Marco

A Blue Ribbon

walk as if she were blindfolded," Marco continued.

"I've noticed that, too. Funny, ain't it?"

"Do you happen to know where they are stopping, Ben?"

Yes, Ben happened to know.

That night a note came to Ben via messenger and the doorkeeper, asking him to drop in on Marco at his hotel, on his way home after the show. There would be a bottle worth opening. So, trudging the beaten way of friendship, Ben obeyed.

He found Marco still deep in the subject of Maximilian and Miranda. He also found him with a tremble of excitement in his voice and tight, cruel lines at the corners of his mouth. A fighting look, Ben thought it.

"I've seen her close," he announced. "I waited at the desk of their hotel until they came to get their key after the matinee. . . . Their key!"

"There is usually only one key," Ben said dryly.

"We met eye to eye, and she looked through me as if she were in a trance. That one look was enough. I've got it!"

"Sure you have. Got it on the brain," soothed Ben. "You're going nutty over this fellow Max and his gal. Drink up and forget it."

"No code. No wires. No plants. Remember that. And those fixed, wild eyes. Can't you guess, you fat-head? If there were any professional ethics in this business Maximilian the Miraculous could be charged with criminal malpractice. That girl is hypnotized!"

Ben averred, in a bored manner, that hypnotism was all bunk. And anyway, if so, what of it?

"All bunk, eh?"

Marco picked up a small mirror from the chiffonier and began to play with it in an absent-minded manner. A swift little gesture sent a flash of light, reflected from one of the lamps, across Ben's eyes.

"You are at home," he heard a terribly dominating voice saying. "You are in your own room, ready to go to bed. You are taking off your shoes."

Presently Marco touched him lightly on the forehead. He straightened up in his chair out of a stooping posture, looked around in a puzzled way, and then observed sheepishly:

"You must have talked me into a cat nap. How the devil did that shoe of mine happen to drop off?"

"It happened to drop off, Ben, because hypnotism is not all bunk. You are a very easy subject. If you could sing Max might be able to use you in his act."

After Ben had been convinced that what had happened was not due to his own weariness of the flesh, nor to the uncanny power of the large drink of whisky he had swallowed—all of which took some time, for Ben was stubborn—Marco went back to his obsession:

"I tell you the woman is hypnotized. In her hypnotic trance, apparently, she is delicately responsive to everything, every idea and emotion, in the mind of her partner. He does not have to communicate the idea by speaking. It is a true case of complete telepathy from the dominant to the sensitive. Amazing, yes. Almost miraculous, to use his own word, but not outside science. A very rare case, nevertheless. It interests me tremendously. It should be reported to the Society for Psychical Research."

"In other words, Marco," Ben belied gleefully, "you've got to hand it to Max in spite of your professional jealousy!"

"For a vicious use of accidental power over a highly disorganized personality? Hardly. I say his methods are criminal. He not only keeps her under hypnosis for twenty minutes twice a day in his exhibition, which is harmful enough, but he seems to keep her under nearly all the time. He is either stupid or evil—and I suspect he is both."

"THE hypnotic trance is a form of insanity, Ben. It means that your real self, the thing inside of you by which you are able to face life according to the terms of nature—or the will of God, as you choose—is divided into two parts. That splitting off is the place where sanity ends and insanity begins. Do you know where Miranda will end if this thing, this hellish quackery of a clumsy showman, goes on much longer? In a madhouse!"

Ben pondered upon this prophecy. Then he remembered he had heard, in back-stage gossip, that Miranda had tried to kill herself several times during the year and a half she had been with Maximilian.

"So? That is likely enough," Marco answered. "Now I will tell you something else. That blank, far away expression in her eyes is not altogether the look of hypnosis. It is worse. The man is undoubtedly not adept enough to keep her under his full hypnotic control all the time. That would be a greater strain than his shallow, vain personality could stand. His own will is not equal to the task. He needs something else to break down her resistance in the periods when her subconscious self is fighting back toward normality. Some artificial destroyer of the will. Something that can be used quickly and secretly. So, I firmly believe, he is giving her drugs."

Ben's cynicism vanished at last. "Prove it," he roared, "and I'll brain him with a stage brace in full view of the audience!"

"You leave this in my hands," Marco decreed.

Marco did not wish to disturb the ritual of his profession any more than was necessary. He waited, therefore, until the following Saturday night, which marked the last performance of the week's bill.

Maximilian went up one aisle as usual that evening, and Miranda responded to his suggestions with her customary accuracy. To reach the aisle down which he was in the habit of returning to the stage he was compelled, by the architecture of the theater and the fact that the house was filled with playgoers to the back wall, to pass out into the foyer—a narrow corridor, ornate with fancy marble, rich tapestry, and showy paintings. At that hour this space was usually empty, for the smart looking octo-noon girl ushers in charge of the aisles that opened upon it would be gossiping in the ladies' cloakroom, the house manager would be settling up the accounting of the day in the box office, and the front doorman could be found in the outer lobby enjoying a cigar and contemplating the street traffic.

The heavy metal leaves of the first aisle doorway closed behind Maximilian. After ten seconds of eclipse in the corridor he was scheduled to appear in the other doorway, when he would continue his interesting exhibition.

But the pause that evening was longer than usual. Miranda gave it emphasis by suddenly saying, in an agitated voice:

"I cannot hear him any longer! He is no longer there! What has become of him?"

A murmur ran through the audience, a rustle of mild curiosity like a sudden gust of breeze through foliage, and heads began to crane back towards the exits.

At that moment the second door opened and a man appeared in it.

But he was not Maximilian. That miracle worker was resting easily on the marble floor of the corridor, in deep unconsciousness. The contused swelling at the back of his head might easily have been made by the brightly gilded oak frame of a gaudy painting—subject, "Carnival in Venice"—which had broken away from its hangings and lay athwart his shirt front. If not by that, then by some other blunt, heavy instrument.

Down the aisle, instead of Maximilian, came another wizard in evening dress, with a jaunty professional air. None other than Marco himself.

"I regret to announce, ladies and gentlemen," he proclaimed, "that the Miraculous Maximilian will be unable to complete his performance. He met with a slight accident in passing through the corridor, but will soon be himself again. Under these circumstances I trust you will permit me to replace him."

HE was recognized as the Marvelous Marco by many, and applauded as such.

"I cannot hope to compete with Maximilian in his exhibition of telepathy, even if this gifted young woman and I were en rapport in soul speech," Marco continued glibly as he approached the stage. "But I shall endeavor to persuade her to tell us how she acquired the gift. That would be interesting indeed, and an appropriate climax for this brilliant engagement."

Another round of applause greeted him as he crossed the orchestra pit and mounted the little stairway to the stage. Everything was going as if rehearsed. Only the unwarned Ben, at his invisible post of duty, was showing signs of panic, and his frenzied pantomime and empurpled visage caused Marco to throw him a cool word of consolation:

"I will give you the cue for the curtain at the proper time, Mr. Stage Manager."

Marco took Miranda's hand and led her, in the grand manner, to a chair facing the audience. He stood behind it, and began to pass his fingers over her forehead gently, with an upward stroke across and above her bandaged eyes. Her stiff, strained pose gradually relaxed. Then he spoke to her.

"Miranda, he has gone."

"Yes, he has gone," she repeated.

"There is nothing to be afraid of. You are not frightened."

"No, I'm not afraid."

"You are going to wake and forget. But first you must tell how it is that you know what songs are in other

How Conscious Auto-Suggestion Drove Fear, Worry, Sickness And Gloom Out of My Life

"I was a hypochondriac,—the doctor's name for one who has gloomy, melancholy thoughts about his own health. Slangy people called me a 'gloom' and a 'kill-joy'. I was never happy. My worries about my health and a hundred other things kept me in the dumps all the time. My sky was full of lowering clouds that oozed despair. I was mentally and physically sick."

"Then one day a friend handed me a little book, 'The Philosophy of Conscious Auto-Suggestion,' saying, 'Read that and tell me what you think about it.' I had read only a few lines when I became deeply interested. I read the book from cover to cover and then read it again. When I had finished the world seemed brighter and I felt happier. I decided to make the philosophy of this book part of my life. Today I am free from care and worry,—happy."

confident and unafraid. I go forth each day with quiet determination and return each night tranquil, self-confident, happy and satisfied. Neither my health (I am as well as a human being can be) nor anything else worries me or causes a gloomy thought. I now live more in a single happy hour than I lived under the old conditions in a whole gloomy year. Health, happiness, courage, peace of mind, all are mine in an abundant measure and I owe it all to The Philosophy of Conscious Auto-Suggestion. H. J."

Note: If you would like to have, free of charge, a copy of the book that made such a remarkable change in the life of Mr. Z., send your name and address to the New York State Publishing Co., 18 Archer Bldg., Rochester, N. Y. It will be sent to you without cost or obligation.—(adv.)

Gail. You are right. We will go. There is a risk."

CALL sprang back to his saddle in a single, graceful motion. MacIvor lifted his weight slowly, and they rode away, as they had come. At the trail to the camp Gail paused.

"Did you think to look for liquor, Dave? Strikes me that Rufe would be apt to have some hid up. His stuff was always aged a mite before he'd sell it."

MacIvor shook his head. "There was no sign of it in the cabin. But it is likely, as you say, that he has hidden a store of it somewhere. I will find it later. There is no need to search now, and Mrs. Gail is with us."

"That's right. Reckon we better get her safe before we go looking for more trouble." Gail nodded. "We can cut across past the camp and get home quicker than if we ride around the way we came."

He turned his horse toward the lodge, and MacIvor followed. Jane repressed an impulse to object. After all, it was silly to feel so about the camp. She said nothing during the few minutes that passed before they came out in the clearing. The closed lodge, its windows sealed with board shutters, gave her a pang of melancholy. She turned her glance from it quickly. But MacIvor checked his horse.

"The weeds are trodden," he said, pointing. "See—here is a path to the door."

He slipped to the ground and led his horse toward the porch. Gail hesitated. Jane saw him glance from MacIvor to her, and again to MacIvor, as if in doubt.

"Shucks, Dave—that don't mean anything. Negroes, likely—seeing if they's a way inside."

MacIvor stood without turning. "No negro would come here, Gail. They think the place is haunted, you know. It would be a safe hiding place for aging liquor, and Breck has proved himself no fool." He bent over the clumsy padlock which closed the outer door.

"See!" He twitched the chain, and it came free in his hands, the staple dangling at one end like a drawn tooth. He pulled back the door and tried the inner one. It was not locked. He went inside. Jane sprang down from her saddle, drawn suddenly by a sense of panic. She was afraid to be out here, with MacIvor in the house. She half ran after him, Gail following.

The hall was in a half-light from the open door, but the rooms beyond were dark. Jane could hear MacIvor walking in the kitchen wing and moved after him. She found him tumbling in the storeroom off the kitchen.

"I was right. He has been storing his liquor here. There are jugs and a barrel."

"Better open a shutter, Dave. Can't see a thing in here." Gail spoke from behind Jane. She felt a strange constraint in his voice. MacIvor straightened. In the faint light from some gap in a shutter Jane could see his face dimly, and she felt her nerves draw tight as he turned to Gail.

"Gail, I was waiting for that word. It was well thought of—as well thought of as the rest of your morning's work. I was not sure, till now, what was in your heart."

"I don't get you, Dave. All I was after was to help you locate Breck's still—"

"And you found it, fast enough, when it matched your pleasure to lead me there."

"Oh, I see now. You want to make out I knew where it was at all the time! Reckon some folks would think so, but I didn't look for you to do it, Dave. I know it was just luck that carried us to the kennels, but I had a notion you'd figure it was God." He laughed, thinly. "Looks like you ain't got as much faith as old Elijah, Dave."

"Gail, you have shrewd wits, but you take all men, except yourself, for fools. Did you think I could not see you touch my horse with your boot when we sat waiting to try yonder plan of yours? Did you think my eyes so blind that I could not mark how you guided your own beast at each turn with the trick of the knee? Could I not see you choose the path at every fork?"

Gail laughed again. "Seeing things, Dave! What for would I go making a fool out of myself? If I knew where Rufe had hid up his still I could have gone straight there, couldn't I?"

"I wonder, Gail, if you could go straight to any goal. But I do not wonder that you chose the crooked path to this one. Luck, you say? I wonder how well you hold your faith in that luck of yours, Gail? Well enough to stand here, beside me, when I throw yonder shutter back? It was well planned, Gail—to let me find Breck's still and stand by to see him kill me, as you made sure he would. It was well thought of, when he did not shoot at once, to bring me here, so that he might have other chances. And it was clever, to propose, just now, that I open the shutter. Did you see Breck in the wood, Gail? Or do you hope that he waits out yonder, with his finger ready on the trigger?"

Again Gail laughed, but this time the sound was forced and strange and there was no mirth in it.

"You're dreaming, Dave, or crazy. Rufe Breck wouldn't shoot."

"Gail, for your own purposes you proposed a trial between gods, this day, between your master and mine, believing in neither of the two, your tongue in your cheek as at a jest. You will find either of those two ill to challenge, Gail. Stand here, as I stand, and see."

Before Jane could cry out, he had leaned forward and opened the wide, single leaf of the shutter. A broad beam of sunlight flooded in on the two men and so closely on its coming that it seemed to Jane to be a consequence and part of that sudden illumination, a spiteful, echoing noise sounded in the clearing. She saw Gail sway backward, his hands outspread and groping. Then, as MacIvor reached toward him, he sank to his knees.

"Mighty poor shooting for Rufe Breck," she heard him say. "Missed you, Dave—missed clean."

He slipped from MacIvor's hold and lay still, grotesque, incredible, on the rough floor. Jane heard remote noises, shouts, the beat of hoofs, a clatter of shots, all at some infinite distance. She tried, as if in some benumbed dream, to lean down and touch the huddled figure at her feet, and could not. MacIvor knelt and fumbled for a pulse. Steps echoed in the outer rooms, a loud hail, and Harley came in, breathless.

"We got Breck—claims he done killed Shep." His voice stopped short as he stared at the group. Jane was vaguely aware of a compassion as she saw the honest sorrow in his brick-colored face. She seemed to stand outside of it all, to have no part in it.

MacIvor touched her arm and the contact startled her to a sudden clearness of understanding. She yielded to the guiding pressure and walked before him to the sunlit cleanness of the gallery.

"I must wait here," he said. "There will be much to do. It would be best if you ride home. You will not be afraid?"

Again she bore the straight glance without flinching.

"I shall never be afraid again," she said.

with his waning strength. In the olden days the killing iron or lance was used in dispatching the animal; now the heavy rifle is frequently employed. Very often the frenzied animal tears out the steel point of the toque and escapes, bearing with him the harpoon point and seventy-five and even a hundred feet of highly prized rawhide line.

Foot by foot the infuriated but weakened animal is drawn nearer to the edge of the ice. This playing of a two thousand pound animal on the end of an incredibly small rawhide line is perhaps the most exciting and thrilling part of the life of a Smith Sound native. One of several things may happen. The line may break, the toque might rip out of its hole, the ice may break beneath the Eskimos. There are traditions of men who have lost hands, feet and even lives by becoming entangled in the rapidly running line, being drawn into the sea.

At length the battle is over. The panting, sweating Eskimos are un-mindful of ice-covered trousers, of frozen, hardened mittens, of eyebrows, eyelashes and streaming hair white with frost. They laugh and yell and dance with joy, for days of hunger are behind them.

With their pointed knives they clip an eye in the surface of the ice and cut two holes in the thick skin of the neck of the walrus. These slippery holes serve as blocks through which is reeved the strong rawhide line. Long before white man was educated in the laws of mechanics the polar Eskimo ingeniously rigged his tackles so that every pound of pull resulted in six pounds of work done.

Within a few minutes the great bulk of meat is pulled out of the water on to the surface of the ice. Work which the novice would easily consume hours in accomplishing is done in a few minutes. A slash here and a cut there and the body falls to pieces of its own weight. No skilled home surgeon ever had a better knowledge of the human body than every Smith Sound native has of the animals of the north. Under his hands a walrus is apparently boneless, and what is more, delicious just as it is!

As he cuts he eats, a tid-bit here, another there. Even clams from the stomach.

Very little is wasted. A large shallow hole is cut in the surface of the ice beneath the walrus, a catch basin for the blood. When finally sledges are loaded, the dogs are permitted to drink here before starting for home.

As the sledges approach the snow village children run out on the ice to meet them, each little one jumping on to the sledge of his or her daddy. But long before this every woman knew that we had been successful. Nothing can escape such sharp eyes. The general appearance of the sledge, the progress of the dogs, the actions of the drivers are all indicative of success or failure.

It is triumphal entry as we go bounding through the rough ice belt to the level ice foot.

It is evening. The day's work is done. Half naked we lie back among the furs of the warm bed. The soapstone pot suspended over the soft yellow seal oil flame is bubbling and boiling. The small of walrus pervades the snow house. The mother hums an old, old song, one that has come down through the centuries. All is well in this northern home.

The Amazing Crime

It made him feel as if he had just indulged in three dry cocktails in quick succession. The blood had mounted to his head and he was conscious of that sort of bodily limpness that may come with the first overstimulation. Here in the center of the city there was some slight activity, but not much. Then just in front of them a portly man with a red face, who had started jay walking diagonally across the street between corners, stopped suddenly and for no apparent reason directly in front of the car.

Shelby braked and swerved, came to dead slow and as she passed demanded angrily, "Are you tired of living, Mr. Long?"

Olivant, catching the dazed look on the man's face, thought his trouble must be synthetic gin, and said so.

"No," Shelby snapped. "I know him. He doesn't drink. Must be the heat."

As they drew up to the First National bank there was a good sized touring car standing directly in front of it. The driver had opened the hood and seemed to be looking rather stupidly at the motor. Shelby came to a stop with an impatient jerk just behind the car. She horned breaking a municipal ordinance with the privilege of position. Nothing noteworthy occurred.

"I'll go in," Olivant said, and stepped down. At that moment the screened door of the bank, a handsome conventional, modern edifice, swung open and a man came out carrying a big suitcase in either hand. He made his leisurely way down the steps and got into the car ahead. As he did so there came from around the corner—at least it sounded as if it were around the corner—such a noise as a worn bicycle tire makes when it bursts at a weak spot; not precisely a hiss nor yet an explosion, but merely a faint muffled report.

The ground floor corner of the bank was occupied by a small, up-to-date drug store with its elaborate soda fountain. As the man with the suitcases stepped into the car the screened door of the drug store flapped behind another man who had just come out. One hand was in his breast pocket, as if replacing a wallet. But Olivant, happening to glance in his direction, saw a faint wreath of smoke over his left shoulder.

It is doubtful if most people would have detected it, or, doing so, set any importance on a wisp of smoke emanating from a man coming out of a drug store. The unconscious cerebration of most people would have ascribed it to the last exhalation of a discarded cigaret.

But Olivant's mind was swiftly analytic, though few suspected it. To trace his sequence of mental rapid firing, there was something like this:

A rich little city bank at a hot day's period of pause. A man coming out with two valises—a waiting car and the driver's face in the motor and his hands in his pockets—a concussion of sorts followed by the appearance of another man who gave the singular impression of having just placed a lighted cigaret in his breast pocket.

The moral obligation of interference, if only to ask "How come?" and then apologize.

In Olivant's excuse it may be said that the curious mental confusion he had noted while sitting placidly in the car was intensified by his wrenching at the door and descent from it into the glare. Also, the rush of a quick suspicion appeared to have sent his heart whirring like a partridge. He was therefore by no means well set as he stepped across the sidewalk to intercept the man who had just come from the drug store and whose two hands were now swinging at his side. Olivant's rather vague intention was to lurch against him, as it giddy, long enough to lay his palm against the textile over that inside pocket.

But his hand never got that far. The right one of the other compacted instantly into a fist, swung up from his thigh, and caught Olivant under the chin. Not only was the blow a clean knockout, but there was a thrusting impulse behind it that carried Olivant's limp, sprawling figure directly under the front wheels of Shelby's car.

The Marvelous Marco

people's minds. You must tell what has happened to you. Speak. Then afterward you will wake and forget."

She began to talk in a thin, sad voice, which reached like a ghost to the farthest corner of the theater. It seemed as if a discarnate spirit were speaking, and with the gravity of a seance the audience gave her devout attention.

"I remember my home now, and my husband. It seems very long ago. I had quite forgotten them. . . . I had always loved and studied music, I could sing. I had ambitions. I hoped for a career on the stage, in opera, perhaps, when I had finished my training. . . . It happened by accident, while my husband was away. I met the man who calls himself Maximilian.

"There was a party in somebody's studio. . . . He was trying some tricks in hypnotism to amuse us. I let him put me to sleep, and then it seemed as if I remembered every song I had ever heard and wanted to sing them. When I woke they said it was wonderful. . . . He came to call on me several times, and persuaded me to repeat the experiment. Each time the song-memories filled my mind. The world seemed all music; it was heavenly. He said that if he only thought about a song without speaking its title, I would respond. . . . Then he told me about his plan for a vaudeville act and asked me to go with him. I refused. How could I go away with that man? . . . He made love to me, and we quarreled about it. Then he begged me to let him put me into the lovely singing trance once more, for the last time. . . . Since then there has always been a mist of music about me. Sometimes it would grow; then the fog would begin to lift. Then I would know I was in a strange place, and would try to escape. . . . But I would find him barring the way. I remember blows that stunned and medicines that stupefied me. I remember evilness and wretchedness of heart. . . . I cannot tell any more. I want to go back where I belong! I want to go home!"

With an outcry like a lost child's she broke into a fit of sobbing.

THEN a gesture of command from Marco brought down the curtain with an air of finality upon the act which the Miraculous Maximilian had started but did not finish.

Hysterical complaints, by a frizzy-haired miracle worker with a yellow diamond stickpin, to the effect that he had been brutally assaulted and his partner had been abducted, probably by a vaudeville performer named Marco, were callously received by the police. He was informed that he was under suspicion of having broken several laws with ugly names and still more ugly penalties, and that the intelligent thing for him to do would be to catch the first train moving in any direction.

Marco and Miranda went east together the next day—for the very excellent reason that she was his wife.

When she had disappeared, Marco told Ben, he had searched for her everywhere except in the right place, and all the while she had been almost under his nose, so to speak, in his own line of work, masquerading under a name that meant nothing to him. But for his professional vexation with the flamboyance of Maximilian, whose miracle he had several times refused to witness, he would have found her sooner.

He confessed to Ben that he himself was partly to blame for Miranda's misadventures. He also had practiced hypnotism upon her, in little domestic experiments for his own occult amusement, until she had developed into a high grade sensitive. He had thus made her an easy victim for the unscrupulous Maximilian. There was nothing for him to forgive, he declared, but much to forget. And the forgetting would be as easy for him as it was for Miranda.

As for the Miraculous Maximilian—"He vanished," Ben concluded. "He never turned up again on any circuit. He is one of the unsolved mysteries of this business. Maybe he could never find another girl like Miranda. Maybe Marco ran him down and killed him. Like a magician's trick. Presto, change!—and no evidence left behind. Marco could do it. I wonder?"

Mystery of Thibet's Vanished Lama

purchased at the Lamaserie, we said nothing about it.

"The next evening an old Lama we had seen playing in the temple visited us in the Lamaserie inn. He brought the rare Buddha statue to my wife, saying to her through an interpreter: 'Madame, I was told by a vision in my dream that this should belong to you. Although it is a rare relic of the temple, I am commanded to give it to you.'

"And this he did, refusing to accept the money we gladly offered him."

Of all the experiences Professor Roerich had in Thibet, his visit to the legendary Ghost Mountain and its triple-crested summit was one of the most interesting.

"It is really the Olympus of the east," he says. "Standing alone on the edge of a plateau of some ten thousand feet altitude, it creates wonder and astonishment in the minds of the onlookers.

"It seems to connect our tangible and materialistic world with a higher dimension. The aesthetic and spiritual sensation that a sight of this mountain gives is alone worth a journey to see it.

"There is an uncanny atmosphere about this mountain. When the other ranges lie glittering in the sun, its triple peaks are hidden in clouds.

"A part of the high mountain is always green, evidently due to hot springs on its top, and it remains seemingly immune from atmospheric effects.

"Sudden storms of great violence frequently occur in this vicinity. Hail and snow rage with a hurricane force, but there prevails always a calm on the green spots of the Sacred Mountain."

NO. 12— WORDS ARE CHEAP

By JANE CORBY

In Mousetown great excitement
And loudly every mouse complained;
Reason enough there was for that
In recent actions of the cat.
Each day a small mouse ventured out
And never more was seen about!
"We'll have to act," the mice declared,
"The lives of Mousetown must be spared."
"Let's hang a bell," a young mouse said,
"Around the neck of her we dread."

"A fine idea!" the others cried,
"For then the sly old cat can't hide.
We'll hear her coming long before
She even steps inside the door!"
Old Grandma Mouse laughed out, "Tee! Hee!
A very fine plan that would be;
But who will bell the cat, my friends?
Your talk is big, but there it ends.
For words are cheap; to act, I fear,
Upon your words would cost you
dear!"

A HORSE RACING GAME FOR A CHRISTMAS PRESENT

"My horse is ahead!"
"Mine is catching up, though!"
It's an exciting game, this horse race pullaway, which can be made for a Christmas gift. Games are always popular in the wintertime, and this one, properly done and painted up, makes a present any boy or girl would be glad to receive.
We will begin work on the race track, which is made of three pieces of wood 3-4 inch thick, 1 inch wide and 34 inches long, with two supports at the ends. One of these end pieces is 3-4 inch by 1 1-4 inches by 6 inches, and the other is 3-4 inch by 1 1-2 inches by 4 3-4 inches. Study the top, front and two ends and see if you can discover how to assemble the parts. Shingle nails may be used for the assembling.

Make Frame Next

Now make the frame to support the crank shafts on which the spools are fastened. The holes in the uprights to receive the crank shafts must be accurately located and bored straight so the shaft will not bind in the bearing. It is suggested that the centers for the holes be located on both faces of the uprights—using a square to square around the piece, and then doing the drilling half-way through the piece from each face. Heavy wire is to be used for the drill.
Locate the spools on the crank shafts so that the center of the spool comes over the slot between the pieces making the race track. The spool is to be wedged on the shaft. This can be done by making a soft wood plug to fit the hole in the spool and splitting it down the center so a small groove can be cut for the wire. Place the wire through the spool and drive the two pieces of the split brushing in the hole of the spool, making the spool fast to the wire. A pair of pliers may now be used to bend the crank and the small end to hold the shaft in place in the uprights.

Adjust Shafts

A little adjusting and fitting will be necessary when bending the ends of the shafts, so the spools will be properly located. The crank arms should both be the same length—about 1 3-4 inches. Assemble the shaft frame and nail to the proper end of the race track.

Now we are ready to make the bold racing steeds. Select two pieces of 3-8 inch wood, with a coping saw or jack-knife cut out the two horses, the pattern for which should be traced on the wood. Make the two 4-inch runners and the 2-inch guides. Assemble the runners and guides first and then brad the runners to the horses. Glue is not necessary, but if you have some at hand a thin coat applied to all the joints will add to their durability. Drill a small hole for the tail in each horse and insert a heavy piece of twine or a match stick for the tail.

Spools Must Match

The spools, of course, must be the same size, and the strings fastened to them must be of equal length. One end of the string is fastened to the spool and the other end of the string is fastened to a tack in the front end of the runner. Try out the game and see that all parts work easily. Paint of different colors will add to its attractiveness. A little oil or soap rubbed on the sliders, guides and track will make the parts move more easily.

A finish line should be made across the track about two inches from the front of the shaft uprights. The horses are set at the end of the track and at a signal each person turns a crank. The one who draws his horse across the finish line first is the winner of this amusing "Derby."

FOUR MAGIC TRICKS TO MYSTIFY YOUR FRIENDS

Almost every fellow envies the mysterious magician who is constantly springing some fresh surprise and mystifying the audience by his capers. Every fellow can do many of these same tricks without very much trouble. I'll tell you how some of these things are done, as they have been explained to me by the professional magician, Maxwell the Great.

"First," cautions Maxwell, "never tell an audience what you are going to do because that gets them looking too hard and they are liable to see something which you wish to keep hidden. Never repeat the same trick the same way during the same performance. If you happen to have hard luck and give your trick away, don't get fussed, just make a joke out of it and get your audience laughing with you."

Talk Constantly

"When you start your performance, be as mysterious as possible and talk all the time so that the audience will be paying attention to what you are saying, no what you are doing."

Here are three tricks of the Hindoo Fakirs and the line of chatter to go with the tricks.

"Observe closely this miracle of the Hindoo fakirs," invites Maxwell. "You see on this table three glasses of clear water which I will name glasses one, two and three, or Mary, Annie and Minnie. I take glass one and pour a little of glass two into it and behold!—it becomes fiery red.

"Now, as I pour a little of glass three into the red, it becomes clear again." Here's what really happens: glass one is a solution of phenolphthalein, which you can get at a drug store, glass two is salt water and glass three is a solution of hydrochloric acid.

2. "With this simple little pocket handkerchief I defy the laws of nature because I place it over this lighted candle and it does not burn," says Maxwell. You can do the same thing if you prepare the handkerchief in advance, as Maxwell did, by previously dipping it into "water glass," a substance which is used to pickle eggs.

3. "Ladies and gentlemen, I will blow through this glass tube into this clear glass of water and lo, my fiery breath will turn it milk-white and cause a powder to settle on the bottom of the glass. Watch closely and see that I am blowing nothing but my own clear breath through the tube." To do this, do just as the magician did, but do not use clear water. He didn't. He used lime water and so must you.

Here's Baffling Trick

This makes one of the most effective card tricks I know. Know the fourth card from the top of the deck and then make a pretense of shuffling, but do not shuffle so that it will disturb the top four cards. This done, place the cards in fours, more or less equal, piles. Turning your back, invite a spec-

Grandfather's Chair Earns a Reward

"I do wish we'd get rid of that chair!" complained Barbara. "All the rest of the things in the room sort of harmonize, but that old chair is entirely out of place."

"I knew, dear," her mother answered, "but it's grandfather's favorite chair. He'd feel quite lost without it."

"It not only looks awful," moaned Barbara, "but it creaks just awfully. If you even run against it it makes the most horrible noise. Grandfather won't have it fixed, and it really is a disgrace."

Just then they heard grandfather's shuffling footsteps, so Barbara changed the conversation quickly. She pouted sullenly, however, when grandfather sat down in his chair, amid loud squeakings and groanings from that despised piece of furniture.

However, Barbara's mother said something to Barbara's father, who declared that Barbara really was right about it, and he'd try to talk grandfather into letting them buy a new chair.

Now, the old chair must have heard the discussion, for two nights later it found a chance to redeem itself.

It happened this way. The family had gone to bed early, as there was trouble with the furnace and the house had become quite cold.

Suddenly Barbara was awakened by hearing the voice of her father, whose room was at the head of the stairs, calling out, "Who's there?" Then the light on the stairs was switched on, and she heard a scrambling and banging downstairs. She hopped out of bed and ran to see what the excitement was. The rest of the family had already preceded her downstairs.

The living room was in disorder. In the center of it stood her father. "Whew! That was a narrow escape," he was saying. "Well, I'll have to look into the locks on those windows right away, that's sure enough."

On grandfather's chair lay a bag. "What's it all about?" Barbara asked excitedly.

"Burglars," answered her father sleepily. "They had the silver from the dining room and laid it down in here while the went through my desk. Luckily they put it down on this chair, and it let out an awful creak which I heard, as I happened to be awake. When they heard me they dropped everything and got away."

"Well," giggled Barbara, nervously, "I'll never make another remark about that chair. Poor old thing, it tried to prove its usefulness in the household and I think it has earned its reward."

The beheaded word is s-hoot.

The boy's name hidden in the sentence is "Fred."

The beheaded words are: T-hug, g-rave, c-ape.

The word-square formed is composed of the words: Play, lane, Anna, year.

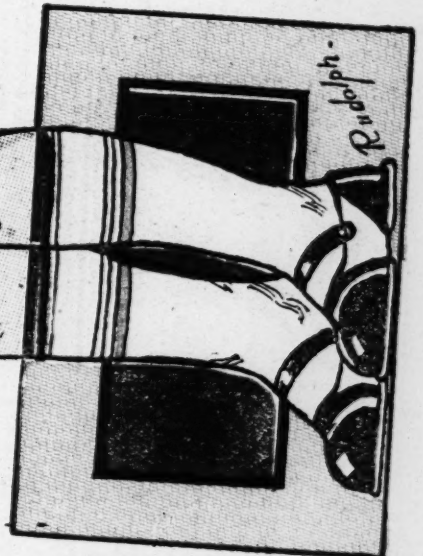

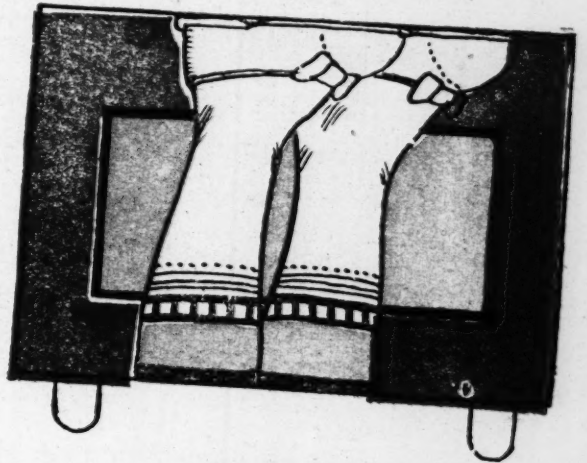

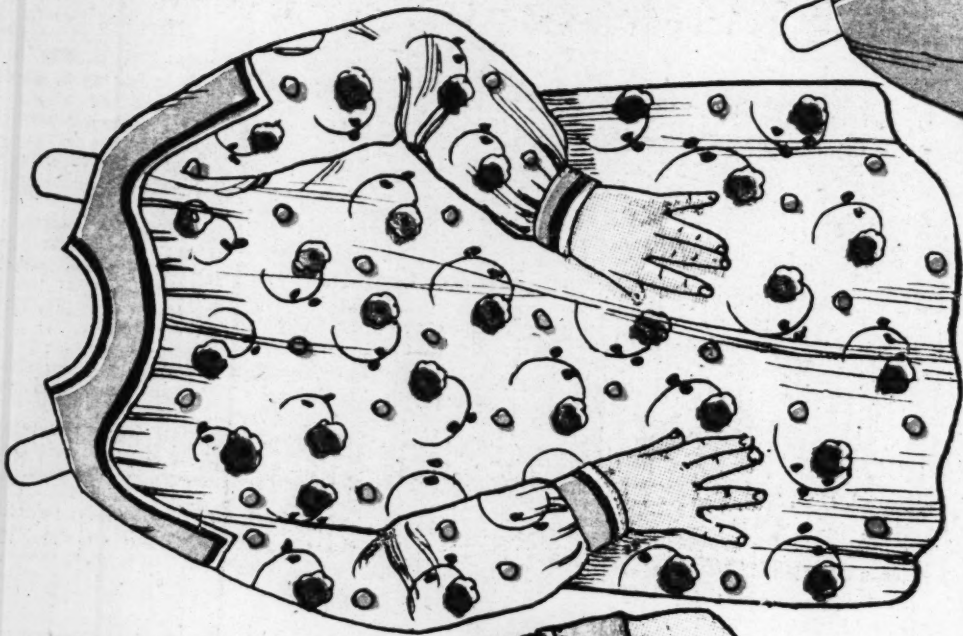

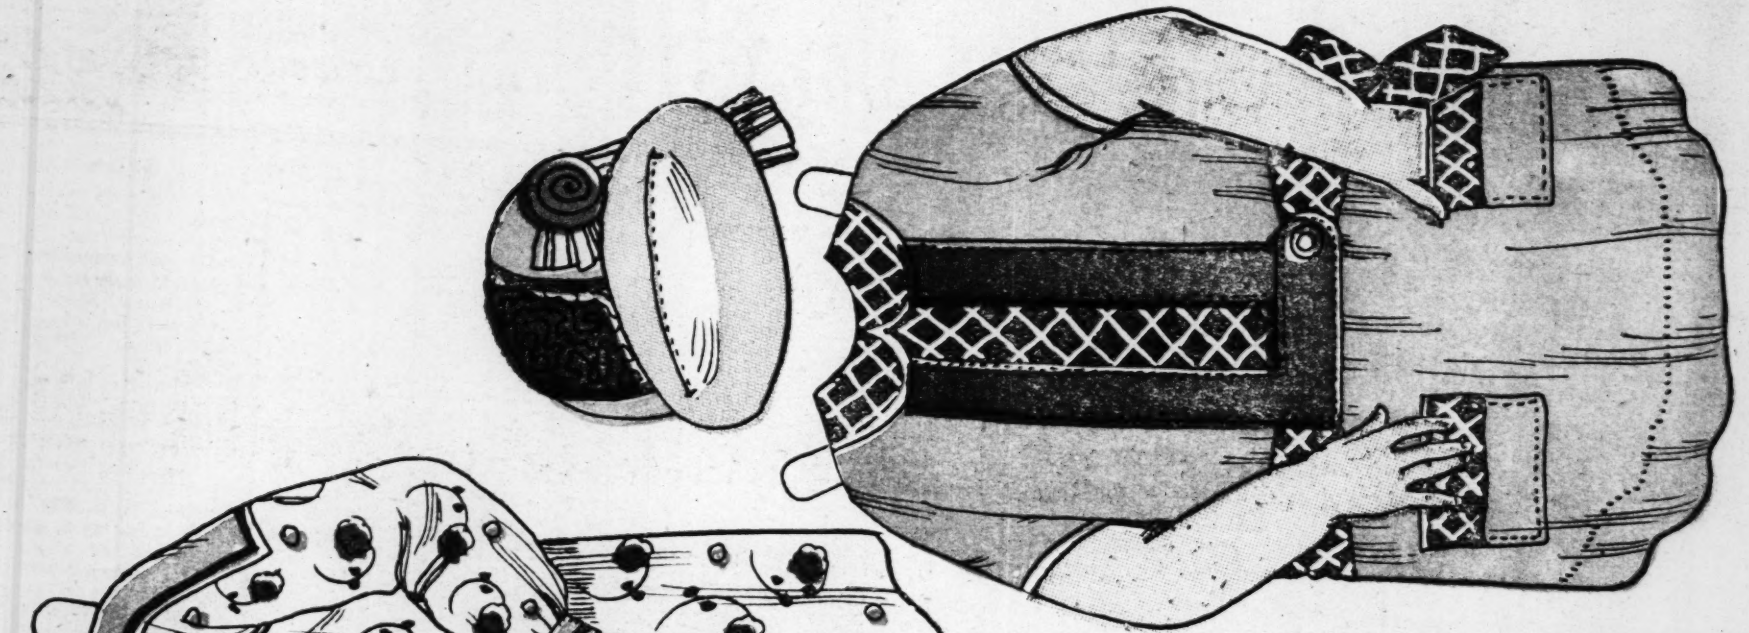

Form a word square from words meaning frolic, a narrow road, a girl's name and a period of several months.

tator to take the top card from the pile in which you know the fourth card and place it on or in one of the other piles. Invite a second spectator to repeat the same action. Do this a third time. The fourth time you are down to the card you know, so invite a spectator to look at this card carefully and bury it in one of the other piles. Now have some one shuffle the cards.

This done, turn over any two cards in the deck and make a pretense of figuring and then announce what card it was that the spectator looked at. Of course, you have known all along, but this must not be apparent to your audience, so put in plenty of hocus pocus.

IN SNOPPYQUOP LAND

WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUEER

Here's Oma Kayama, the Sheik of the Sahara, making an oasis out of his tootsies. "Sudden showers tonight and Friday," said the weather report, so Oma is helping out. He sits on the sand which is there—no, not "sandwiches"—turns his fact to the East, and says, "Let us spray."

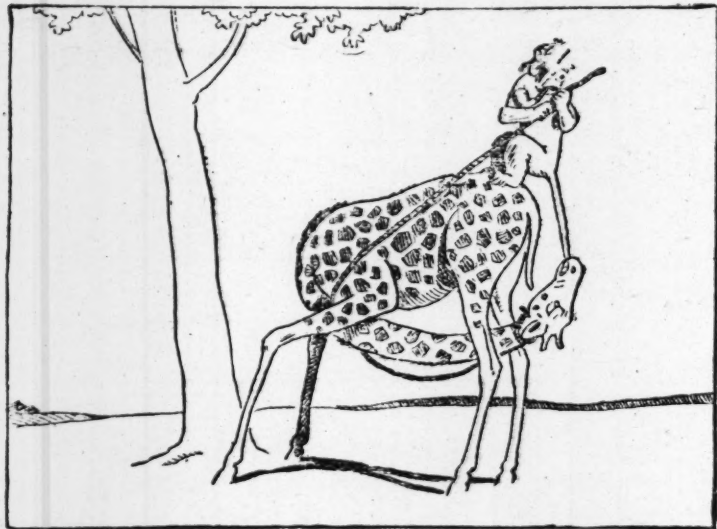

His nose understands, and a delicate shower of water is soon descending onto his tootsies. Being an idol with feet of clay, soon roses bloom where bunions fear to tread, and the Sheik has a lovely garden—"roses for toeses, watered by noses," you might say. Then again you might not.

Oma's plumbing may be said to be exposed, but he believes in "Saying it with showers." In the background you will see the little dog who tried to imitate the snoppysheik, and only grew corns instead.

THE DETECTIVE OF JUNGLELAND

BY MR. MONK

The Jungleland police had been wanting to get hold of a giraffe with a very black record, and decided to find him or perish in the attempt. I discovered the knave standing near a tree with a rope around his neck, so I quickly jumped on his back and seized the rope. This looked too simple for anything, I thought! All I had to do was to tie him to the tree and send for the police. But, just as I was about to do it, the giraffe began to tell me a story that brought tears to my eyes as big as walnuts. It seemed that he had tried to drown himself, but the water wasn't deep enough. Then he'd tried to hang himself, but he couldn't find a tree that was high enough—that was why he had the rope around his neck.

The giraffe by this time had so worked up my tender feelings that I was crying like a baby. Then, suddenly, before I'd time to become the stern Detective Monk again, he bent his long neck underneath his body and grabbed my tail between his teeth—I thought he was going to bite it off. "Let go!" I yelled, in great pain. "Not until you let go of the rope!" he retorted. "Let go of my tail and I will drop the rope," I said hastily. "Not likely!" the giraffe replied; "You first." So I had to let him go, after all. The chief said I was too slow to go to a snail's funeral. (Watch for more of Mr. Monk's adventures soon to appear on the Boys' and Girls' Page.)

ELEPHANTS OF NORTH AMERICA

Did you know that members of the elephant family once roamed in herds all over North America? Now we see elephants only in zoos and circuses, but the elephants who lived in this country long ago would have towered three feet above these circus elephants.

Those elephants were known as the mammoths. Their huge bones have been found in many places where excavating was done. Up in the ice country whole skeletons have been found preserved in the ice. That is how we know so much about these huge animals that vanished before white men came to this country—in fact, before the time of the Indian legend.

Many of these mammoths were covered with hair, which helped them to keep warm when they lived far north and also helped to save their skins from the teeth of their enemies. Their tusks were not like those of the elephants we see today, but were beautifully curved outward and upward. These wonderful ivory tusks were sometimes as much as thirteen feet long, which means that they would reach higher than the ceiling in your living room.

When a herd of these monsters set off to go somewhere, nothing could stop them. They could ford most rivers and swim the rest. If a tree stood in their way one of the mammoths would just stop a minute, wind his trunk around it, pull it up, and go on his way, after tossing aside.

All Weren't Hairy

In Mexico and the southern United States was another kind of mammoth which was not hairy, but was more like the elephant as we know it today.

Not only in North America but in Asia and Africa and Europe these huge creatures once made their homes. In Siberia one of them was found with the flesh and skin on it, just as it had died thousands of years ago. It was sealed up in the ice. Evidently it had slipped into a crevice and died. The ice had closed over and acted as a perfect refrigerator all those years. It even had a piece of grass in its mouth when it had slipped on the treacherous ice and fallen, ages and ages ago!

One of the great mysteries of the world is why these giant beasts disappeared. Perhaps the climate of the whole world became colder, perhaps—but no one really knows.

Peter Puzzle Says:

A letter of the alphabet, plus to punch off, plus another letter equals a bird of the woodcock family.

"Lionel and John Put a circus on. Reba, Jane and Beth Watched and held their breath."

What two animals are represented in this poem? One of them is found by transposing the letters of one word.

How can you make a slow horse fast?

What are the two hottest letters in the alphabet?

What is the difference between a buffalo nickel and an Indian head penny?

IN

The Chester Gump Contest WILL BE PICKED NEXT WEEK

Winners in both the grand prize race and the race for prizes to be given by the Atlanta Constitution will be picked next week and in a way that will give every boy or girl, no matter how old or young, an equal chance.

The Prize Announcements

Chester is back home now, having raced from Australia in the big Bim Blimp, and he has picked the prizes to be given to readers of the Boys' and Girls' Section of the Atlanta Constitution. Chester will announce three grand prizes for the United States and also all the prizes that The Constitution will give its boy and girl readers.

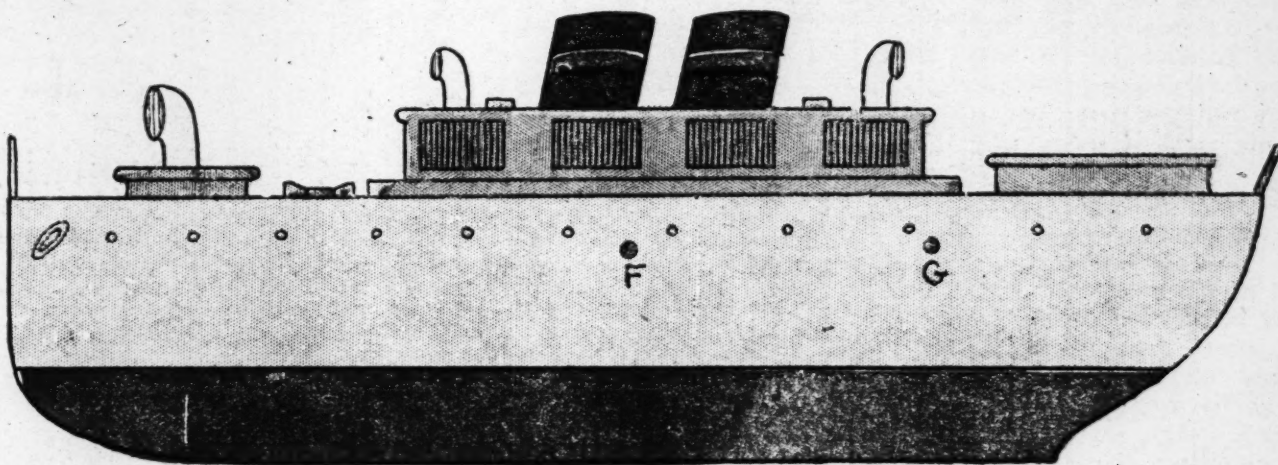

Chester knows the boys and girls are anxious to know what the prizes are, but he says to tell them to be patient for one week longer, and then they will know what the wonderful prizes will be.

Watch This Page

next Sunday for the list of prizes in the big contest and for the method by which the prize winners are to be selected. You will all agree that it is a novel way to pick winners, and you will decide Chester is a smart little boy to think up this way.

S O S! Set This Ocean Liner Afloat

Directions: Paste this page on rather thin cardboard and cut out the different sections on heavy outlines. On the background with the lighthouse cut out slit "I" and bend across horizontal dotted line. On the second ocean strip make a hole at "F" and bend at all dotted lines so that "A" will fall on "A" on the background, "B" and "B'" on the background, and so on, and paste all these flaps. You will then have a box-like affair when you look into it from above. On the liner make holes at "F" and "G." Take the small arm and fasten it to the liner from behind "G" of the arm through "G" of the liner by a paper clip. On the long arm bend backward at the dotted line and fasten "I" of the long arm to "I" of the short arm by a paper clip. Poke the rest of the long arm through the slit in the background. Fasten the liner loosely to the foreground (the front of your box) at "F" by a paper clip through the foreground and through the liner. Now, by pulling the long arm that extends through the slit at the back the liner can be made to ride the ocean waves.

SQUABBLE TOWN ADVENTURES

CHAPTER 2

The pleasant children who had gone to Squabble Town to teach good manners to as many of the folks as they could reach had first, you will remember, found a girl and boy who quarreled about some cookies that they had—and how they scowled and snarled! But our six missionaries told them nicely how they should divide their cookies evenly, until it seemed they would the next time they had cookies, then the six went on their way to look for other work that they could carry on that day.

It wasn't very long before they saw along the street a boy and girl who presently got near enough to meet. The boy remarked "good afternoon," the girl responded, too, but then whatever do you think that boy forgot to do? He never even made a motion toward his hat; instead he left it just exactly where it was, upon his head. "Oh, wait, my boy," the children cried, "there's something you forgot!" The boy stared at them rudely and replied, "Why, I have not!"

The little boy turned very red and squirmed upon his toes, and as another girl came by, straightway his headgear rose! For he at once removed it with a very pleasant smile, and the missionary children stood there watching all the while. "You see," one to the other said, "he always does what's right. He has been taught behavior, and of course he's very bright. He never does forget the rules of etiquette, you know, and he's courteous to ladies; that's why they admire him so."

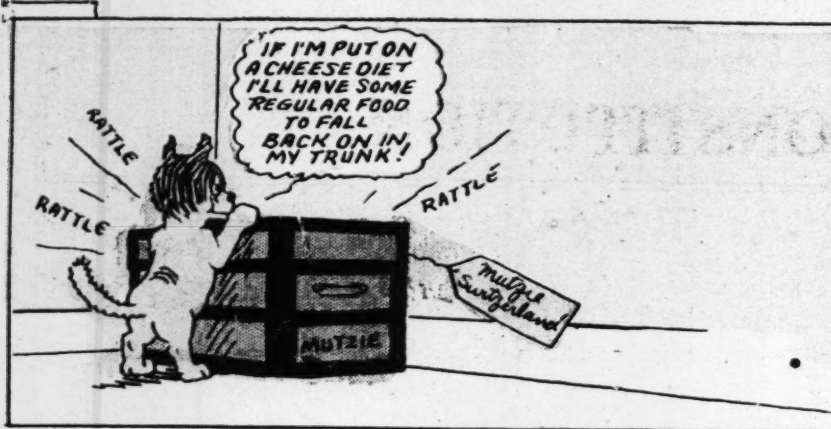

"You didn't take your hat off," said the children. "But," said he, "why should I? If I did, just think how cold my head would be." "Have you been taught no manners? Don't you know that it's polite to take your hat off to your girl acquaintances on sight?" "And should they?" asked the Squabble boy, "take off their own hats, too?" "My goodness," said the children; "no, that they never do!" "I don't see why I have to," cried the boy, "when women don't. And what is more, I'll tell you here and now that I just won't!"

"Now, now," replied the children, "you are joking, little boy! We know that you are so polite, to see you is a joy. Of course, you were just fooling when that little girl came by, and wore your hat to make her laugh—that's just the reason why. A manly-looking boy like you would never wear a hat when speaking to a lady, we're entirely sure of that! Why, you're a perfect gentleman, and gentlemen are never seen with their hats on when they speak to girls—oh no, not ever!"

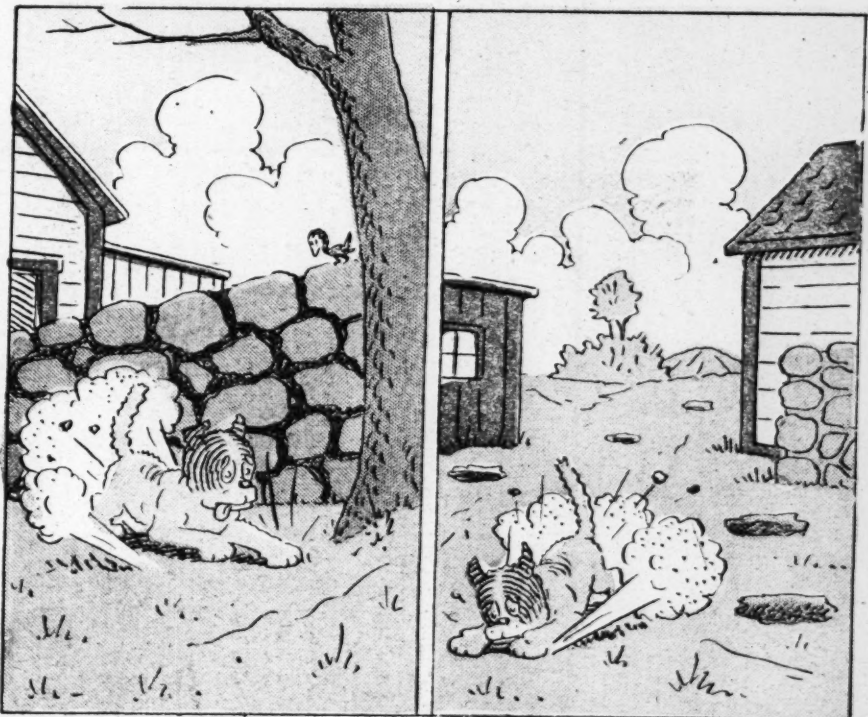

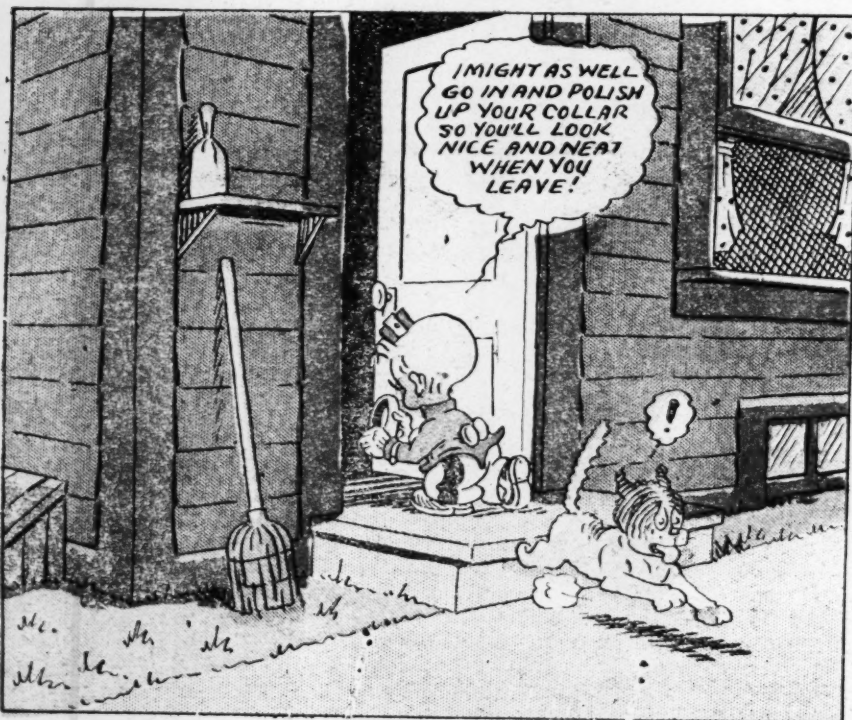

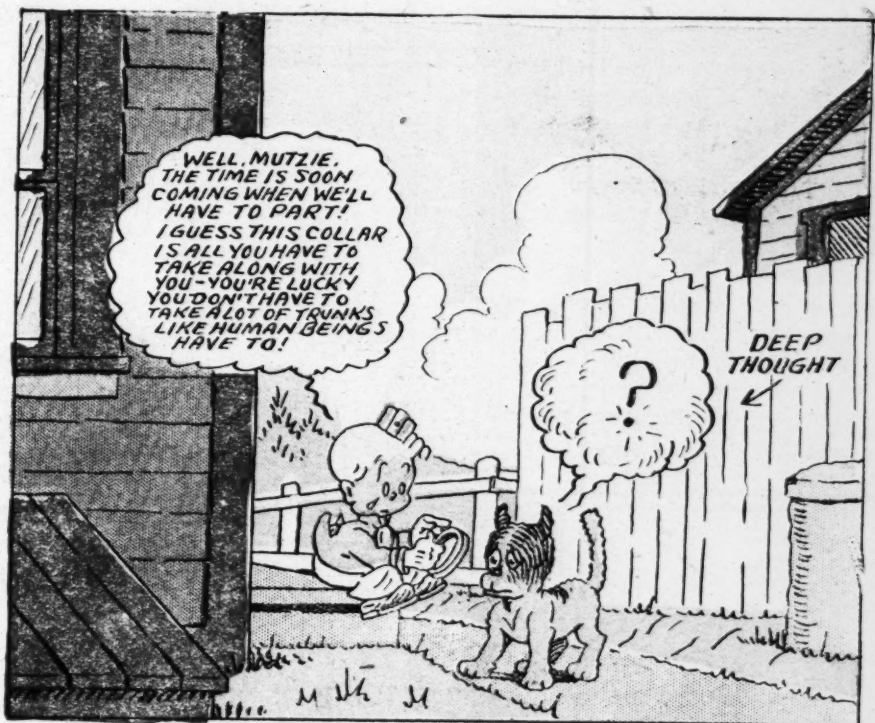

"A gentleman takes off his hat to show he has respect for girls, and not at all because he has to; it's correct to be extremely courteous to those who need protection, and girls are not as strong as boys, we know upon reflection." Then, to the boy they wished good day; they said, "It's been a joy to stop and have a chat with such a well-bred little boy!" "Good day," he answered pleasantly, and raised his hat again, while the children went on gaily, for they felt encouraged then!

(But next week I will tell you how their hopes were promptly dashed, for some other Squabblers came along and all their joy was smashed.)

MODERN RUSSIA

FROM PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN BY NOTED AMERICAN AUTHORITY

These are reproductions of camera snapshots taken by Dr. A. A. Johnson, who has made an intimate study of Russian conditions, having made three tours through that country in the past three years; first, officially for the Far East Relief organization and the last with American senators, whom he accompanied after the adjournment of the last session of congress, the party being given close official insight into Russian conditions. Dr. Johnson, after serving in the chair of agriculture and biology in the North Georgia Agricultural college at Dahlonega, where he married Miss Ellene Glenn, daughter of the president, Dr. G. R. Glenn, planned, organized and equipped the New York State institute of agriculture at Farmington, L. I., where he remained for nine years. He is considered one of the most noted American authorities in agricultural educational work. In another section of today's Constitution is a most interesting interview with Dr. Johnson on modern Russia, written by Pierre Van Paassen.

On the government demonstration farm at Chelyabinsk, Russia, women are among the hardest workers. All their tools are home-made and in this crew the only man is the one who operates the engine.

WELL EQUIPPED
Russian peasants when traveling always carry a large bag with provisions and clothing and wear the large headgear, which, oddly enough, is as cool in summer as it is warm in winter.

TWO JOBS
are the portion of this peasant woman in Vladikavkaz, Russia, who spins flax fiber while watching the drying of her grain.

A red soldier on guard wearing his Caucasian robe, which is a young tent that he sleeps in and uses when riding his horse.

THE SOUL OF RUSSIA
lives on music and provision is made for musical programs wherever possible. This is the open air theater at the club-house grounds at Chelyabinsk.

WHERE CZAR NICHOLAS WENT TO HIS DEATH
The house where the unhappy monarch of the Russian empire and his family are said to have been executed. It is now used for quartering government workers.

CONSIGNED TO SEA HE LOVED

When Sir Percy Scott, British naval hero, was about to die he expressed the desire to have his ashes put overboard. The waves have just closed over his watery grave, with the final marker about to be sent after the casket.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS WED 50 YEARS
Half a century ago John U. Lloyd made double wedding of two brothers to two sisters the basis of his work, "Stringtown on the Pike." Recently Mr. Lloyd hurried to Cincinnati to help them celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. They are, left, Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Souther, and right, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Souther.

Who is This Older Woman Whose Complexion You Guard?

You never see her—yet she is always with you. If you neglect your own complexion her skin also becomes sallow, blotchy and impaired with the unattractive lines of neglect. But if you give your complexion intelligent care, the loveliness you impart to your own skin will make her look years younger and more beautiful.

THIS WOMAN IS YOU—just as you will look in a surprisingly few years—homely or charming, whichever you choose.

Make this test today!

If you wish to see how beautiful you really can look enjoy a Crystal Bath Alcohol Massage. Feel the refreshing effect as it wakes up and beautifies your skin. It will clean the pores and free them from the day's accumulated impurities. Its antiseptic properties will prevent blackheads and blemishes. It will exercise the relaxed muscles, restore the youthful contour, stimulate circulation and bring out the color of roses to your skin.

Instant Beauty that Lasts!

A Crystal Bath Alcohol Massage will do more than give you instant beauty. Use it regularly and your mirror will reflect the astonishing improvement that comes with each application. When used on the body it removes even the slightest trace of perspiration odors. It relieves those embarrassing, unpowdered moments by reducing enlarged pores and by keeping the skin soft, beautiful and clean.

THE BEST REASON we know of for using Wesson Oil for frying is that it makes such a good salad dressing.

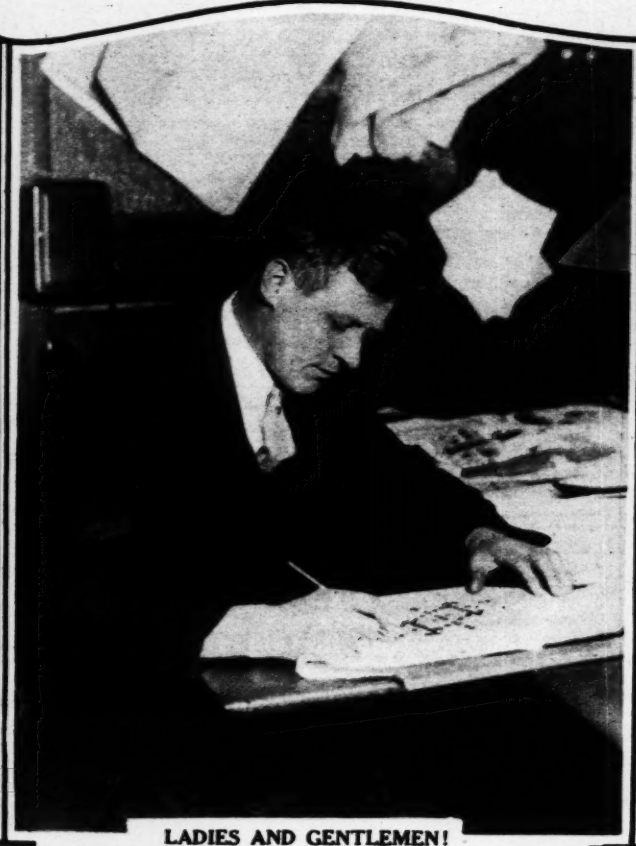

You need a fat as good as a fine salad oil to make fried food as good and as wholesome as fried food can be.

Then if you also use Wesson Oil for making cake, pie crust and biscuit—and you ought—you won't need any other fat (oil) in your kitchen.
